VETERAN STOCK DEALERS DRAW INSIDE PICTURE

All Tell Senate Group Short Selling Has Slump Effect.

PERCY ROCKEFELLER BARES OPERATIONS

Attributes Recent Decline of Prices to Alarms Over New Tax Bill.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Wall street had a quiet little "Black Friday" all of its own yesterday before the Senate banking and currency committee, when three experienced market operators turned the New York Stock Exchange inside out for a public autopsy on bear raiding.

Percy A. Rockefeller told of his own participation in pool operations touching Air Reduction, Lima Locomotive, Childs Restaurant and Alaska Juneau, and acknowledged a short position of "ten or twelve thousand shares" in various issues until about five weeks ago.

Matthew S. Brush, a vigorous and homespun sort of fellow, who, as nearly as he can guess, is a director in "about 50 or 60 corporations," whose personal long account in 1929 was placed at $15,000,000—and who inclines heavily toward a blunt and incisive realism—said "the in-and-out racket" was too fast for him, and explained in detail how one goes about "rigging the market."

Admit Short Selling Effect.

William B. Cravath, who relinquished his exchange membership in 1916 but still keeps in touch with the streets from Phoenix, Ariz., said talk of a "free market" in times of depression was ludicrous and urged a complete ban of short sales for a time.

All three witnesses acknowledged under cross-examination by William A. Gray, committee counsel, that short selling exerts a depressing influence on prices, but in the case of Mr. Rockefeller the answer was qualified by an insistence that the downward pressure was "very slight."

The hearing reached dramatic heights late in the day when Mr. Rockefeller, after an allusion to the tremendous losses suffered in the depreciation of his investments during the last two years, denied vigorously he would be a party to any stock market operation inimical to the national welfare.

Denies Bear Raiding Cause.

"My only hope," he said in a shaky voice, "is for things to come back, and as quickly as possible."

Previously he had characterized his losses as "terrific" and "terrible," and when pressed for an estimate, said the aggregate was "a good many million dollars."

He denied that the most recent wave of price declines on the exchange, which began about six weeks ago, had been caused by bear raiding and attributed the liquidation instead to alarms and uncertainty engendered throughout the country by legislative handling of the tax bill.

"I think people generally were greatly alarmed by the tax bill, and it had a great effect on the market," Mr. Rockefeller said.

Two Bear Raiders Missing.

The committee's unavailing search for two of Wall street's best known bear raiders was revealed during Mr. Rockefeller's testimony. Thomas E. Bragg and Bernard E. Smith, whom Mr. Rockefeller had named as his associates in some of the syndicate operations, have been out of reach

Record of Smith Speech Is Mystery

Boston Democrats Admit and Deny Phonographic Disc Received.

Boston, April 22 (A.P.).—Either Alfred E. Smith has or has not sent a phonographic record of a speech by him to Boston to be broadcast on the radio.

A member of the staff in the office of the Democratic State committee today confirmed the report that the record had come to Boston and volunteered the information that it would be broadcast by radio tomorrow night. He said the station or the time of the broadcast had not been selected. J. Frank Donahue, chairman of the State committee, was at his home sick.

Later a member of the staff in the committee's office who identified herself as Donahue's secretary said the committee knew nothing of any record. She said there was to be no broadcast of any Smith phonograph speech that the committee knew of. The final drive by supporters of Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt for the election of slates pledged to their candidates was under way tonight.

Kansas Capitol Is Sold For Taxes; Library Too

Topeka, Kans., April 22 (A.P.).—The Kansas Capitol was sold for taxes today. It was a bargain—$4,321.80, with the city library thrown in for good measure.

Unpaid special improvement taxes (yes, even the State is not immune from the tax collector) resulted in Shawnee County bidding in the property at a tax sale. The county also bought the State Memorial Building and part of the city hall.

W. C. Noller, county commissioner, called at the city hall and announced a proposal to tear down a part of the building to make room for a filling station. Of course no one took him seriously. It was said the city commissioners probably would authorize the county commissioners to strike the items from the tax rolls, closing the matter.

VICTIM OF MURDER BELIEVED GAMBLER

Tentative Identification Is Made of Body Found Slain in River.

The body of a middle-aged white man found yesterday morning in the Potomac River at Key Bridge with a wire tightly bound around his neck could have floated there from as far north as Cumberland, Md., members of the homicide squad said last night as they investigated the murder.

That Washington police had their second murder case to solve within 48 hours was a definite development last night. Deputy Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, after viewing the body, said that death was undoubtedly due to strangulation and a hemorrhage of the brain from a heavy blow on the head. He termed the case one of murder. He said the body had been in the water for about six weeks.

Meanwhile police were investigating a theory that the body is that of a man whom they described as a small-time gambler. The man disappeared from his usual haunts on Ninth street about six weeks ago.

In support of the theory that the man had been slain farther up the river, they pointed to the fact that the body had been in the water for a long time, that it could have been floated here by spring freshets, and that it was clad in a blue shirt, such as is usually worn by farmers and laborers.

The body was partially identified yesterday afternoon as that of the gambler. Police said it had a marked facial resemblance to the missing man and the build was similar. Friends of his were to examine the body at the morgue in the hope of making the identification positive.

The body was that of a man about 45 years of age, and 5 feet 2 inches in height. He also wore a blue shirt, blue serge vest and trousers. A laundry mark with the initials "A. H." were found on the corded underwear he wore.

Cagni, Famous Explorer, Killed by Heart Attack

Genoa, April 22 (A.P.).—Admiral Umberto Cagni, noted explorer and shipping magnate, died suddenly today of a heart attack.

In 1900 Admiral Cagni and the Duke of the Abruzzi headed an expedition to the North Pole. They came closer to the pole than any man had been up to that time.

REICH REFUSES FURTHER FUNDS IN REPARATIONS

Finance Chief Declares, in Speech, Germany "Will Not" Pay.

WILL REBUFF ALLIES AT MORATORIUM END

Death of War Debts Also Is Seen in Europe, With No Complications.

Berlin, April 22 (U.P.).—The "natural death" of reparations and war debts payments at the end of the Hoover moratorium year was forecast tonight coincident with official declaration that Germany will definitely decline to resume payments on political obligations to the former allied nations.

"The moratorium ends Only 1, but Germany will not pay more after then," Finance Minister Hermann Dietrich told a mass meeting at Altona, the Telegraphen Union correspondent reported.

"If I, as the responsible finance minister of the Reich, am able to so declare without it leading to international complications, this proves that the actual situation must be fairly clear to the statesmen of other lands," Dietrich said.

"Will Not" Resume.

It was significant that the finance minister said Germany "will not" resume payments instead of "can not," which was the phraseology of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening in his January declaration emphasizing the inability of Germany to pay.

The Dietrich statement was made at a time when the belief that the political debts question would be solved by "spontaneous combustion" was widely discussed in Berlin.

It was said that Bruening in his conversations this week at Geneva, with Secretary of State Stimson and others, had hoped to achieve a legal settlement of the reparations question and that, failing such a settlement, German default was believed inevitable.

Default to U. S. Seen.

The Lausanne conference in June presumably would merely result in reiteration of Bruening's declaration of Germany's inability to pay, after which the only course open to the former allied powers would be to make a similar default on war debt payments to the United States.

Germany obviously would prefer that the allied nations formally declare recognition of Germany's inability to pay and in turn announce they either renounced payments to America or hoped that the United States would cancel the debts.

Although it is known that the United States Congress will fight any such plan, German circles took the position that the present circumstances would justify renunciation by European nations and remove the "stigma" of default of debts.

"Secret 6" Head Named To Guard World's Fair

Chicago, April 22 (A.P.).—Col. Robert I. Randolph, head of the "secret six," crime investigating group, was appointed today director of operations and maintenance for the 1933 world's fair to "prevent extortionists from taking the fair for a ride."

Special operatives will guard the site closely from now on, he said, serving notice "we will submit to no extortion or price-fixing in construction of the buildings." Officials of the fair said Randolph's appointment, effective July 1, indicated it had passed the stage of planning and starting construction, and had reached actual operations.

Capone Again Offers To Assist Lindbergh

Will "Guarantee" Return of Baby if Allowed Temporary Freedom; Colonel Reputed to Have Reestablished Contact With Kidnapers.

Hopewell, N. J., April 22 (A.P.).—From his prison cell in Chicago, Al Capone this week sent Col. Charles A. Lindbergh a new offer to effect the return of the flier's kidnaped son, 22 months old today.

The plan as outlined by one of Capone's lieutenants was disclosed today by a high official who was charged with presenting it to Col. Lindbergh. The official at the same time expressed his belief that the flier personally had reestablished contact with the persons to whom he paid $50,000 three weeks ago without obtaining his boy's return.

The contact, the official said he was convinced, was effected while Col. Lindbergh, accompanied by advisers, was away from his Sourland estate from Tuesday night to late last night. Where he contacted the men who obtained his $50,000—if he did contact them—was undisclosed, as also was any information he might have obtained from them.

The Capone offer included an absolute guarantee by the gang leader that the Lindbergh baby would be returned to his parents within a very few days if Col. Lindbergh would arrange for Capone's temporary release from jail.

Capone, his lieutenant assured the official connected with the Lindbergh investigation, would effect the baby's return without the payment of a cent of ransom in addition to that which the colonel already has paid. The gang leader promised to return to his prison cell as soon as the baby was safely at home.

Whether the offer will be accepted is a matter of conjecture. Col. Lindbergh took it under consideration with the intention of conferring with his associates before making a definite decision.

Should he accept, however, it is certain Federal officials at Chicago and probably at Washington would be called on to give their assistance.

Once before Capone made a similar overture. H. Wallace Caldwell, former president of the Chicago Board of Education, outlined such a scheme when he visited the Lindbergh estate on March 22. At that time, Col. Lindbergh and police officials rejected the offer flatly, saying the information given them by Caldwell was found to have no bearing on the case.

During the day police at Syracuse, N. Y., created a mild flurry of excitement by holding a child brought from nearby Brewerton. They communicated their information to police officials here, and, after describing the child, were told "absolutely it is not the Lindbergh child."

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf disclosed in one of his bulletins that

WIMBLEY, IN TEARS, TELLS OF 2 DEATHS

Charges Police Abuse While Describing Drowning of Wife and Her Child.

Amid frequent outbursts of tears, Harry C. Wimbley, accused of the murder of his wife and step-daughter, yesterday narrated the story of the drowning of the couple in the C & O. Canal near Chain Bridge on September 17, 1931. The Government contends that the couple was murdered so that Wimbley could collect $10,000 insurance he had purchased on the life of his wife a few months before her death.

In his story, Wimbley said he had been abused by the police, who, he said, swore at him and called him names.

Wimbley admitted that he had signed his wife's name to the $10,000 insurance policy application, which, he insisted, was taken out at the suggestion of his wife, because she was subject to "spells." The only spells which she suffered, her relatives have testified, were crying spells.

During one point in the story, when he told of the doctor pronouncing his wife dead, he burst into tears. Justice James M. Proctor adjourned court for fifteen minutes to permit him to regain his composure.

Describing the actual drowning, he said: "As I came up over the levee I saw my wife and baby had gotten into the canoe. They were half way across the canal. My wife picked up the fishing pole and brought it over her shoulder and as she did the confounded thing turned over and threw them into the water.

"Crowder was 50 yards below the place where they turned over. I hollered: 'That boat has turned over.' I pulled off my coat as I ran toward the spot. Then I jerkey my shoes off. (He demonstrated how he removed them and one of the shoes landed in the jury box.) I dove into the water

Police Run Down "Shorts Burglar"

Semiclad Invader of 100 St. Louis Homes Is Athlete, 21.

St. Louis, April 22 (A.P.).—The "shorts burglar" who has invaded more than 100 South St. Louis homes, clad in abbreviated underclothing, was captured here today after a man hunt engaged in by 50 policemen directed by radio. Police said he admitted he was the "shorts burglar."

The burglar gave his name as John Eaves, 21, a former athlete at McKinley High School, and a basketball player with the team of G Company, 138th Infantry, Missouri National Guard. Eaves was taken, shivering in his "shorts" and weeping, from beneath an automobile under which he had hidden when police were swarming about the neighborhood of two of his burglaries early today.

Eaves' burglary operations were the cause of scores of frantic calls to the police from residents of South St. Louis for two years. In each case they reported a man clothed only in underwear had entered their homes and stolen money. When surprised at his work Eaves usually dived headlong out of an open window.

3 SLAIN U.S. MARINES BORNE TO MANAGUA

Annapolis Lieutenant Among Nicaraguan Fatalities; 4 Others Wounded.

Managua, Nicaragua, April 22 (U.P.).—The bodies of three United States marines, who fought to death against insurrectionists were borne back to Managua today after the most serious battle of the Marine-led National Guards campaign in Nicaragua.

A Guardia patrol was wiped out in the battle, near Apali, where eleven guardsmen were killed and four wounded. Bandit losses were indefinite.

The dead marines were:

Lieut. Lawrence C. Brunton, Annapolis, Md.

Corp. Laurin T. Covington, Spartanburg, S. C.

First Class Pharmacist Mate Finis H. Whitehead, Grosse Pointe, Mich.

Covington's patrol was the first to be attacked by the insurrectionists. He had gone out from Apali, in the Nevua Segovia district, and proceeded about 4 miles when his men were attacked by a considerable force.

The fighting was so intensive that it could be heard at Apali and the detachments there sent out a force to aid Covington's patrol. Lieut. Brunton and Whitehead led the rescue detachment to the scene of battle, but they were trapped by the bandit forces as they attempted to join the surrounded Guardia patrol.

The ambushed marines and Guardia fought to the end and none escaped. The intensity of the battle was shown by the fact that even the four survivors were wounded.

Police Guarding LaGuardia Data

Unnamed Persons Anxious to Obtain Documents, New Yorker Says.

A large portmanteau of documents which hinted at mystery were left in the safekeeping of Inspector S. F. W. Burke, chief of detectives, by a secretary of Representative LaGuardia, of New York, last night.

Representative LaGuardia would not reveal the nature of the papers when interviewed over telephone. He said they were from New York and that there were persons who were anxious to secure them

When asked if any attempt had been made to take the documents from his home, his office or in New York, LaGuardia answered in the negative. He said he had turned them over to local authorities as he "had no police department of his own."

Army Officer Killed By Fall With Horse

Monterey, Calif., April 22 (A.P.). Lieut. George R. Huffman, of the Seventy-sixth Field Artillery, U. S. A., died today in the Monterey Presidio Hospital of injuries suffered a few hours before when he fell with a half-broken horse he was training.

The lieutenant was a 1931 West Point graduate and considered a fine horseman.

STIMSON HOPES TO WIN FRENCH OVER ON ARMS

To Attempt Compromise in Week-End Talks With Tardieu.

OPPOSITION OF PARIS STRESSED IN REPORT

Most Serious Obstacle to Geneva Accord, Hoover Is Informed.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson has reported to President Hoover that French opposition in the disarmament negotiations at Geneva constitutes the most serious obstacle to agreement. Col. Stimson is not despairing of the possibility of a compromise, however. The private conversations which he expects to hold with Premier Tardieu over the week-end in his Chateau de Besignes may succeed in striking a common ground of accord.

The American principles of disarmament are confined to a "qualitative" reduction based on the elimination of certain war material, such as poison gas and mobile artillery, while the French base their disarmament principles on an international police force under the direction of the League of Nations.

For the United States, such a conception of disarmament is inadmissible, although the American delegation would not be opposed to the French thesis if it appeared to satisfy the requirements of Great Britain, Italy and Germany.

French Allies in Accord.

The French allies, Poland, Roumania, Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia, are naturally in complete agreement with the principles of Premier Tardieu which stress the necessity of security before any downward revision of armament.

However, the American Secretary of State is known to have indicated in his dispatches that Great Britain, Germany and Italy are far from agreeing with the French thesis.

In the private discussions which tend to overshadow the importance of the purely perfunctory public meetings of the conference, Secretary Stimson has gained the very definite impression that Great Britain and Italy and to a lesser extent, Germany, tend to the American conception of disarmament rather than the French. This will make the task of conciliation correspondingly more difficult.

Considerable study is being given by the American delegation to bringing about an agreement between the French and the Italians on their participation in the London treaty. To date that has been signed by the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

Report by Gibson.

The formal report to the State Department was signed by Ambassador Hugh Gibson, who still continues as active chairman of the American

The couple was married in Pittsboro, N. C., December, 1930. They have no children. Mr. Steward is assistant to his father, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes. Mrs. Steward is daughter of John C. O'Mara, member of a national advertising firm.

HOOVER IS VOTED RIGHT TO REVAMP FEDERAL SYSTEM

House Group Includes Reorganization Power in Omnibus Economy Bill; Subject to Congressional Veto.

PRESIDENT IS FIRM AGAINST PAY CUTS, URGING FURLOUGHS

Savings Committee, However, Renews Attack on Salaries With Farm and Shipping Board Members Target in Reduction Move.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Power to reorganize the Government on lines of greater efficiency was voted the President yesterday by the House economy committee, which wrote its proviso into the administration omnibus retrenchment bill.

The authority was made subject to congressional veto. Mr. Hoover asked this power of Congress. Under the plan he could consolidate, transfer and eliminate overlappings within executive departments, and his action would become law after lying before the House for 60 days.

Where need was seen of consolidating or abolishing executive departments and agencies created by law, he would have only the right to make recommendations to Congress.

Hoover Against Pay Cuts.

While the economy committee was putting these finishing touches on the omnibus bill it will bring before Congress next week, President Hoover was represented as out of all sympathy with the committee pay-cut plan approved Thursday and the uncoordinated Senate appropriation cuts.

President Hoover believes from 50,000 to 75,000 Government employes will be thrown out of work because of the Senate slashes. He feels this situation will not be helped any by the committee's plan to cut wages 11 per cent with $1,000 exemption. The White House furlough plan, on the other hand, he considers constructive, holding promise of additional work for from 25,000 to 50,000 employes.

The President feels the 11 per cent plan fails to take into consideration new problems that inevitably would be brought about by passage of the economy program, and the 10 per cent cuts in each of the appropriation bills.

Hoover Furloughs Solution.

He thinks the Government has social responsibilities much broader than those of private industry, which nevertheless he feels has done its best to meet the situation by staggered furloughs, spreading out the amount of work among the greatest possible number of employes.

He strongly believes it is essential that the Government do likewise—that the Government has a moral responsibility to take the leadership in the matter, so that social standards will be maintained. It is his opinion that Government workers are a professional class to themselves, trained for their work, having few places to turn for employment when their Government turns them out. For this reason he advocates the furlough plan as the humane solution.

The Democratic House economy committee, however, was not swayed overmuch by the President's views in mapping its economy program yesterday.

The reorganization authority they voted the President was not nearly so broad as the power asked by Mr. Hoover in his omnibus measure. Instead of adopting the Williamson bill, which embodied the White House reorganization views, the committee approved a combination of the Williamson, Cochran and George reorganization bills.

Delays Reorganization.

HOUSE LEADERS SEE CASH BONUS DEFEAT

Polls of Both Parties Indicate That Plan Lacks 145 Signatures.

(Associated Press.)

For the first time since agitation began for the $2,000,000,000 veterans' bonus payment, both Democratic and Republican leaders last night saw hope of defeating the new-money plan in the House.

Recent polls of both parties were said to indicate that sponsors of the cash bonus outlay now lack the 145 signatures needed to force a vote.

Leaders emphasized the count was in no sense final. They stressed also that many who might vote for a cash bonus payment would not sign the petition.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, leading bonus sponsor, insisted there were still ample pledges to force a vote.

"Our opponents have nothing to offer," he said. "We have offered the only solution."

Three House members—Representatives Fish (Republican), New York; Lea (Democrat), California, and Andrew (Republican), Massachusetts, opposed the bonus at yesterday's committee hearing. Next week the revenue group will hear Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administrator; Secretary Mills and Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Representative Fish turned upon the House ways and means committee and charged it with a lack of "nerve and leadership" for not bringing out legislation to meet the economic crisis.

He urged a billion-dollar bond issue

Hungary Extends Plans For Economic Recovery

Budapest, Hungary, April 22 (A.P.). By a vote of 93 to 45, parliament today extended for one year extraordinary powers granted the government several months ago to deal with economic troubles.

The session also authorized a treasury bond issue of $8,250,000 to cover the deficit for this fiscal year. Opposition members called the bond issue "disguised inflation."

Mills Holds Responsibility Of Budget on Both Parties

Addresses Delegates of D. A. R., Who Are Also Received by First Lady; Editor Denounces Gov. La Follette as Red Sympathizer.

Addressing yesterday's session of the Forty-first Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Ogden Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, pointed out the Government's budget balancing problem, urged support of both political parties in tax levies and economy slashes and declared it was imperative for parties to share jointly "the responsibility of whatever measure of unpopularity may come."

A unified, consistent and effective program of national economy, Secretary Mills declared, was of great importance because of the fact that while "everyone is for a balanced budget in principle, strong opposition rises to each tax or cut considered."

"It is not too much to say," the Secretary said, "that if each part of either the economy or the revenue program is considered separately and independently of the programs as a whole, it is faced with the serious danger of defeat."

Confident of enactment of a "reasonably sound and adequate tax measure," Secretary Mills declared that in the effort to reduce cost of Government there is at present a "vast degree of confusion due to a division of responsibility and jurisdiction."

Elections over, the D. A. R. delega-

Denied Use of Alienists, Kelley Plans Bitter Fight

Prosecutor of Massie and Codefendants Lashes Out Against Defense After Darrow Vetoes Quiz of Lieutenant by State Psychiatrists.

Honolulu, April 22 (A.P.).—Denied the privilege of having his alienists examine Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, Public Prosecutor John C. Kelley set himself today for a furious finish in his battle to convict the naval officer and three others of the lynching of Joseph Kahahawai.

Kelley had counted upon two psychiatrists imported from California for testimony to offset that of defense alienists that Massie was insane when he held the gun that killed Kahahawai, and asked Clarence Darrow, aged leader of the defense, for this privilege.

The defense denied Kelley's request today and it was learned that Darrow himself had vetoed the idea. There is nothing in the territorial law to compel the defense to accede.

Undaunted, Kelley announced he would ask the court to instruct the jury that Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord, could be found guilty as charged even though the jurors might believe the naval officer was mentally deranged when the shot was fired.

The other fortification of the defense—that the accused were goaded into their act in order to avenge the criminal attack on Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of the naval officer—Kelley planned to hurdle by pointing out

PHYSICIANS OPPOSE HUSTON RUM PLAN

Not Interested in Becoming Nation's "Bartenders," Official Asserts.

Chicago, April 22 (A.P.).—The physicians of America are not interested in becoming the Nation's "bartenders," said Dr. W. C. Woodward, chairman of the legislative bureau of the American Medical Association, upon hearing the proposal of Claudius Huston for regulation of liquor by physicians.

"All we ask is the right for the doctor to prescribe the amount of liquor he believes the patient needs at the time he needs it," he said.

"Doctors not only are not interested in a plan to vest regulation of liquor distribution with them, but they would not want such a duty imposed."

The association's bill now before Congress would liberalize the restrictions now imposed on the quantity physicians may prescribe, but would specify that none may be prescribed in excess of actual medical needs.

Dr. Woodward said the present restrictions on prescriptions resulted from misuse at the beginning of the prohibition era, when the number issued by physicians was so great that a shortage of pint bottles occurred in Washington, D. C.

(Associated Press.)

Placing regulation of liquor sales in the hands of physicians was advocated yesterday by Claudius H. Huston, of Tennessee, former chairman of the Republican national committee.

He said this could be accomplished by "the mere change of a few administration regulations and an amendment to the Volstead act permitting the manufacture of beer for medicinal purposes and liberalizing doctors' permits."

He expressed a belief that the physicians would "gladly lend their aid to improving present conditions if appealed to from the standpoint of public duty."

Huston said "honest drys must necessarily admit that the present liquor conditions in this country are very deplorable."

"Honest wets," he added, "* * * must admit that they do not possess sufficient strength to repeal existing sumptuary laws by substituting something concrete and specific to take their place. * * *

"It was evidently the thought of the drys that the Government could enforce police regulations in the various States where the sentiment was against such enforcement. As an advocate of temperance I joined in such a view, but this conception has turned out to be a fallacy."

British Tariff Hits Huge U.S. Exports

About $98,000,000 Trade Affected by Nation's New Schedule.

(Associated Press.)

Approximately $98,000,000 of American exports to Great Britain are affected by the new tariff duties just announced at London. Tariff experts of the Department of Commerce, announcing that figure yesterday said, however, the exact total could not be determined until the British schedule is received from William L. Cooper, commercial attache of the London Embassy. Cooper cabled the department yesterday that the new rates ranged from 15 to 33 1-3 per cent with 20 per cent a predominate assessment.

"Of the total British net imports from the United States amounting in 1930 to $700,000,000," said a statement from the department, "it has earlier been estimated that about 2 per cent had come under the 50 per cent duties of the abnormal importation act and about 45 per cent had been transferred from the free list to 10 per cent under the general tariff.

"The precise value of the portion of this trade now made subject to increased or decreased duties is not yet available pending receipts in Washington of the full new British tariff schedule."

Doak Renews Plea To Coal Operators

Asks Them to Confer Here in Effort to Settle Ohio Strikes.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Doak yesterday renewed his appeal to Ohio coal mine operators to enter into a conference looking to settlement of strikes in that State.

The Secretary telegraphed operators asking them to meet in his office on Monday to discuss the situation.

"Your acceptance of this invitation for a conference," said the secretary, "will not only be greatly appreciated, but I know it will be an act decidedly in the public interest."

The secretary, April 13, telegraphed operators and representatives of the miners' union inviting them to a conference April 20. The operators refused the invitation, but representatives of the miners appeared.

Rainey Hits High Tariff, Blaming Farm Agency

Schenectady, N. Y., April 22 (A.P.).—Farm relief lies in world trade, Representative Henry T. Rainey, Democratic leader of the House of Representatives, said tonight, placing part of the responsibility for the Hawley-Smoot tariff, which he said broke down world trade, upon the American Farm Bureau Federation. He spoke over radio Station WGY here.

"The advocacy of the American Farm Bureau Federation of high tariffs was a most potent agency in bringing about the unconscionably high rates of the Hawley-Smoot bill which have had the effect of paralyzing international trade and of bringing about the retaliatory tariffs enacted against us by foreign countries which have completely prostrated the farming industry of this country," said Mr. Rainey.

Woman, 28, Bears 10 Children.

Porto Alegre, Brazil, April 22 (U.P.).—Many doctors were en route by automobile to the town of Bacacay tonight to confirm reports that a 28-year-old woman had given birth to ten children. The messages said the woman, Senora Espinosa Nunez de Antunes, was in good health but the infants died. They were eight girls and two boys.

U. S. Sheep Resent Alien Bears Taking Their Wool

By JOHN J. DALY

IN taking stock of the stock market, the Senate investigating committee is informed that French bears beat down the prices—and all the time, of course, foolish Americans believed the bear raids on Wall street were conducted by native talent.

Our own bear raiders are hot what they used to be. They are as helpless now as Polar bears in a Zoo, or Teddy bears in a nursery.

There was a time when an American bear, operating on the stock market, was invincible as the American eagle on the American dollar; but those days are gone.

THE Russian bear was formidable in bygone days, and the bulls who stopped any advance from that quarter always had respect for the invader. The native bear has given way to a foreign force, and all is not well in Wall street.

It is the old story of the survival of the fittest, and the changes of civilization. The bear raider of today is the bull leader of tomorrow, just as the radical, eventually, given time enough, turns conservative and the young grow old.

Naturally, the French bear raiders, having been met at the Marne, discovered, caught in the act, will go back to Paris and play in their own market, in the Bourse, leaving what is left of Wall street to the native-born.

THE international complications discovered in the stock market are not only confusing but they are embarrassing. An American, if his fortune must be thrown to the dogs, does not mind it so much if it goes to native hounds, but he hates with all the hatred in his soul to see it get into the clutches of foreign invaders, even if they come from a friendly nation — though no real friendly nation would send over its pet bears to tug and tear at an innocent stock market. It really is cause for concern, and when the Senate gets through its investigation probably the State Department might take a hand.

Wall Street, a small street, short from end to end;
Wall Street, a small street without a single bend;
Wall Sreet, a small street, paved with golden sheen,
And pretty little lambkins gambling on the green.
Wall Street, a small street, bulls devouring bears,
And sheep from the countryside squirming in the shears;
Wall Street, a small street, without a single bend,
Wall Street, a small street, gets 'em in the end.
Wall Street, a small street, running on forever,

HOOVER IS VOTED POWER TO REVAMP GOVERNMENT

ministration ideas. At any time within those 60 days, Congress could take action nullifying the procedure. Under the 60-day layover, it was further pointed out, no reorganizations could take place until February, 1933, at the earliest.

Before adjourning yesterday the committee turned again on salaries in the higher brackets. Members voted to cut pay of Farm Board, Shipping Board and Mediation Board members to $10,000, and salaries of members of the International Joint Commission between the United States and Canada to $5,000. They decided to cut the number of Shipping Board members from seven to four. Under their plan the board would become a bipartisan body, with members representing Atlantic, Pacific, Great Lake and Gulf ports.

Four independent consolidations, outside of the President's reorganization program, are included in the committee bill. They provide for merging the War and Navy Departments, the Personnel Classification Board and the Civil Service Commission, the Steamboat Inspection Service and the Commerce Department Bureau of Navigation and Government public works activities outside of rivers and harbors work.

Supply Bill Signed.

A number of odds and ends will be cleaned up before the omnibus bill is sent to the printers today. Among other things, the committee is considering writing into the measure the French bill, providing for exchange of work between the different departments of the Government.

Meanwhile the President signed the $45,398,760 Interior Department bill, carrying cuts 10 per cent under original House appropriations, despite the fact he thinks that from 800 to 1,000 persons will be thrown out of work by the measure. He expressed hope that Congress would permit flexible use of the funds authorized. Controversy between Speaker Garner and Secretary of the Interior Wilbur over the cuts continued.

The Speaker wrote Dr. Wilbur that if he and other Cabinet members "had been as anxious to reduce the cost of Government as Congress had demonstrated its disposition to be," budget estimates would have been reduced $250,000,000 before they reached Congress.

The House yesterday pursued consideration of the Navy appropriations bill, cut $15,336,000 under budget estimates. It was liberal in its consideration, throwing out a provision empowering the President to close naval shore stations, and another reducing the pay of naval fliers and submarine officers.

On the other side of the Capitol, Postmaster General Brown and Secretary of the Treasury Mills vigorously opposed 10 per cent cuts in the Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill ordered by the Senate, as hearings got under way before a Senate appropriations subcommittee. Secretary Mills previously had made known his views in a letter to Senator Oddie (Republican), Nevada. The Postmaster General's stand was just as emphatic.

Brown's Opposition.

A flat reduction in appropriations, without adopting the President's plan now before the economy committee, would demoralize the postal service and work a permanent injury to thousands of faithful employes, Mr. Brown told the committee. He said:

"Substantial reductions in this time of emergency should be and can be made, but, as the President has repeatedly pointed out, this can not be accomplished without discharging from 30,000 to 40,000 postal employes and drastically curtailing the postal service unless Congress, as provided by his plan, will meet the necessity of suspending or amending the laws which impose unnecessary expenditures on the postal service."

He said the rank and file of postal employes would prefer the President's enforced 30-day furlough without pay over the economy committee's pay slash plan. Mr. Hoover estimates his plan would save $82,000,000, as against $67,000,000 from the pay cut. Under the Hoover proposal no postal employe would be discharged, but additional work would be available for at least 20,000 substitutes, the Postmaster General said.

House Votes to Allow Navy to Retain Bands

(Associated Press.)

The House voted yesterday to allow the Navy to keep its bands.

By 67 to 35 it supported Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, and LaGuardia (Republican), New York, to strike from the Navy appropriation bill a proviso that would decrease the number of bandsmen by discontinuing enlistments.

Mr. LaGuardia, whose father was a bandmaster, told the House that "music is absolutely necessary for the morale of the personnel."

Flight and Submarine Pay Limiting Avoided

(Associated Press.)

The House was notified yesterday that its appropriations committee would withdraw its recommendations to place limits on flight pay of naval aviators and on submarine pay for naval officers.

Representative Ayres (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the bill, told the House Navy Department officials had promised to effect other economies to meet the proposed saving of $294,000 slated to have been made through flight and submarine pay limitations.

At present naval aviators receive an additional 50 per cent over their base pay. The committee had recommended it be limited to a maximum of $1,100 a year. Submarine officers receive 25 per cent additional pay at present. The committee had proposed to limit it to a maximum of $720 a year.

Long Raps Rail Chiefs For Urging Salary Cuts

(Associated Press.)

Railroad presidents were condemned in the Senate yesterday on complaints they were inspiring a campaign to reduce Government salaries.

Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, read a letter to employes of the Kansas City Southern Railway Co. by C. E. Johnston, the president, suggesting they write to members of Congress demanding reduction in salaries of Government employes.

The Johnston letter contained the list of senators and members of Congress in the States of Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas. It also contained various form letters to be used.

House Resolution Asks Recognition of Russia

(Associated Press.)

A resolution asking President Hoover to establish diplomatic and commercial relations with the Soviet government was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Sabath (Democrat), Illinois. Mr. Sabath said in his resolution that reports by persons of high standing and repute "clearly show that the Soviet government is stable."

Recognition of Russia was advocated Thursday by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, in a statement at Atlanta. This has long been favored by Chairman Borah, of the Senate foreign relations committee.

Ingalls Is on Payless Furlough Voluntarily

(Associated Press.)

Davis S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics, has voluntarily placed himself on a "leave without pay" basis in the Government service.

When he filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of his native Ohio in March, Ingalls asked that until he could devote his full time again to Federal Government service he be placed on the inactive list.

The salary of the position is $9,000 a year, and Ingalls' last pay check from the Treasury was March 15.

Clyde Pangborn Given Harmon Air Trophy

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Clyde E. Pangborn, of Seattle, Wash., round-the-world flier, today was awarded the Harmon Trophy for the greatest achievement in aviation in 1931. The award was based on his flight across the Pacific Ocean last summer. It was the last leg of a globe-circling journey with Hugh Herndon.

The trophy was presented by Senator J. Griswold Webb, chairman of the New York State Aviation Commission, at a luncheon of the American section of the Ligue Internationale des Aviateurs. Previous winners of the trophy include Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Capt. Frank Hawks, Maj. James Doolittle, Carl Ben Eilson and Shirley Short.

HOOVER SURELY DRY, MRS. PEABODY SAYS

After Conference With His Secretary She Points to Twelve Statements.

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the Women's National Law Enforcement Committee, after a conference with Walter Newton, one of President Hoover's secretaries, yesterday, said she had expressed the view that "Mr. Hoover has spoken" in favor of the dry law.

Mrs. Peabody said she told Newton she was prepared to carry such a message into various sections of the country. She referred to a pamphlet prepared by her organization, listing twelve statements made by Mr. Hoover since 1925, and labeled as "clear testimony" of his support of the eighteenth amendment.

"If people ask me why Mr. Hoover does not make a statement on prohibition at this time," she said today, "I will merely refer them to the twelve statements he has already made. If I tell my children something twelve times I do not expect to have to tell them a thirteenth time to make them understand."

McBride Stipulates Delay.

P. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Antisaloon League, yesterday proclaimed on behalf of the dry forces entire willingness to meet the wets in a prohibition referendum if the Constitution is first amended to permit all future changes to be made by popular vote in the States.

In a statement issued following his return from a Western trip, McBride pronounced "the one real referendum proposed down to date" a plan under which the Constitution would be amended to permit that in future by majority vote in two-thirds of the States, the people could initiate amendments making it mandatory on Congress to submit the proposals to popular vote in the States, ratification being by three-fourths of the States.

"We challenge the wets," he said, "to meet this issue by referendum under this method which would be a process under constitutional government. The attitude of the wets as to this proposition will determine their sincerity on the question of referenda."

Dry Sincerity Challenged.

Rufus S. Lusk, executive vice commander of the Crusaders, antiprohibition organization, said last night statements of some dry leaders that they favor constitutional referendum on prohibition" were "obviously insincere."

"The McBride, Byrd and Hyde proposals," he said in a formal statement, "are simply means to stall off as long as possible the inevitable."

"They recognize the mounting demand for a change in the law," he continued, "but instead of being willing to give the people an opportunity to vote at once, the drys propose methods which might delay a vote for years."

Lusk said the drys' argument for submission to the State Legislatures of the eighteenth amendment in 1917 "are in direct contrast to what they propose now."

Drafting Error Delays Measure on Risk Firms

Because of a routine error in drafting, President Hoover was called on yesterday by both houses of Congress to return for their reconsideration a bill requiring insurance companies incorporated in the District to keep their principal records here.

Chairman Arthur Capper, of the Senate District committee, moved that the President be asked to return the bill, and the House later adopted a similar resolution. The error, having to do with records kept at branch agencies, will be corrected, and the bill again voted on in House and Senate.

Two Agriculture Attaches Are Seriously Injured on Virginia Road.

DeWitt, Va., April 22 (A.P.).—Two representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture were taken to a Petersburg hospital today suffering serious injuries received in an automobile accident here.

They were F. E. Meloy, senior administrative assistant in the Bureau of Plant Industry, and P. A. Kersey, both of Washington. A third member of the party, E. C. Butterfield, superintendent of the Arlington Experiment Farm at Rosslyn, Va., suffered minor injuries.

The three were on a North Carolina trip to inspect a bus of a type being considered for use in Washington. Kersey was believed to have suffered a fractured back, and Meloy apparently received rib fractures. Dinwiddie County officers immediately started an investigation of the accident.

Rankin Says Roosevelt Democrats' Only Hope

(Associated Press.)

Mississippi Democrats were urged in a statement yesterday by Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, to send to Chicago a delegation instructed for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"The only hope for the Democratic party in the coming campaign is for the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt on the first or on an early ballot," Mr. Rankin said. "He is the only candidate, or alleged candidate, on either ticket who has any appeal to the great mass of the American people or who offers any solution for the grave problems confronting the country."

Akron Flight Set For Congress Unit

Craft to Make Trial Trips Soon and Then Join Pacific Fleet.

(Associated Press.)

The Airship Akron will leave Lakehurst, N. J., during the first week in May for exercises with the fleet off the Pacific Coast. Before the departure the ship will make three trial flights, the first the latter part of next week.

Repairs to the Akron's vertical fin, damaged February 22, are nearing completion and new set of propellers to increase speed has been installed. On the first flight the ship will be thoroughly inspected. Members of the congressional committee which held hearings on the Akron and were scheduled to have flown in the ship when the accident occurred February 22, will be carried on the second trip. The third trial flight will be for speed performance.

On leaving Lakehurst for the West Coast, the ship will proceed to the naval air station, Sunnyvale, Calif. The exact itinerary has not been determined upon.

GARBO'S BETROTHAL CABLED AND DENIED

Hollywood Asserts Reputed Swedish Fiance Blamed for Recent Book.

London, April 22 (A.P.).—Greta Garbo is leaving Hollywood at the end of April to marry Wilhelm Soerensen, son of a wealthy Swedish financier and a close friend of Prince Sigvard, second son of the Swedish crown prince, the Daily Mail's Stockholm correspondent reported today.

Mr. Soerensen, accompanied by Prince Sigvard, recently went to Berlin to arrange for the wedding, the Mail's story said. The correspondent said it was expected that after her marriage Miss Garbo would quit the films and settle in Sweden.

Hollywood, April 22 (A.P.).—Greta Garbo's manager—and that's about as near as anyone ever gets to the eccentric Swedish movie queen—denied emphatically tonight that she is to be married soon in Europe, as reported from London.

Officials at her studio also poohpoohed the idea that she will wed Wilhelm Soerensen, wealthy Stockholm society man. From what they said, however, it was regarded as virtually certain that when her contract expires in June, she will leave for Europe without signing a new one.

Reports "False and Absurd."

Whether she ever will come back, they did not profess to know. Her manager, Harry Edington, was silent on the entire question of her departure.

Regarding the report of her marriage plans, Edington said:

"It is not only false, but absurd."

At the studio it was said that there is a special reason why Garbo will not marry Soerensen. He, it was explained, was a visitor here eighteen months ago and was her escort on numerous occasions.

Shortly after he left, the actress' "Life Story," by a woman writer, was published and Garbo, a studio official said, held Soerensen responsible for supplying the material.

Has Large Fortune.

"Knowing Garbo as we do," said the official, "we are certain that this would put a quietus on any romance with Soerensen if there ever was one."

Garbo's current picture is regarded here as probably her last one, since there would not be time to complete another before her contract expires.

Studio executives were represented tonight as becoming more and more convinced that she plans to retire from the screen permanently and spend the rest of her life in her native land, which, because of her vast earnings, she could do in style without another stroke of work.

Ban Hot Air Speakers, Urge Business Men

Macon, Ga., April 22 (A.P.).—Chamber of Commerce secretaries from many Southern cities received pointed advices regarding their work at their annual convention here today.

P. T. Anderson, vice president of the Macon Telegraph and the Macon News, said: "Get out of the hot air field and get on a business basis."

Jack H. Hott, of Fort Worth, Tex., secretary of the National Association of Commercial Secretaries, said:

"Debunk the Chamber of Commerce, do something except be hot-air artists and take your place in the march of business that is in your city."

16 Missouri U. Students Ousted.

Columbia, Mo., April 22 (A.P.).—Sixteen students at the University of Missouri were suspended indefinitely here today for their part in the kidnaping last month of the St. Pat's queen and the subsequent fight between engineering and law students, in which three were shot and wounded.

MOONEY CASE BOBS UP IN HOUSE DEBATE

Blanton Lauds Gov. Rolph for Refusing Pardon; Walker Seeks Record Copy.

(Associated Press.)

In vigorous language, Gov. Rolph of California was praised and condemned yesterday in the House for his refusal to pardon Tom Mooney.

Mooney is serving a life sentence in prison. He was convicted of participating in the San Francisco preparedness day bombing of 1916.

The House was placidly considering an appropriation bill when Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, expressed hearty and unqualified approval of the California governor's decision.

There was rustle, and shouts of "regular order," but before the House went back to the supply measure Representative Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, and Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, had attacked Rolph for letting Mooney remain in jail.

Reference to Walker.

"I want to take this opportunity to take my hat off to the Governor of California," Mr. Blanton said. "He has seen fit to consider the law and the courts of California of more importance than visiting mayors who draw salaries of $50,000 from New York City."

"He was referring to the trip Mayor Walker made to the Coast to intercede in behalf of the former labor leader.

Mr. Sabath was on his feet as Mr. Blanton ended.

"I regret," he said, "that the Governor of California didn't have the courage to pardon an innocent man. I hope the people of California will elect a man who will do the right thing by a courageous labor leader."

"No fair-minded man, none with the slightest knowledge of law," Mr. LaGuardia shouted, "can read the record in the Mooney case without becoming indignant and ashamed of the administration of justice."

Records Hub of Argument.

Pointing at Mr. Blanton, he said he was certain that if the Texan would take the trouble to read the report of the Wickersham committee on the Mooney case, "he will hang his head in shame at the result of that trial, instead of glorifying the continued incarceration of an American citizen who has been proved to be innocent."

"The gentleman is talking about a record that has been fixed up since the trial by somebody else," Mr. Blanton interposed. "I have been talking about, and the Governor of California has passed on, the record of the trial itself."

"When the gentleman refers to a record that has been fixed up," Mr. LaGuardia shot back, "I say yes, the record in the Mooney case was fixed, was perjured, and stands there as a blot on American justice."

Objection of Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, yesterday prevented action on a plea by Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, that the Senate pass his resolution requiring printing of the reports of experts to the Wickersham commission in the Mooney-Billings case.

Walker Requests Copy.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Mayor James J. Walker announced late today that he would request an official copy of Gov. Rolph's decision in the Mooney case from the California secretary of state.

The mayor, who journeyed across the continent to make a personal plea for Mooney's freedom, would not comment further on the case, but his prospective action was taken as indicating that he may have further plans for carrying on the fight.

Describing the Rolph decision as "murderous," J. Louis Engdahl, general secretary of the International Labor Defense, issued a statement asserting "hundreds of meetings" will be held next week over the country in preparation for "raising this (the Mooney) issue on a mass scale on International May Day, May 1."

Garner Espouses Goldsborough Bill

Would Have Party Adopt Measure Designed to Aid Farmers.

(United Press.)

Speaker John N. Garner yesterday espoused as a party measure the Goldsborough stabilization bill designed to stimulate business by encouraging inflationary operations by the Federal Reserve Board.

Party leaders made plans for a House vote next week on the bill which is aimed ultimately at raising the price of the farmer's wheat and cotton, as well as other products. It was brought forward suddenly, against the wishes of the Federal Reserve Board, after being pigeonholed in one form or another for several years.

Simultaneously, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, reported to the Senate his general banking bill, which among other important effects, would create a special committee in the Federal Reserve Board to supervise such "open market operations" as the Goldsborough bill seeks to encourage.

Charges Police Abuse While Describing Drowning of Wife and Her Child.

and I thought I saw her face. I waited for her to come up again and I saw her hat on the surface. I dove again and couldn't find her."

He said he shouted to Crowder, who was also in the water, to go for help. Then he got the canoe, he said, saw a fishing pole and, pulling it up, he found his wife's hands clutched to the end of it in a death grip.

After describing the struggle he had to get his wife ashore, he told of his efforts to resuscitate her, and said he dropped to the ground, exhausted, when police relieved him. He went to 305 C street northwest, where he lived, he said, and later reported to the First Precinct, as had been requested.

From there he was taken to the Seventh Precinct, where Detective Sergt. Dennis Murphy questioned him concerning his many affiaes and accused him of lying to him regarding the names he used. Wimbley denied the testimony of Detective Sergt. Floyd A. Truscott that he had questioned Wimbley on September 17. Wimbley claims that he never saw Truscott until September 18.

Describes Grilling.

He likened his many interrogations by police to "wolves after a sheep." On September 20, he said, the detectives came in and told him Crowder had made a complete confession. They asked him if he had anything to say and he said he refused to make a statement.

When they showed him a marriage record of his marriage to Ida Mae Graves, he said, "I said to them, 'you have found out the only thing I wanted to hide.' They accused me of drowning them and said: 'You brute, you're too yellow to do it yourself, and you made that country jackass, Crowder, do it.'"

He denied that the confession of Crowder was read to him. He said his mind was in a blank. "I had a knot on the back of my head, I don't know whether they hit me or whether I fell from the chair," he said.

At this point Wimbley asked Justice Proctor if he could take the jury out to the scene to point out the place of the drowning; but the judge refused the request.

Denies Insurance Plot.

"Did you ever take out an insurance policy on your wife for the purpose of murdering her?" asked Louis L. Whitestone, of defense counsel.

"I did not," he replied.

Mr. Whitestone was stricken ill earlier in the day and most of the examination was conducted by his associate, Cedric Johnson, the attorney for Crowder.

A rigorous cross-examination is in store for Wimbley when court reconvenes on Monday morning and Assistant District Attorney William H. Collins will attempt to shatter his story. Only once during the four hours of Wimbley's testimony did Mr. Collins interpose an objection and that was to stop Wimbley from "waving the flag" by telling his service exploits to the jury.

During most of his testimony, which occupied the entire court day, Wimbley walked in front of the jury, pointing out to them the manner of the drowning by pointing to picture exhibits.

Earlier in the day Wimbley told the story of his trip to Dendron, Va., which, according to Crowder's confession, was for the purpose of sandbagging and burning the family, of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Tench, the parents of Mrs. Wimbley, in their home.

Wimbley admitted that he conspired with Crowder to defraud the automobile rental agency of its proper proceeds from the trip, by adjusting the speedometer. When they reached Richmond, he said, the gasoline tank was found to be leaking and they bought five gallons of gas with them, in case their tank should be depleted.

Sobs In Audience.

Crowder's confession says that the gasoline was to be used to set afire the home of the Tenches after the family had been knocked unconscious. When he described his meeting with his stepdaughter, Wilmay Traylor, his speech faltered.

Sobs were also heard in the audience. They came from the bench occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Tench, and Mr. and Mrs. William Traylor, the parents of Mrs. Wimbley's first husband. He denied that he left his room after he had retired, contrary to testimony of Mrs. Tench. Crowder's confession says Wimbley came to him after they had retired and asked him if he was going to go through with the scheme to burn the family.

The gun purchased by Crowder before the trip was to be used, Wimbley said, because the husband of a woman, whom Crowder was visiting, had him 'on the spot.' He then told of his wife's suggestion that they go fishing, and described the events leading to the tragedy. He had warned his wife and child, he said, to remain out of the canoe, unless he or Crowder was with them.

Wimbley testified that his third wife, Ida Mae Graves, a former Census Bureau clerk, had suggested to him that they get married and "pose as man and wife." Soon after, he said, she became expectant, and he took her to Baltimore to have an operation performed. In September, he said, he bade her good-by and sent her to Exeter, Mo. Ida Mae Graves Dickerson (Wimbley married her under the name of Dickerson) testified that he promised to come to Missouri within a month.

SENSATIONAL COURT NEWS HELD MENACE

Lawyer Urges Editors' Aid in Talk to Society; Pew Discusses Crime.

(Associated Press.)

Describing newspapers as the greatest corrective for government, Joseph C. Hostetler, Cleveland attorney, yesterday expressed to the American Society of Newspaper Editors a belief that the "sensational" in court news received too much publicity.

He urged the newspapermen to "help the courts, not hinder them," through presenting the constructive side of the news, and said he was convinced that some officials took advantage of their knowledge that "clowning" would bring them publicity.

The society ended a six-year dispute by authorizing the board of directors to suspend or expel members. The action was taken through adoption of an amendment which provided, however, that where expulsion of a member was sought he must be furnished with a copy of the charges, be granted a hearing and have the right to appeal to the full society at its next annual meeting.

Threatened Damage Suit.

Originally the question arose with a Western member, accused of violating ethics of the society, threatening to sue for damages if the society expelled him. It was contended that the organization, under its by-laws, did not have the right to expel a member.

Marlen E. Pew, editor of Editor and Publisher, discussed the Lindbergh kidnaping case at a luncheon talk. He advocated a limited censorship of Lindbergh news, but asserted that in general restriction of crime news would hamper justice far more than aid it.

"In recent years we have seen unspeakably mean and violent crimes sweep this country until it is a scandal through the world," Mr. Pew said. "Most newspapermen know what the causes have been.

Fixes Blame for Situation.

"In my opinion the failure of the Government to enforce prohibition laws, brazen conspiracies between the underworld and traitorous public officials and police corruption, and finally the vicious exploitation patterns the predatory rich have set for the predatory poor in this country are basic factors explaining this ghastly social phenomenon.

"Racketeering and banditry have overwhelmed the country in spite of heroic and persistent exposure by newspapers. When local government failed, newspapers remaintd the only defenders of public interest. Restrictions on crime news will hamper justice far more than aid it."

Secretary Mills and Senator Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, discussed current economic and financial subjects in confidential talks at the afternoon session of the society.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, April 22 (U.P.).—Almost 30,000 persons tonight began evacuation of the Drina district of Jugoslavia because of floods over a wide area. The refugees drove 60,000 head of cattle with them as they left their homes.

Floods have been spreading in northern Jugoslavia and parts of Bulgaria for the last week. Many small towns have been inundated and hundreds of homes destroyed.

COMPROMISE PLAN ADOPTED AT GENEVA

Resolution Delays Decision Between U. S. and French Arms Theories.

Geneva, April 22 (U.P.).—The Disarmament Conference today accepted a temporary compromise resolution delaying decision on the opposing French and American theories and then prepared to enter a period of suspended animation until after the French elections early in May.

While Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and other leading Western statesmen continued their private conversations without apparent result, the general commission of the conference acted unanimously on the compromise resolution submitted by Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and amended by Hugh S. Gibson, head of the American delegation.

Provisions of Resolution.

This resolution was designed to strike a vague mean between the French demand for handing over all offensive weapons to an international army under League of Nations control and the American-British plan for abolition of all offensive weapons.

As amended, the resolutions provided that "without prejudice to other proposals to be discussed later, the conference declares approval of the principle that qualitative" disarmament is the selection of certain classes of weapons, the possession and use of which should be prohibited by all states or which should be internationalized by a general convention."

Thus, the conference decided nothing as regards the controversy over fundamental issues and merely postponed definite action. So-called "qualitative" disarmament merely commits the conference to taking some action regarding the big guns, tanks, and other offensive weapons, without specifying whether these instruments of aggression shall be abolished or turned over to an international peace army.

Selection of Worst Weapons.

Gibson amended the resolution slightly to provide for creation of special commissions to examine the range of land, sea and air armaments "with a view to selecting those weapons of a character particularly offensive and most efficacious against national defense and menacing to civil populations."

Then Arthur Henderson, presiding, called an "important" meeting of the steering committee for tomorrow, when it is expected to decide that no more general commission meetings will be held for two weeks. Thus the French government will be relieved of further embarrassment at Geneva until after the French elections, when the conference will take up the French plan.

Stimson has been suffering again from laryngitis and fatigue and will rest at some nearby place over the week-end. Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald's eyes were said to be in good condition despite reports to the contrary in London. It also was denied that MacDonald was returning to London immediately.

FIRST LADY GREETS D. A. R. DELEGATES AT WHITE HOUSE

tions put on their best bibs and tuckers and went to the White House yesterday afternoon where more than 3,000 of them were guests of Mrs. Hoover at a special reception in their honor. Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general, and her official board of management were received first, each member being presented by an aid. Mrs. Hoover wore an attractive spring-like dress of flowered chiffon in which to receive her guests and Mrs. Hobart was in a gown of D. A. R. blue banded with a deeper blue and with it she wore a blue hat.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, the newly elected president general, was also presented to Mrs. Hoover with the officials.

The bevy of white-clad pages who have been on duty at the Congress were specialy received in a group headed by the chairman of pages, Miss Dorothy DeG. Jenkins, and the vice chairman, Mrs. Jean J. Labat.

A section of the Marine Band played during the reception and the doors and windows to the White House grounds and terraces were thrown open so that the D. A. R. could wander about.

Branding Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin as a member of an organization closely affiliated with "the Communist movement," John B. Chapple, managing editor of the Ashland (Wis.), Daily Press, in a speech at the afternoon session of the congress said that his State "was in the front line trenches" in the fight against radicalism.

The speaker recited a list of names of persons and societies which he claimed had been referred to as "insidious forces of destruction" in a speech by President Hoover. "The President did not call by name these invisible forces," declared Chapple, "but I propose to do so." He cited among others Prof. Alexander Meiklejohn, of the University of Wisconsin; John Dewey, of Columbia University; Stuart Chase, John Haynes Holmes and Harry Elmer Barnes, former member of the Smith College faculty. The new president general of the D. A. R., Mrs. Magna, is a graduate of Smith. Mr. Chapple told of the opening of what he called "red flag college," a full-time Communist training school in Milwaukee last week.

Charging that subversive forces are rampant in this country today, Mrs. William Sherman Walker, retiring chairman of the committee on national defense of the D. A. R., presented statistics in her annual report. Among the high points of Mrs. Walker's speech were the following:

A creed of Americanism, which she quoted as composed by Mrs. George Maynard Minor, of Connecticut, honorary president general of the D. A. R.

"We believe in a patriotism which loves one's country as the dearest and best in the world and does not refuse to defend it.

"We believe in a loyalty to its government which leaves no room for socialism or communism.

"We believe in a love of peace which leaves no room for the pacifism that would buy peace at any price, even at the secrifice of truth, honor and righteousness.

"We believe in a living faith in God that leaves no room for atheism.

"Such ideals have a vital, spiritual appeal. Linked with memorials to America's past, they seek the perpetuation of the noblest and best for America's present and future."

Among the interesting reports of yesterday was one on the National Old Trails Road by Mrs. John Trigg Moss, of St. Louis.

The Forty-first Continental Congress will adjourn today after the installation of the new national officers this morning. A banquet at the Willard Hotel tonight will be the crowning social event of the week.

MANCHURIAN POSTS GIVEN TO JAPANESE

Four Appointed to Important Positions in Regime; Tokyo Wants League Showdown.

Tokyo (Saturday) April 23 (A.P.).—The new Manchurian government announced today the appointment of four Japanese, who formerly served as officials of the Japanese government, to key positions in the Changchun regime headed by Henry Pu-Yi, the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency correspondent said in a dispatch from Changchun.

The correspondent described the appointments as conforming to the Changchun policy of selecting officials of all races resident in Manchuria according to their talents and qualifications.

The appointments will enable the Japanese to dominate the ministries of finance, foreign affairs and home affairs and the Pengtien provisional police bureau.

The foreign office indicated that Japan's weakened ties with the League of Nations had been further strained by the resolution of the league's committee of nineteen urging her to withdraw her troops from Shanghai.

Instructions Kept Secret.

A foreign office spokesman declined to reveal the nature of the latest instructions to the Japanese delegation at Geneva, but it was understood that M. Nagaoka, Japan's delegate, had been more conciliatory in his unofficial conversations with M. Paul Hymans and other members of the committee than Tokyo approved.

There appeared here a growing sentiment to bring Japan's relations with the league to a head in the near future.

Meanwhile a dispatch to the Rengo News Agency from Harbin, Manchuria, said that Japanese army officers had arrested the Russian station master of the Chinese Eastern Railway at Imienpo. The charge was obstruction to Japanese troop movements and cooperating with the Chinese insurgents.

Russians Demand Release.

Russian authorities demanded his release.

A Japanese brigade sent to Imienpo with the idea of launching a new offensive in the Soviet border province of Kirin, Manchuria, arrived today to find the insurgents had withdrawn and were concentrating further westward in the Ninguta region.

The Japanese reported they fought two engagements, one at Wukimino and another 30 kilometers east of Imienpo, where the Chinese lost 20 killed.

These developments followed a blunt warning to the League of Nations and Soviet Russia to keep hands off of Manchuria, by Gen. Sadao Araki, the Japanese minister of war.

Canterbury Archbishop's Illness Is Causing Alarm

Cannes, France, April 22 (A.P.).—The condition of the Most Rev. Cosmo G. Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, who has been here for the past month to convalesce from an illness, is causing apprehension to his family, it was learned today.

Lord Dawson, of Penn, physician to King George, saw the archbishop yesterday and since then has been in touch with local physicians supervising the case. The archbishop is being kept in seclusion, no visitors being received. He is staying at the Chateau Thorenc, which is owned by Henry Neville Gladstone, son of the late prime minister.

Woman Will Act As Governor Today

Louisiana's Secretary of State to Rule as King Goes to Richmond.

Baton Rouge, La., April 22 (A.P.).—It will be "Acting Governor" Grosjean in Louisiana tomorrow. At a broad mahogany desk, behind which former Gov. Huey P. Long held away, will sit as the State's chief executive one of the youngest, most attractive and demurely quiet women ever to hold public office since the dawn of feminine "emancipation."

Miss Alice Lee Grosjean, 25, pretty and petite, who since October 8, 1930, has been secretary of state by appointment of former Gov. Long, will take up the gubernatorial reins where Gov. Alvin O. King laid them down on departure for the governors' conference in Richmond, Va.

However, it all doesn't mean enough to Miss Grosjean to get excited about. "I have worked enough in the governor's office to have acquired knowledge of the administrative routine," she explained briefly. "I don't expect things to get upset."

New Greek Finance Head Would Quit Gold Basis

Athens, Greece, April 22 (A.P.).—Kriakos Varvaressos, counselor to the Bank of Greece, was appointed minister of finance today succeeding G. Maris. Some observers regarded this as significant in view of the fact that yesterday, when Premier Venizelos met with the cabinet and a number of financiers and industrialists, Prof Varvaressos advocated abandoning the gold standard.

There was an impression that the government favored going off the gold standard, but it seemed likely that nothing would be known definitely until Monday when the premier will announce the government's financial program.

Longshoremen's Strike Spreading in New York

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Striking longshoremen tonight had succeeded in suspending the operation of an additional 1,000 lighters at deep sea piers and a conference called to avert the spread of the strike apparently had failed.

The strike, originally called in protest against pay cuts announced by the Savannah, Clyde-Mallory and Morgan Lines, was extended to the piers of seven railroads and another steamship line, when strike leaders charged them with violating an embargo agreement.

Man Convicted in Apartment Theft.

A former employe of the Lindbergh Apartments, 200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, yesterday was convicted of stealing clothing from the basement of the apartment and was given 180 days in jail by Judge R. E. Mattingly. Several residents of the building testified they saw Raymond T. Williams, colored, the employe, loitering about the place at about the time of the thefts. He denied the charge.

LAST BIG GANDHI AID, MME. NAIDU, IS HELD

Arrested for Disobeying Rule on Attending Forbidden Nationalist Parley.

Bombay, India, April 22 (A.P.).—India's most famous woman, Mme. Sarojini Naidu, was arrested today in the government's campaign against Mahatma Gandhi's boycott, thus removing the last outstanding Indian Nationalist from the public view.

Mme. Naidu was detained by extremely polite policemen 15 minutes after she boarded a train bound for Delhi to preside over the scheduled session of the Nationalist congress on Sunday.

The 53-year-old patriot, poet, orator and philosopher was arrested for disobeying an order restraining her from attending the congress. The police permitted Mme. Naidu to spend the night in her hotel instead of locking her up, and announced she would be tried tomorrow.

If she is found guilty, she will join the mahatma, his family and all the other prominent Nationalists in the civil disobedience campaign in prison. Also her detention will remove the one person who might have established peace between the congress and the government.

Meanwhile, several hundred other delegates to the Delhi congress were arrested in various parts of India today, while many nonpolitical prisoners were being released before the expiration of their terms to make room for Nationalist civil resisters, 50,000 of whom it is estimated already are in jail.

The government has forbidden the meeting of the congress.

Federal Agents Raid 25 More New York Places

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock's men raided 25 liquor-selling resorts in Manhattan and the Bronx today, increasing their total to 164 in five days. Forty-one prisoners, 20 of them caught in today's net, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter and were held in $500 or $1,000 bail for further examination.

United States Attorney George Z. Medalie clarified his new padlock policy by saying that speakeasy proprietors will be prosecuted criminally as heretofore and that padlock proceedings may be resorted to only where a case is weak.

Harvard Men Face Court in Riot Probe

9 and 3 Others Held as College and Cambridge Open Investigations.

Cambridge, Mass., April 22 (A.P.).—Twelve men appeared in court today as an aftermath of one of the wildest riots in the recent history of Harvard University. Nine of the men were Harvard students and the others were Cambridge residents who became involved in the six hours of brawling last night in the Harvard Square district.

All the defendants pleaded not guilty and were released for a hearing May 24. The charges against them ranged from loitering to driving an automobile recklessly.

As soon as college and municipal offices opened, investigations into the riot were ordered. The college authorities questioned students on their activities and Mayor Richard M. Russell ordered the Cambridge Police Department to make an independent investigation.

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex County, said, in a statement, he intended to make a thorough investigation and present the entire matter to the grand jury.

Radio and Copyright Fee Row Agreement Reached

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—An agreement has been reached by the National Association of Broadcasters and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to negotiate the question of fees to be paid for the broadcasting of copyright music, it was announced tonight.

The society had asked an increase amounting to approximately $3,000,000 a year in license fees. Under the agreement negotiations will be opened between committees of the two organizations in the hope of reaching a satisfactory working basis before September 1. Meanwhile any increase from the $1,000,000 in license fees has been suspended.

Smiling Broadly, Ohioan Is Executed for Murder

Columbus, Ohio, April 22 (A.P.).—Smiling broadly, John Glasscock was electrocuted tonight at Ohio Penitentiary for the murder of Patrolman James Ryan, of Cleveland, fifteen months ago.

Prison officials last night said that Glasscock and three other doomed men had plotted an escape from "death row."

PERU RENEWS FIGHT ON OIL LEASE TAXES

Seeks to Collect $4,800,000 Yearly From British Company.

Lima, Perú, April 22 (A.P.).—The Peruvian government moved today to regain the right to collect taxes on petroleum leases on the "Brea and Parinas" property in the northern department, one of the richest oil regions in the continent.

On the recommendation of a special committee appointed to investigate and revise contracts entered into during the regime of former President Augusto B. Leguia, Congress authorized the executive department to ask the world court to revise a ruling made by arbitrators April 24, 1922.

Under this ruling, handed down by a board headed by Dr. F. Ostertag, president of the Swiss federal court, the area of the property and the title of the company were agreed upon on the basis of payments to Peru.

The International Petroleum Co., of Great Britain, leased the property. The lease has been attacked here on the ground that Peru lost the right to collect taxes of 10,000,000 soles (normally $4,800,000) yearly for 50 years.

Autos May Link Chile and Argentine.

Santiago, Chile, April 23 (U.P.).—Automobiles, equipped with flanged wheels to run over the 155-mile Narrow Gauge Transdine Railroad between Los Andes, Chile, and Mendoza, Argentina, probably will be used to maintain rail communication between the two countries, it was reported after a conference attended by the minister of public works and railroad board. The reports said a subsidy of 1,000,000 pesos ($126,000) would be requested of the government to help maintain the line.

Cuban Flier Crashes in Mexico.

Mexico City, April 22 (A.P.).—Capt. Eguardo Laborde, of the Cuban army, who attempted to fly by stages from Havana to Mexico City in a two-cylinder airplane with a wingspread of only 20 feet, came to grief this afternoon when he crashed at San Antonia de Los Naranjos in the State of Puebla. The captain telephoned to the Cuban Embassy that he had been forced down by lack of gasoline. His plane was destroyed, but he was uninjured.

Porto Rican Women Register.

San Juan, Porto Rico, April 22 (A.P.).—Thousands of Porto Rican women thronged registration offices today to prepare for casting their first ballots in next November's elections. Officials said the enthusiasm which the women have shown indicated 150,000 of them will vote. More than 57,000 had registered up to last night. Some of them remained in line more than half a day to take their turn.

Cartagena to Be Modernized.

Bogota, Colombia, April 22 (U.P.).—A contract for complete modernization of the Port of Cartagena, on the northeast coast, has been signed by President Enrique Olaya Herrera and Representatives of Frederick Snare Corporation, of New York. The work is to be completed within 26 months and includes construction of modern docking facilities and some filling-in work near the port airdrome.

Fliers Still Held In Author's Death

Mother of Haden Clarke Scouts Theory Son Shot Himself.

Miami, Fla., April 22 (A.P.).—Investigation into the fatal shooting of Haden Clarke, 26-year-old author, proceeded slowly today, while Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, Australian flier, and Capt. W. N. Lancaster, her flying partner, remained in jail under an official charge of plan by State Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne.

Hawthorne said last night he was satisfied of Mrs. Keith-Miller's ignorance of information might show conclusively whether Clarke, whom she had grown to love during the writing of her life story and whom she planned to marry, was slain or took his life.

He questioned Lancaster at length today, but was silent as to any developments bearing on the case.

Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, mother of the dead man and a professor of journalism here, was quoted by the Miami Daily News as saying she declined to accept without reservation the theory that her son shot himself. She based her stand, she said, on the fact that an inherent dread of firearms would have precluded his adopting this method had he contemplated suicide.

Claire Windsor Denies Charges of Heart Theft

Oakland, Calif., April 22 (A.P.).—Denying charges she attempted to alienate the affections of Alfred C. Read, jr., San Francisco broker, Claire Windsor, actress, filed an answer here today to the $100,000 suit brought by Mrs. Marian Y. Read, Oakland society matron. Miss Windsor requested a change of venue to Hollywood. Her motion will be argued here next Thursday.

In the formal answer Miss Windsor admitted meeting Read last September 1 but denied "she attempted to alienate his affections, was with him constantly, exchanged affectionate notes with him and accompanied him to places of amusement or on long motor trips," as the suit charged.

$600,000 for Aid Here Sought in 1933 Bill

Assurance was given by the District Commissioners to a delegation yesterday that they would ask the Senate to include in the 1933 District appropriation bill the item of $600,000 for local unemployment relief. The relief provision was omitted by the House in adopting the act.

Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, pastor of the National Universalist Church and chairman of the Council of Social Agencies, headed the delegation and furnished the Commissioners with additional data on the need for the financial relief in the District.

Battleship Trial Run Finds Faulty Pumps

Portsmouth, Va., April 22 (A.P.).—The radio-controlled target battleship Utah returned here today from a trial run with news that the failure of some of her machinery to function properly would delay the test by the Navy Department board of inspection and survey scheduled for Monday.

The ship, recently outfitted at the Navy Yard here, returned from her running tests off the Virginia Capes, for final repairs and adjustment. A new device for feeding water to the boilers of the vessel was said to be necessary.

HITLER PLANE DRIVEN TO COVER IN BERLIN

Aerial Sham Battle Climaxes Bitter Political Fight for Reich Control.

Berlin, April 22 (U.P.).—Bringing two months of bitter political campaigning to a climax, more than 50,000 persons gathered in a demonstration before the former imperial palace tonight while a Fascist airplane fought a sham battle with a Republican plane high over Berlin.

The Fascist plane, flying the swastika streamers of Adolph Hitler, cruised over the heads of the Republican and Socialist demonstrators, who had gathered to hear Prussian Premier Otto Braun denounce Hitlerism. Red flags were flying and banners attacking Hitler were upraised when the Fascist plane appeared.

Defying the catcalls and hostile shouts of the crowd, the plane circled low over the palace until a Reichsbanner plane was summoned and took up pursuit of the Hitler craft, finally forcing it to land at Tempelhof Airdrome.

The sky "battle" was merely an instance of the unusual and often sensational developments in the last week of campaigning for State elections which may be a crushing defeat for Hilter or may turn over to him control of the great State of Prussia, with its powerful police force.

If the Fascists should win a majority in the Diet, thus forcing out Premier Braun's Socialist government, they would gain control of two-thirds of Germany, and their position would be more formidable than it would have been had Hitler defeated President Paul von Hindenburg in the recent presidential elections.

The political struggle has been the most nerve-racking experience in German republican history. There have been continual public meetings and demonstrations in Berlin and every city in the countryside, and tension has mounted every day.

Vice Chancellor Hermann Dietrich, campaigning at Dortmund, declared that not even a wizard could fulfill the promises which Hitler has made to the voters.

Untermyer to Join Kreuger Probers

Independent Group of Security Holders Retains Famous Attorney.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—The international probe now being conducted into the Kreuger debacle took a new turn today when formation was announced of an independent protective committee of security holders of Kreuger & Toll Co. and International Match Corporation.

Samuel Untermyer and Siegfried F. Hartman have been retained as counsel. Mr. Untermyer is noted for his cross-examinations of public officials and corporation chieftains in the past which have frequently elicited striking testimony.

In its statement, the new committee questions whether banking houses which underwrote the Kreuger & Toll secured sinking fund debentures and other security issues are best suited to represent the security holders in investigations. Heading the new committee is Bainbridge Colby, formerly Secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet. Other members are Max Winkler, president of the American Council of Foreign Bondholders; Thomas H. Healy, of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service; Denys P. Myers, director of research of the World Peace Foundation, and Lindsay Rogers, professor of public law, of Columbia University.

Shearer Demands Lobbying Report

Says "Pressure" Withheld Statement; Claims Hit by Shortridge.

(Associated Press.)

In interviews, William B. Shearer yesterday demanded a report of the Senate investigation of his activities at the Geneva naval conference in 1927 and Senator Shortridge (Republican), California, said there was no need for a report.

Shearer, a big navy advocate, contended no report was made because it would involve ship building companies in which Andrew W. Mellon and Henry M. Robinson, of California, friend of President Hoover, are interested. Shortridge, who headed the Senate investigating committee, replied that "the testimony spoke for itself."

"The testimony was printed, made available to the Senate and given wide publicity," he said. "Apparently the committee saw no necessity of going farther and making a formal report. Assuredly no influences of any kind or character ever were brought to bear to withhold any report."

Mighty Apparatus Fleet Fights New York Blaze

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—All available fire apparatus in Manhattan was called out tonight to subdue a fire that swept through three commercial buildings and four tenement houses in East Tenth street. Two firemen were injured, one seriously.

Albert J. Perrody, who fell to the sidewalk from the top of a 65-foot extension ladder, suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. Joseph T. Carroll, standing at the 35-foot rung of the ladder, also fell when the release of Perody's weight caused the apparatus to sway. Seventy families were driven from the tenement houses.

2 Georgetown Homes Robbed.

Burglars looted two Georgetown homes yesterday of cash and checks totaling $65, it was reported to police. The robberies were at the homes of Mrs. Muriel Stansbury, 3616 O street northwest, and Robert M. Benford, 3620 O street northwest.

"BUT THE FLESH IS WEAK." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Ivor Novello's play, "The Truth Game," starring Robert Montgomery, supported by Nora Gregor, Heather Thatcher and C. Aubrey Smith. Directed by Jack Conway. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Ups-a-daisy and down in the dell! This goes jogging along, up and down, down and up, over as uneven and long a road as any motion picture vehicle has traveled in many a day.

It has moments of high comedy, highly ridiculous, and fun. And it has moments so ridiculous and so impossible that even high comedy can't quite excuse them. Not only the plot, but the mood and tempo, do a right about face every quarter hour or so, with a somewhat surprising and confusing effect.

Yet, with all the excellent acting according its uncertain journey, "But the Flesh Is Weak" moves with more amusement than boredom and certainly with a total lack of the obnoxious.

Before we get into the mazes of its plot, we want to chalk up two ace performances by old-timers, Robert Montgomery and C. Aubrey Smith, and two equally good and, mayhap, more interesting ones by two swell newcomers, Nora Gregor and Heather Thatcher, she of the monocle.

And now the plot! Florian Clement and Max Clement, father and son, are out to marry money or at least to flirt with it to the extent of a supper here and a loan there. Unfortunately Max has inherited the sentimental streak which led his senior into a romantic but poverty-stricken marriage, so ever so often, a pair of blue eyes with no claim to wealth other than munificent charms, leads Max away from his treasure hunt.

Such a pair of eyes has Rosine, who is herself hunting a marriage of convenience and who comes along at the inopportune moment following Max's meeting with a really likable heiress, Lady Joan. Then senior loses his shirt at cards and Lady Joan and her purse strings become more necessary than Rosine's charms.

It is all a little too sudden, and we're so tired of gentlemen taking baths in public and smacking ladies (particularly when the gentlemen deserve to be smacked). Just when it is about to become opera bouffe, it goes serious on you for a scene or so. However, there is a plentiful sprinkling of laughs—to wit, Edward Everett Horton and Freddie Kerr.

Robert Montgomery, improving rapidly these days, does more than right by that fresh young man, Max. C. Aubrey Smith, as Senior, acquits himself in his usual excellent style.

Nora Gregor (Rosine) is a delicious darling, a sort of combination Dorothy Jordan and Juliette Compton, if you can imagine that mixture of innocence and sophistication. While Heather Thatcher (we like her best of all), monocle, throaty voice and all, is nothing less than a delight, as Lady Joan, and while we're comparing, she did remind us of Ina Claire.

And ladies, you can welcome back Nils Asther, handsome as ever though a little plumper, in a brief, but well-spoken role.

Arthur Tracy, radio's justly popular "Street Singer," heads an entertaining stage show. In splendid voice, he signs, "If I Were King," "Call Me Darling," "Eli Eli" (beautifully, this one), and "You're My Everything." We'd like to get one of these ether maestroes away from his mike, some day, just to see——.

The Vanderbilt Boys, Peg-Leg Bates, Harrison and Fisher, and the Chester Hale Girls round out the bill.

FOX

"YOUNG AMERICA." Fox picturization of the play by John Frederick Ballard, featuring Tommy Conlon, Raymond Borzage, Spencer Tracy, Ralph Bellamy and Doris Kenyon. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Friday night by Don B. Reed.

Frank Borzage, director of any number of smash hits, has scored another bull's-eye with "Young America," treating a rather timeworn subject from some decidedly new angles. The picture displays much that reverts to the genius of its creator—enough to raise it above the classification of another program photoplay to one which ought to please almost any kind of an audience.

A couple of kids have the leading roles, but they are backed by a trio of adult performers, all splendidly cast. Mr. Borzage has taken the affairs of a pair of schoolboy chums and woven into their trials and tribulations, their joy, their heartaches, their smiles and their childish schemes, an authenticity which will carry many a grown-up back to his own grammar school days.

It is the atmosphere which makes "Young America." It is easy to sit back and imagine yourself playing the pranks these kids play. Or to put yourself in the place of the juvenile court judge. Or the druggist, who after his store had been robbed, finds himself the guardian of the boy caught coming out of it.

Art and Nutty are the two boys. Art, an orphan, misunderstood but kind at heart, is always in trouble. When Nutty's grandmother is ill, without funds, the boys go through a transom to get her medicine. Art is caught coming out. He maintains silence to protect Nutty but the court finally learns his story. He is turned over to the wife of the druggist who had been robbed, much to the latter's disgust. Further developments tend to prove the druggist's contention that Art is "the worst boy in town," but there is a wallop in the final scenes which straighten everything out.

Tommy Conlon, as Art, and Raymond Borzage, nephew of the director, are great. Natural and unaffected, they earn major laurels. Most of the comedy is furnished by the rapidly rising Spencer Tracy, as the druggist, while all the tenderness of a mother is appealing as portrayed by Doris Kenyon, too long absent from the screen. Ralph Bellamy, usually a villain, turns out, in this instance, to be a pretty nice juvenile court judge, with ideas that might well be copied by some real courts. Beryl Mercer has another of her typical characterizations, as "Granny," the woman for whom the boys embarked on their career of "crime."

Del Chain and Bobby Gilbert, featured with the Fanchon & Marco "Greetings" Idea, had the customers in a panic last night with their imitation mind-reading act to which was added Chain's comedy chatter and Gilbert's inimitable violin humor. Buster and Brown, acrobatic dancers. Dorothy Thieme, an excellent vocalist, and John and Harriet Griffith, an excellent ballroom adagio team, completed the cast of principals; backed by the Collenette ballet.

Continuing his success of previous weeks, Phil Lampkin offers the Fox orchestra in "Musical Memories," an overture which clicked from first to final note, aided by trombone and cornet solos.

"Hollywood Lights," an unusual and humorous comedy; "The World At Prayer," one of the Magic Carpet of Movietone series, and the usual newsreel completed the bill.

COLUMBIA

"THIS IS THE NIGHT." Paramount picturization of a play by Avery Hopwood, featuring Lily Damita, Thelma Todd, Charlie Ruggles and Roland Young. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

When two such incomparable serio-comics as Charlie Ruggles and Roland Young get together in a play from the pen of Avery Hopwood, let melancholia watch out!

It is an irresistible combination, as "This Is the Night" will eloquently testify. Of course, the title is far from adequate for this hilarious comedy, but then, what title would not be, with a play which includes, besides the two mentioned, Lily Damita, Thelma Todd and Cary Grant?

Like all of the previously viewed Hopwood dramas, characterizations here are nil, the "meat" (if, of course, such there be) is in the situations and the convulsing lines. Picture, if you can, the complications arising out of Roland Young's taking on a "wife" in order to get out of a jam with Javelin-thrower Cary Grant's charming wife, played by Thelma Todd, with Charlie Ruggles coming to the fore with the temporary relief in the form of Lily Damita!

It all works out, ultimately, but not before there is paraded just the swellest collection of misinterpretations, supplemented by excruciating lines which, in situations less provocative of laughs, would border on the indelicate. But with the masterful handling of this company there is not the slight tinge of off-color, but rather does the closeness with which the lines shave the limits of propriety accentuate the outlandishness of the situations.

Roland Young and Charlie Ruggles have most of the picture to themselves, so far as acting honors are concerned. However, without the assistance of Thelma Todd, the exposure, periodically, of whose nether portions motivates most of the misunderstandings, and Lily Damita, of Garbo-ish accent and vivacious personality, "This Is the Night" might have turned out to be some other time.

Aside from the purely entertainment features of the picture, it is of no interest, cinematographically, in its following of the cue of Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights," opening with a musical comedy effect with the various orchestral instruments taking "voice" parts, and finally, unlike the model, merging into straight dialogue. The orchestral effects continue intermittently throughout the picture, and close in much the same manner as it opened, thus adequately rounding out the created illusion that this is not a picture but rather a stage play, the celluloid aspects notwithstanding.

Not satisfied with a comedy such as this for the piece de resistance, the chief entree continues the good work with Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy strutting their stuff as "Helpmates."

"Trout Fishing," another of the Fisherman's Paradise series, deals fly-casting. An issue of the Paramount News completes the bill.

METROPOLITAN

"THE HEART OF NEW YORK." Warner Bros. comedy drama from David Freedman's story "Mendel, Inc.," adapted for the screen by Arthur Caeser and Houston Branch, starring George Sidney, supported by Joe Smith and Charles Dale. Directed by Mervin LeRoy. Reviewed Friday evening by J. F. Brady.

One can not help but like George Sidney and his latest screen effort, "The Heart of New York," for in it he has the opportunity of putting across successfully his impersonation of a man, intensely confident in his own ability to complete an invention, with the sole purpose in mind of its monetary benefits to his wife and children.

This picture should satisfy any one who desires good clean comedy, rapid fire, accented dialogue, interspersed, at times, with sincere pathos, as well as a story having well-defined plot, perfect continuity, and a most capable cast.

In "The Heart of New York" one is treated to the intimate inside story of the lives of the family of Mendel Merantz, their poverty, their hopes and their final happiness; to the untiring efforts of the father who uses the rent money, even under the threat of possible eviction, to perfect a patent on a dish-washing machine; to the continual efforts of an overbearing brother-in-law in trying to secure the credit of Mendel's work, and numerous other events which go to make up a story which tugs at the heart strings, which makes you luagh, which really entertains.

There is hardly a still moment in the film—the action is quick, the dialogue rapid, the situations real and the story plausible and sound.

Throughout the entire picture one is kept interested by the earnestness of the characterization put over by Sidney, who is ably supported by Anna Appel and Alline MacMahon, the neighbor who gives her last insurance money to help out on the patent. The comedy element, led by Sidney, is aided materially by the eccentric team of Dale and Smith.

"The Heart of New York" is a picture which will make you laugh often, sympathize strongly at times, and make you pleased that you saw it.

Auxiliaries are an interesting newsreel, "Sportslants" and a fair comedy, "The Dunker."

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT is violating no confidence, I think, to say that the vaudeville tour of Miss Dorothy Mackaill, who closed an eminently successful week's engagement at the Rialto last night, is very apt to write itself a period next Saturday in Baltimore.

When I stopped by her dressing room in the Rialto last evening, following the last performance, to bid her and her husband a last-minute good-by, Miss Mackaill was reasonably sure that this four-a-day business had come to and end.

There is a picture engagement awaiting her at the Los Angeles end of a long train ride, not to mention a solicitous mother and those home comforts that any star of any gender sorely misses while leaping from crag to crag on the road with a suitcase for a home!

It has been intimated here before, but I can not too strongly reiterate that of all the stellar personalities that Hollywood has filtered through the National Capital during the past twelvemonth, Dot Mackaill stands so near the head of the class as to have no close competition.

And that is not all on account of the gorgeous autographed photograph, either!

This autographed photograph business by the way has a bit of subtlety in it, at that.

Miss Mackaill, with the active connivance of her husband, Mr. Neil Miller, I am led to mistrust, has indited the thing, "Washington, April, 1932-1923."

That is to mark the nine-year period during which I am popularly supposed to have had less sense than I have now. If that is possible.

It is, of course, a depressing commentary on a depressing period in the world's history that the National Theater should be compelled to hang up its shutters through inability to arrive at a reasonable working agreement with an organization that is supposed to have something of the benefit of its members, if no one else, at heart.

There are, of course, two sides to every controversy, but it is at times difficult to perceive the viewpoint of the individual, or group, who says that none may prosper because too many may not.

That is what it amounts to, and, later, this column may undertake to prove it. Thus, probably stigmatizing itself further in the eyes of those who have previously found it theoretically profitable to cut off their noses to spite their own faces.

They tell me the Columbia Players' production of Philip Barry's "Holiday," is going to be a pip—whatever that is. Some sort of apple, I believe, but don't take my word for it. Fruity, at any rate, so they say!

And a lot of people think I never went up in that blimp brought here for the Goodyear Co. by Frank Petrie from Miami, Fla. Don't be silly. That is what still ails me!

Pola Negri, one of the most glamorous figures of the cinema, is apt to be an early booking at the Rialto Theater.

Nothing definite, you understand, but Pola can sing a bit, act a bit and still look a bit, despite the fact that it was so many years ago that she made her screen debut in this country in First National's clever adaptation of Ernst Lubitsch's "Du Barry," presented on this side under the intriguing title of "Passion."

After "Passion," you will readily remember, came "One Arabian Night," an abbreviated American rendition of "Sumurun," and after that, "Gypsy Blood," a camera version of "Carmen" that stood the customers practically on their ears.

By all means, Messrs. Ravenscroft, Collier, Wallach, et al., Pola Negri!

Would it be too much to ask that I be permitted to get a haircut in between times?

Reverting to this guy, Victor McLaglen, and I don't know why anyone should, he has lived in 24 countries and fought in 6 national armies. That gives you some idea. He'll be of age a week from next Tuesday!

And the good old A. P. wire, meaning Associated Press, in case you hadn't heard, just brings me news that Brock Pemberton, one of Broadway's most successful producers, who still calls Emporia, Kans., his home, has decided prosperity is returning. He will carry out an unusually active program next season.

After his prosperous presentation of "Strictly Dishonorable" in 1930, he tried again with "Three Times the Hour," which, as he says, "proved to be what the critics weren't looking for." The rest of last season he spent in retirement while reading new plays.

He has bought four new dramas, all by Americans, and a musical comedy which will be offered under his management beginning, probably in August.

The first is a farce comedy, "Christopher Comes Across," by Hawthorne Hurst, a newspaperman. Based on Hurst's new novel, it concerns the last day spent by Columbus at the Spanish court before sailing for America.

Pemberton seems to like works by newspapermen for he has also bought "East of the Sun," a drama by Bosley Crowther and William DuBois, both reporters. DuBois previously wrote "Pagan Lady," for Lenore Ulric.

The third on his list is a high comedy, "Lovers, Happy Lovers," by Lewis Galantiere, a banker, and John Haussmann, husband of Zita Johann, stage star. The fourth is "White Dragon," a melodrama with a Shanghai background.

The musical comedy is being written by Norman Anthony, Humor Magazine editor. It will have music by Herman Hupfield, composer of "Sing Something Simple," and "When Yuba Blows the Rumba on his Tuba Down in Cuba," which may give a clew to the nature of the show.

As I was saying, the knocking out of a column like this, from time to time isn't what does it, it's the social life that does you in!

ROOSEVELT'S WORDS 'JUST LIKE' SMITH'S

Newspaper Prints "Deadly Parallel" of Speeches on Tariff Law.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—The Evening Post published today, side by side, references to the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill made within the last ten days by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, which caused a flurry in local political circles because of the similarity of the statements.

The Smith quotation came from his Jefferson dinner address in Washington April 13; the Roosevelt quotation from his St. Paul speech April 18.

Smith: "The consequences of the Hawley-Smoot bill have been tremendous, both directly and indirectly. Directly—American foreign trade has been steadily dwindling. * * * Indirectly—the high schedules of the Hawley-Smoot bill caused European nations to raise their own tariff walls not only against us but against each other."

Roosevelt: "The consequences of the Hawley-Smoot bill have been tremendous, both directly and indirectly. Directly, American foreign trade has been steadily dwindling. Indirectly, the high schedules of the Hawley-Smoot bill caused European nations to raise their own tariff walls, and these walls were raised not only against us, but against each other."

Smith had no comment to make about the similarity, but his friends said that in view of the fact he delivered his speech first, no comment was necessary.

Friends of Roosevelt referred questions about the similarity to the governor in Albany.

Farm Board Wheat Passes Purity Test

Examination Is Made at Baltimore After Some Is Condemned.

Baltimore, April 22 (A.P.).—Officials of the Baltimore health department today completed examination of 18 out of 20 carloads of flour made from Farm Board wheat and sent here for distribution by the Red Cross, and reported them chemically pure and fit for human food.

The examination was made by R. F. Korff, of the bureau of chemistry and food, after a complaint had been received by the bureau that some of the flour shipped here was "unfit for human consumption." Korff said the examination he made was from a chemical standpoint, and declared that all of the flour tested showed it was fit for use, although he declined to discuss its quality.

Walter B. Brooks, chairman of the Baltimore Red Cross, said that he would withhold distribution of the flour in two disputed cars until he was "absolutely sure" of its standard. Korff said he did not know whether these two cars were among those examined by him.

Chicago, April 22 (A.P.).—The Government wheat shipped through the Red Cross for Baltimore, Md., charity and condemned as unfit for human use tested satisfactorily before shipment, William M. Baxter, jr., manager of the Red Cross wheat distribution, said today.

Hastings Attacks Bankhead Election

His Charges of Fraud Are Ridiculed by Black in Senate Hearing.

(Associated Press.)

A resonant appeal that John H. Bankhead be unseated as Democratic senator from Alabama was sounded in the Senate yesterday by Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, while Black (Democrat), Alabama, ridiculed his charges of election frauds and irregularities.

Hastings, chairman of the elections subcommittee that voted three to two against seating Bankhead, led the fight to persuade the Senate to send him from the chamber. The election is contested by former Senator J. Thomas Heflin.

In an afternoon session of charge and reply, the Senate continued its consideration of the resolution of Senators Bratton (Democrat), New Mexico, and George (Democrat), Georgia, which would declare Bankhead elected and entitled to his seat.

The resolution is to be voted on early next week. It carries out the recommendation the whole election committee voted—9 to 8—that Bankhead be recognized.

POST'S RECORD TEST TO CONCLUDE TODAY

Work of Judging Will Begin Monday; Late Entries Have Equal Chance.

Gazing over a mountain of phonograph records, The Washington Post-RCA-Victor record contest editor focuses his eyes upon a clock that will mark the close of this epochal competition at 6 p. m. today.

Monday the work of judging nearly 5,000 records, for awards of $700 in merchandise prizes and free audition trips to the Victor laboratories in Camden, N. J., will begin. The list of judges will be made public at that time and records will be sent to their makers at the earliest possible moment.

Until judging has gotten well under way it will be impossible to forecast when the announcement of winners will be made, as sincere and unbiased tests of each entry will be made. Those who enter the contest today will have exactly the same opportunity of winning an award as earlier participants.

Separate Classes Planned.

Each record will be judged upon the character of registration, whether of vocal or instrumental nature, and the decision of the judges will be final. In case of ties duplicate awards will be given. Amateurs and professionals will be judged separately and within their own classification, as indicated on their entry blanks.

Yesterday the number of records made reached a new high level for a single day and represented an unusually large group of professional musicians who are evidently seeking the rich reward that will undoubtedly follow formal "try-outs" at the RCA-Victor laboratory.

Among others encountered by the contest editor during the daily round of Post recording stations were Tillie McGuire Doran and William Doran. Miss Doran is composer and publisher of the souvenir song, "George Washington," the arrangement of which was made by William Doran, who also accompanies her on frequent radio programs and who was at the piano during yesterday's recording made at the establishment of E. F. Droop & Sons.

Variety of Records Shown.

The F. O. Sexton Co., 647 H street northeast; National Furniture Co., Seventh and H streets northwest; Ristig's, 1352 H street northeast, and the Star Radio Co., 409 Eleventh street northwest, were particularly distinguished yesterday by the variety of records entered from these stations.

ILLINOIS DEMOCRATS DEMAND DRY REPEAL

Harmony Features Parley at Which Wet Platform Is Adopted.

Springfield, Ill., April 22 (A.P.).—Illinois Democrats blended their voices in harmony today and whooped it up for a victory in November. They also adopted what leaders termed a dripping wet platform.

The State convention turned into a love fest with the factions that battled vigorously in the primary all pledging their loyalty and offering active support in the coming campaign.

Bruce Campbell, defeated candidate for governor, sounded the keynote by calling on "every loyal Illinois Democrat to forget party differences and discord and to present a united front in the face of the common enemy."

Michael L. Igoe, another gubernatorial candidate in the primary, said: "A majority of our party has spoken, candidates have been nominated, and it now becomes the duty of every loyal Democrat to support the party nominees. I propose to do so. I am a Democrat."

Dry Repeal Urged.

Prohibition received more space in the platform than any other subject. The party went on record as urging repeal of the eighteenth amendment and "all laws pursuant to it" and affirmed its "profound belief that such action would improve economic conditions, restore moral standards, provide employment for more than a million men, save some $45,000,000 which is spent annually in futile efforts to enforce these (prohibition) laws," "end the war of the underworld on the rest of society."

Pending repeal, the platform declaration said, "We demand such modifications of the Volstead act as will bring immediate relief from its oppressive effects." The platform advocated State control of the manufacture and sale of intoxicting liquors and asked repeal of the Illinois search and seizure act, a prohibition enforcement measure.

Delegates Selected.

Judge Henry Horner, gubernatorial nominee; Campbell and Igoe were named delegates at large to the national convention. Illinois Democracy's delegation will support Senator James Hamilton Lewis, as a "favorite son."

Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of Chicago, attacked the Republican opposition, saying nomination of Len Small, former governor, for the office left the Democrats nothing but to make him and William Hale Thompson, former Chicago mayor and Small ally, the issue in November.

The Republicans, meeting also, postponed their State convention until early June. Col. Frank L. Smith, Small's campaign manager, was named temporary chairman.

Famous Lost Mine Thought Refound

New Discovery of Gold in British Columbia Causes Rush of Prospectors.

Atlin, B. C., April 22 (A.P.).—Reports that a half-breed Indian named Smith had discovered gold while dressing a moose near Scurvy Creek has caused prospectors to rush into the country in belief the famous "lost mine" has been relocated.

Smith and other Indians staked out claims and reported their find. Prospectors flew into the district, located near the summit between Wolf Lake and the upper Liard River. They returned here yesterday, saying prospects were "good."

The "lost mine" was discovered in 1874 by John Hamilton, of Victoria, B. C., and five comrades. In two weeks they claimed to have panned $6,000 worth of the metal, better than $70 a day for each man. Their food ran low and scurvy made its appearance. Hamilton said his companions, including a brother of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, of Civil War fame, all died. Hamilton then buried his comrades and made his way to Wrangell.

Arbor Day Stamp Sale Honors Morton, Founder

Nebraska City, Nebr., April 22 (A.P.). The sale of the commemorative arbor day stamp began in Nebraska City today as residents of this Missouri River town and hundreds of visitors honored the memory of former Secretary of Agriculture J. Sterling Morton, the founder. It was the sixtieth anniversary of Arbor Day and the hundredth of Morton's birth.

There were picnics and a program amid the groves of Arbor Lodge, stately Morton mansion which is now a park. Four special postal workers came here from Washington for the stamp sale and 16 other assistants were hired. Officials expected to pass out 1,000,000 stamps. In other postoffices the stamps will not be issued until tomorrow.

Florida Realty Man Suicide in New York

New York, April 22 (U.P.).—Frederick S. Ruth, a real estate operator, interested largely in Florida property, committeed suicide with a shotgun today in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

He left a note addressed to relatives, the whole contents of which were not divulged. It was said, however, to have told them he "could not stand the depression any longer." Mr. Ruth was married, and maintained an apartment at 383 Park avenue. He had registered at the Waldorf Astoria two days ago.

Body Believed Harvard Man's.

Providence, R. I., April 22 (A. P.).—East Providence police believe a body found on the shore of Watchemoket Pond, that town, late this afternoon, to be that of Nathaniel E. Jones, reported missing from Harvard University January 31. Police report that a watch number contained in a circular sent out by Boston police corresponds to the number of a watch found on the body.

Rail Executives Hold Parley.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—The advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives held a closed meeting today to discuss "pending problems," but reached no conclusions, announcement after adjournment for luncheon said. During the three hours of discussion, it was stated, the highway trucking question was not mentioned. Twenty-one railroad executives attended.

Bloodless Rebellion Breaks Among Royal Russian Exiles

Faction in Paris Seeks to Oust Grand Duke Cyril as Pretender.

Paris, April 22 (U.P.).—A "bloodless revolution" within the shadowy ranks of Russia's exiled royalty began tonight with a rebel uprising which may lead to a decisive battle in the law courts of France.

And if the rebels win enough support to overthrow the present pretender to the crumbled throne of the czars, Grand Duke Cyril, they plan to bestow the claim to the rulership of all the Russias on Grand Duke Dmitri, whose wife is the former Audrey Emery, of New York.

The rebellion promises to be the most sensational of any controversy among the royal exiles since they were driven out of Russia by the red armies of bolshevism. Whether Grand Duke Cyril can crush the uprising and maintain his position as a czar without a kingdom was considered doubtful.

An influential section of monarchists who have long been hostile to Cyril decided to launch the test of his power and said they would be willing to carry the case to the courts if necessary to secure a decision.

They pointed out that Cyril had incurred the displeasure of monarchists throughout the world when he acted "on his own" in proclaiming himself the uncrowned king of exiled royalty in 1920. At that time the proclamation caused a rift among Russian exiles and later developments, tending to strengthen Cyril's position, failed to heal the breach.

The hostility remained a matter of dispute among the inner circles of the Russians, however, until tonight, when the anti-Cyril faction came out in open revolt.

GRAND DUKE CYRIL.

Their chief charge against Cyril was that he has no legal right to the pretendership because the Russian constitution demanded that the heir to the throne be born to parents practising the Greek Orthodox religion. Cyril's mother, the Princess Marie of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, was a Protestant at the time of his birth, they said.

The foes of Cyril claimed that the succession should pass to Grand Duke Dmitri, who is Cyril's cousin, and to his American wife, Princess Illyinski, who would become the shadow empress of all the Russias.

VETERAN MARKET OPERATORS GIVE INSIDE EXCHANGE VIEWS

since the first committee summons went to New York.

Mr. Gray informed the committee the two traders, whose April 8 accounts showed heavy short commitments in several leading stocks, had been variously reported "in Florida, California and en route to Australia."

Mr. Rockefeller said he had not seen Bragg in several months, but had talked with Smith in New York about ten days ago. He could give no hint as to his present whereabouts, however.

Brush Justifies Anonymity.

Mr. Brush said he never had operated on the short side under a fictitious name, but believed that practice might be justified in some case, because "if the real names of the short sellers were known, the market might fall out of bed."

Although he had been a large operator for more than ten years, he testified, he had not been in a broker's office more than three or four times during the last three years.

He has taken the short side of the market quite consistently during the last 18 months, but he stopped increasing his short commitments about five weeks ago, or about the time, as it later developed, that Mr. Rockefeller abandoned the bear position.

"I work by my own rules, and there are many successful traders who disagree with me, but I never go into any stock until I know all about the corporation, its earnings and prospects, the men who are running it, and whether it is located in Maine or California. And when I take a position, I keep it for a while—four or five months, or maybe a year."

Market Letter Authors.

"Do you believe that the majority of the margin traders in the stock market inform themselves on the values of the stock they buy or sell?" Senator Glass asked.

Brush hesitated an instant and then, turning to the stenographer, asked that his answer be left out of the record.

"I am going to give my frank opinion on that, and I hope it may be excluded from the record. Senator, it's pathetic, the basis on which the public buys and sells stocks."

He went on to tell of "a couple of fellows who just came over from Greece two or three months ago and began putting out a market letter.

"They told a lot of people that X-Y-Z was a good buy at the market and in they rushed; and they knew no more about X-Y-Z than that inkstand there."

How "Keokuk" Is Roped In.

In describing the practice of pushing certain stocks up a point or two near the close of the day, Brush said the operation was simple for a well-financed market specialist.

"Suppose I go in at the close of the market and steel is selling at 29. I bid it up to 30. The market closes a point up.

"That night some fellow out in Keokuk says to his mother over a stein of beer—if they have it out there—'Look! Steel is up; let's get in on it.' In the morning he goes in and I sell him the very stock used to put the price up the night before. Then, in an hour or so, down goes the price."

Twice during his testimony, Brush suggested the committee buy him a railroad ticket South, instead of sending him back to New York.

"They'll shoot me if this stuff I'm telling you gets on the ticker," he said.

Both Sides Lose Sleep.

He said in answer to another question that sharp price declines frequently were caused "by nervous men rather than a nervous market."

"You know, senator, a bear loses as much sleep when the market's going up as a bull does when it's going down," the witness continued. "I had some tough days myself last summer during the moratorium rally, and again in February in the R-F-C rally."

Brush added that these trying times in the life of a bear could be weathered by one who had the money, but that the little fellows have to give up on such occasions.

In the long run, he believed, only the fellow who took a determined position on the right side and held it in spite of—practically everything, was a money-maker.

"I never go in for that in-and-out racket. It's too fast for me. But I've seen 'em all operate. They chisel in and out—a fourth, or a half, at a time."

What He Sees in Store.

"You mean you are afraid to go back to New York because you think they might try an Al Capone?" Senator Brookhart interposed.

"Al Capone was a piker compared with what they'd do to me," the witness answered.

Brush said he was "in a room with three or four men in Wall street" one afternoon several years ago when they perfected plans for lifting an unnamed stock a few points on the closing quotations.

"I have never been in a broker's office since," he concluded.

Asked about the possibility of collusion between floor specialists and pool operators, Brush said the specialist's information could be very helpful, but he had never known of a case in which it had been disclosed. Neither had he ever heard of collusion between a brokerage firm and the groups which circulate the market letters.

Collusion Held Possible.

"But these things are possible?" Mr. Gray pressed.

"Possible, yes; but I don't think they really exist."

He told of one case recently in which a representative of the stock exchange investigated the entire situation in relation to a certain stock between two consecutive sales because some slight irregularity had been suspected in the transaction. Since the rumor had proved without foundation, he asked permission to withhold details of the case.

Brush admitted that the primary objective of bear operations is to make money.

"Every operation I ever heard anything about was for the purpose of making money," he elaborated. "Nobody is there for his health."

"First Bull on Radio" Called.

Questioned about the short-sales statistics presented last week by Richard Whitney, president of the stock exchange, Brush acknowledged they did not give any indication of the in-and-out operations for the short account, but only the net change in position from day to day.

In developing this point, Gray showed that short sales might aggregate 500,000 shares in the morning. If 400,000 shares were covered in the afternoon in this hypothetical case, the statistics would show an increase of but 100,000 shares short for the day, while half a million shares actually would have influenced the price sentiment of the market.

Michael J. Meehan, famous wherever stocks are bought and sold as the "first bull on Radio," was summoned by the committee yesterday. Although he was one of the biggest bulls in the street during 1924-25, he has been watched as a powerful bear during recent months. He will appear next week.

ALIENISTS TO QUIZ MASSIE REFUSED

that the law acknowledged no "honor" motive as justification.

"The evidence, even as admitted by the defense," said Kelley, "shows the defendants kidnaped Kahahawai and therefore are guilty of a felony. It shows also that Massie, at the moment he went insane, was threatening Kahahawai with a pistol—also a felony.

"Kahahawai, then, was killed while Massie was committing two felonies—one immediate, the other more remote.

"The defendant's own testimony also shows all four of them planned the kidnaping, and that Massie carried his pistol to the Fortescue house (scene of the killing) that morning. Conspiracy therefore is evident.

Darrow Silent on Plans.

"A peculiar situation arises then that the jury might find Massie guilty of manslaughter instead of second degree murder on account of insanity, but at the same time the other defendants could be found guilty of second degree murder."

Under the law the jury can find the defendants guilty of nothing more than second degree murder, since that is the technical charge upon which they were brought to trial, but they might reach a verdict entailing lesser punishment. The penalty for second degree murder is 20 years to life imprisonment; for manslaughter, 10 years as a maximum.

Darrow spent the day preparing proposed instructions to the jury, but would not indicate what they would contain. The defendants, accompanied by Mrs. Helen Ripley and Robert Bell, sister and brother of Mrs. Fortescue, spent today at a beach outing, resting pending resumption of the trial tomorrow.

Kelley predicted the trial would run into the middle of next week. He said his argument to the jury would require no more than an hour or so. Darrow, however, expects to take three or four hours.

GEN. KEIFER EXPIRES; WAS HOUSE SPEAKER

Death of Sheridan Comrade Leaves Only Two Surviving Union Generals.

Springfield, Ohio, April 22 (A.P.).—Maj. Gen. J. Warren Keifer, who won promotion in the same battle that Sheridan made his famous ride, died today, leaving only two known living Union generals who fought in the Civil War.

The 96-year-old warrior, also remembered as former Speaker of the National House of Representatives and an advocate of peace, succumbed at his home here from infirmities of advanced age. He lapsed into a coma yesterday and never regained consciousness.

Maj. Gen. Adelbert Ames, of Tewksbury, Mass., and Ormond, Fla., and Brig. Gen. John Fred Pierson, of New York and Newport, R. I., are the only two known Union generals to outlive him. Gen. Ames, who is 95, is reported in good health. Gen. Pierson is 91.

Gen. Keifer fought in 27 battles and was wounded four times. He was nominated for promotion to brigadier general by President Lincoln for his conduct in commanding the Third Division of the Sixth Army Corps in the battle of Cedar Creek, where Gen. Phil Sheridan made his famous ride. Shortly after the assassination of Lincoln, Keifer became a major general.

He was elected to Congress in 1877 and served four successive terms, being Speaker of the House from 1881 to 1883 and served three more terms starting in 1904. He returned to active duty in the Spanish-American War, as commander of the First Division, Seventh Army Corps, at Miami, Fla., and later was commander in chief of the Spanish War Veterans. As an opponent of war, he addressed the International Union of Peace at Brussels in 1910.

Two sons survive, W. W. Keifer, of Springfield, and Joseph W. Keifer, jr., of Bostwick, Nebr. Funeral services will be held Monday.

(Associated Press.)

The House adjourned late yesterday out of respect to the memory of Maj. Gen. Keifer.

Guardian's Editor Drowns in England

E. T. Scott and Son in Boat When It Capsizes; Lad Clings to Keel.

Windermere, England, April 22 (A. P.).—Edward Taylor Scott, editor of the Manchester, Guardian, was drowned in Lake Windermere this afternoon.

Mr. Scott was the son of the famous C. P. Scott, managing director of the Guardian, who died in his eighty-sixth year January 1, this year.

Mr. Scott, accompanied by his son, Richard, put out in a dinghy to board his yacht in the lake today. The dinghy capsized and the lad clung to the keel while his father, who was a strong swimmer, struck out for shore. After swimming about 50 yards he disappeared.

Mr. Scott was 48 years old and a native of Manchester and had been editor of the Guardian since 1929. After his graduation at Rugby and Oxford and the London School of Economics he became private secretary and aid-de-camp to Sir Sydney Oliver, governor of Jamaica, and retained that post from 1907 until 1909.

Guarded Miners Driven From Shaft by Pickets

Richmond, Mo., April 22 (A.P.).—A group of miners protected by a sheriff's force and accompanied by a large delegation of business men was driven away by 200 pickets described as members of the United Mine Workers when they attempted to go to work today at Mine 21 of the Crispin Coal Co. here. The pickets were armed with clubs. Several blows were struck.

Robert W. Bates, owner of the mine, said proceedings to cite some of the pickets for contempt of a circuit court injunction would be started immediately. After an idleness of nearly seven months, due to wage disputes, the mining company attempted to resume work under an agreement with the Ray County Miners Association, not affiliated with the United Mine Workers Union.

Magnus Johnson Plans To Run for Congress

St. Paul, Minn., April 22 (A.P.).—Magnus Johnson, who, as a United States senator in 1923 decided life in Washington was one contest after the other, came out of near political retirement today to attempt a "comeback."

He filed as a candidate for a Farmer-Labor nomination for representative in Congress in the June 20 primary. In the race Minnesota is scheduled to select its nine representatives at large because its redistricting act was recently held invalid.

Jacoby Will Marry Tennis Star After 2-Day Courtship

Dallas, Tex., April 22 (A.P.).—Cupid scored a grand slam in hearts when Oswald Jacoby left the bridge table for the tennis court.

It was love at first sight. The New York bridge expert saw Miss Mary Zita McHale, Dallas tennis star, in action five days ago. His heart did a topspin. Today their engagement was announced. The wedding bells will ring next Monday at the rectory of Sacred Heart Cathedral.

The 21-year-old bride-elect, a graduate of Southern Methodist University, is the National Public Park Women's singles tennis champion.

She doesn't know how to play contract bridge and has played only a few games of auction. Jacoby wields a racket with more than ordinary ability, but isn't good enough to beat Miss McHale.

Say, man," he exclaimed, "I hope I am lucky enough to hold the matches fairly close in our future sets."

And about bridge:

"Just wait, I'll show her how to play contract as well as she now plays tennis and that will be plenty good."

Jacoby, one of the participants in the recent Lenz-Culbertson bridge tournament, is 29 years old. He is a graduate of Columbia University.

Arriving in Dallas five days ago to give lectures on contract, he was invited to play tennis at the Dallas Lawn Tennis Club.

A bad return from Jacoby's opponent sent the ball rolling into an opposite court. The bridge expert raced over to retrieve. He scooped the ball up with his racket and right there looked at a pretty sun-tanned face and into the hazel eyes of Miss McHale, who also was playing.

He returned to his court and told a friend he wanted to marry "that girl over there," pointing to Miss McHale. An introduction was arranged.

After a whirlwind courtship of two days, Jacoby's proposal of marriage was accepted, and announced today.

They plan to leave immediately after the wedding for New York. Mr. Jacoby's mother is scheduled to arrive at Dallas Saturday to attend the wedding.

MISS JOSEPHINE BRUIN RITES

Services Will Be Conducted Today in Alexandria.

The body of Miss Josephine Bruin, 83 years old, who died in Staunton Thursday, was brought to Alexandria yesterday and taken to Demaine's funeral home. The body was removed later to the residence of Mrs. Mary E. Bruin, 1623 Duke street, where funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Interment will be in the Methodist Protestant cemetery.

Miss Bruin is survived by a sister, Mrs. J. W. Parish, of Newark, Dela., and a brother, Dr. M. R. Bruin, of Los Angeles, Calif. She was a daughter of the late Joseph and Martha Bruin.

GLENN BROWN DIES IN HOSPITAL AT 78

Former Architect Here Was Secretary-Treasurer of American Institute.

Glenn Brown, architect and designer of a number of bridges in and around Washington, died yesterday in a Newport News hospital at the age of 78. Active in civic improvement, as the secretary and treasurer of the American Institute of Architects from 1900 for more than a decade, he worked constantly for the artistic betterment of Washington.

Born in Fauquier County, Va., Mr. Brown spent his early childhood on the family plantation in Caswell County, N. C., where he remained until shortly after the Civil War. He then lived in Washington and Alexandria, Va., until he was sent to Washington and Lee University for two years and then to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the study of architecture.

He returned to this city and opened an office here where he remained in active practice until about six years ago. Nearly all of his time was taken up with government work at Quantico, Va., during and after the World War.

In his work of beautifying the country, he organized the Public Art League of America, and was elected corresponding member of the Royal Institute of Architects of Great Britain, and of French, Belgium and Italian architectural societies. He was a member of the Society of Arts and Letters and an associate of the National Academy of Design.

He wrote extensively on sanitation in plumbing of which he made a study. He also wrote a history of the United States Capitol, which was published as a Senate document, and accounts and memoirs of the historic episodes of his time.

He is survived by his two sons, Glenn M. Brown and Bedford Brown, and a sister, Mrs. Lucy Lennox Uhler.

Newport News, Va., April 22 (A.P.). The body of Glenn Brown, 77, nationally known architect and author, who died early today, left here tonight for Washington by steamer, and interment will take place tomorrow in Rock Creek Cemetery in that city.

Mr. Brown died at 6:30 this morning at Elizabeth Buxton Hospital, following ten months' illness.

MARIA LOUGHBOROUGH DIES

Funeral to be Conducted Monday With Burial at Oak Hill.

Funeral services will be held Monday at the home of Col. and Mrs. Oliver. Interment will be in Oak Hill Cemetery. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Joseph Clark, of Washington, and Miss Elizabeth Loughborough, of New York.

Mrs. Duff-Shea was born in Baltimore but had spent nearly 67 years of her life in Washington. Requiem high mass will be held in St. Aloysius Church at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Lady Bailey Missing In Flight Over Swamp

Moscow, April 22 (A.P.).—Lady Bailey, British flier, was missing late tonight on a flight between Kovno, Lithuania, and Moscow. It was believed she had been forced down somewhere near the western Soviet border.

At this time of year that district is swampy and flooded by spring rains, making landing hazardous. Lady Bailey undertook her flight against the advice of the Soviet Union Air League officials, who notified her that conditions were unfavorable.

Polish Dictator Returns Home.

WRIT FREES LAWYER IN AUTO LITIGATION

Seized on Contempt Order After Failing to Obey Court's Car Ruling.

A writ of habeas corpus yesterday served to release R. Hugh Jarvis, an attorney, of West Virginia, from the custody of Deputy United States Marshal John J. Clarkson, to whose custody he had been committed on a contempt of court order of Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

Jarvis and his wife, Frances S. Jarvis, had been ordered to turn over a Pierce-Arrow automobile to Bernard W. Conger, who had been appointed by the court as receiver for the machine, upon which Harry Sommers, Inc., claimed to have a $1,000 interest.

He failed to turn the machine over to the receiver, and yesterday he was taken into custody for contempt of court. Despite his explanation that the machine was in West Virginia, and that it was not equipped with tags so that it could be moved, he was held in custody until he obtained release, by the habeas corpus writ, which is returnable May 2.

Jarvis, who was accompanied to court by State Senator John L. Hatfield, a cousin of the United States senator of the same name, informed Justice Adkins that he expected to settle the case early next week. He admitted, he said, that he owed the company $1,000, secured by two notes which they were given at the time of the purchase of the car by Mrs. Jarvis.

Cafe Owner Denies Assault.

Sam Alex, proprietor of a lunchroom at 1922 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, yesterday entered a plea of not guilty when he was brought to Police Court to face a charge of having assaulted Charlie Auinger, of 2102 H street northwest. The case was continued until today. The restaurateur is alleged to have slashed Auinger's face with a knife.

PUBLIC ROBBERY.

The first witness who followed Richard Whitney upon the stand in the Senate's stock exchange inquiry completely demolished the false facade set up by Mr. Whitney. This witness was himself a heavy seller of stocks. He laid bare some of the methods whereby stock exchange gamblers can wreck the fortunes of investors in the nation's industrial corporations. Mr. Whitney's testimony was calculated to show that speculation was necessary and that it could not easily be employed, if at all, in the deliberate wrecking of values. Mr. Brush, the next witness, admitted that combinations of speculators could and do rig the market to their own advantage and to the loss of investors.

The revelations already made are sufficient to convince the public that conspiracies to raid the market were actually consummated. The perpetrators of these raids were both Americans and foreigners. The committee is gradually exposing the ramifications of these operations and defining the methods whereby gamblers are enabled to fleece the public. Some of these methods, whether permitted by the New York Stock exchange or not, are inherently dishonest and must be made punishable by law if the public is to be protected. They are the methods of cheats and swindlers. Even in Mr. Whitney's testimony it was developed that international bankers maintained a false market for foreign bonds while these "securities" were floated off upon the investing public. Bonds thus sold have lost one-half of their nominal value. Investors have lost millions of dollars.

The stock market disclosures, following those in regard to the flotation by international bankers of foreign bonds of questionable value, afford one explanation of the reason why it has been difficult for the country to recover business confidence. The efforts of the Government to stabilize conditions and build up confidence were destroyed by financial pirates who scooped into their own pockets the fruits of every increase of prices. They did this by knocking down what President Hoover, his advisers, and Congress had laboriously built up.

Public opinion will not tolerate the system which has been used to ruin investors. It is not a question of protecting "lambs" who are fleeced while trying to speculate. It is a question of protecting industry and business against blacklegs who do not hesitate to strike down the national welfare for their own profit. The "speculation" which the virtuous Mr. Whitney so unctuously defended is in fact a gambling system, which foreign and domestic crooks are permitted to employ for the destruction of American business and industry.

Perhaps Congress will find it desirable to establish a licensing system for brokers and operators in stocks of concerns doing an interstate business. Under such a system the Government could supervise stock exchange methods and put a stop to swindling operations. Supervision by the Government of flotations of foreign loans is obviously necessary in the public interest.

MOONEY DENIED PARDON.

In denying a pardon to Thomas J. Mooney, Gov. Rolph of California struck a powerful blow against the forces of lawlessness and anarchy which are trying to break down the administration of justice in the United States. Mooney was convicted of bombing a Preparedness Day parade in which 10 persons were killed and 40 injured. He has been denied a pardon by four different governors after exhaustive investigations. Let him rest behind the bars where all felons belong.

In recent years Mooney has been the beneficiary of organized communistic agitation. The real purpose of the movement which is carried on in his name is to promote communism and anarchy. Mooney is merely the rallying point around which radicals of all stripes join hands. Mooney is only a symbol of the communist cause in America. By setting him up as a martyr to "capitalism" the agitators seek to break down the machinery of law enforcement and to foment class war.

It is unfortunate that many fanatical and loose-thinking citizens have aligned themselves with this malign cause. The courts have pronounced Mooney guilty of a heinous crime. Every responsible official who has weighed the evidence for and against him has upheld that decision. Citizens who attempt to set aside the machinery of justice by substituting sentimental drivel for concrete evidence are playing into the hands of the invidious forces that are pounding against the structure of government. The calm and seasoned judgment of California's supreme court and chief executives again emphasizes the wrong position into which these duped individuals have placed themselves.

Gov. Rolph might have contented himself with raising legal obstacles against Mooney's plea. But he emphatically declares his conviction that Mooney is guilty. Mooney has not raised a shred of new evidence to prove otherwise. That ought to end the matter. There is no further excuse for pleading the cause of the dynamiter. It is time for the so-called "liberals" and labor organizations to wake up to the fact that they have been used as the cat's-paw of communistic agitators.

IN SHAKESPEARE'S MEMORY.

The Folger Shakespeare Library will be dedicated today, which is the anniversary of Shakespeare's birth and death. No other building devoted to a similar purpose can compare in beauty or value of contents with the exquisite structure which is now added to the wealth of the National Capital. The Folger collection of Shakespeareana is without parallel, here or abroad. Its stores of material will be consulted hereafter by scholars from all parts of the world. In another section of The Post will be found full details regarding the Folger library and its contents.

In Stratford-on-Avon today the new Shakespeare theater will be dedicated. Americans have contributed liberally to its construction. The two events in Washington and England eloquently emphasize the strength of the tie that binds English-speaking peoples through their mutual recognition of the supremacy of Shakespeare "in the realms of gold."

As the centuries unroll, men of all tongues obtain a clearer idea of the eminence of Shakespeare, as a mountain looms up better at a distance. Shakespeare is now recognized as the one genius whose intellect comprehended all human nature, and whose powers of expression were not only the happiest, but the most comprehensive ever bestowed upon mortal. He attained heights and sounded depths never before or afterwards explored. His temperament and environment were felicitous, and his genius flowered at the fortunate moment when the English language was whatever he chose to make it. He glorified it, and he is the standard whereby it is fixed.

The labor and expense devoted to the collection of Shakespeare material, and the splendid liberality with which it is placed forever at the disposal of Americans in this Capital, will perpetuate the memory of Henry C. Folger. He honored himself in this work, and all lovers of literature and the humanities are delighted to honor him.

A BOGUS PROMISE.

An adventure in the realm of price-fixing is put forward by the House banking and currency committee as its contribution to the fight against depression. When a subcommittee approved the measure, known as the Goldsborough bill, it attracted little serious attention. Now that it is sponsored by the full committee, price-fixing becomes a momentous issue which Congress must meet.

This bill would interpolate the following language into the Federal Reserve act:

> It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States that the average purchasing power of the dollar as ascertained by the Department of Labor in the wholesale commodity markets for the period covering the years 1921 to 1929 shall be restored and maintained by the control of the volume of credit and currency.

The Federal Reserve Board and the Secretary of the Treasury are directed to make that policy effective.

The pernicious nature of this bill is apparent to any one who understands the workings of the Federal Reserve system. At present the Federal Reserve Board is doing its utmost to check the decline in commodity prices and to start business on an upward trend. But it has no magic power over prices and business. Indications are that the board will succeed in stemming the decline of values. Yet deflationary forces may override any measures that the board may invoke. In the face of this delicate situation an arbitrary order from Congress to produce a higher price level sounds like a child's prattle about holding back the sea.

If prices can be turned in an upward direction, that will be accomplished by the Federal Reserve Board without any directions from Congress. If not, an order to attempt the impossible might throw the whole financial situation into chaos. Moreover, the board is merely trying to turn prices back toward normal and thereby stimulate business. The House committee asks that prices be fixed at around the 1926 level. It is difficult to believe that this committee is so naive as to expect that the shouting of "ayes" in Congress can bring the price structure back to where it was six years ago.

Is this the method by which the Democrats plan to restore prosperity? It is brought forward by a Democratic committee against the advice of the administration's financial experts. Should this blunder be pushed through Congress and upset the sound credit expansion policy of the Federal Reserve Board, the Democratic party would be entitled to full credit for that achievement. Prosperity by price-fixing would make an excellent Democratic campaign slogan—from the Republican point of view. A bogus promise of magic recovery would clinch the Democratic reputation for blundering at the crucial moment and make the drive for 1932 campaign funds quite a useless effort.

STOP ALIEN SMUGGLING.

Secretary Doak's address and the resolution adopted by the Daughters of the American Revolution once more call attention to the grave problem of protecting American workingmen against alien competition. Under the drastic regulations laid down by President Hoover the admission of laborers to this country has been virtually stopped. Yet many foreigners are smuggled across the border lines. Official estimates place the number of aliens unlawfully in this country at 400,000.

The favorite trick for bringing foreigners into the United States without sanction of the law is to camouflage them as seamen. In this way some criminal aliens who have been deported from this country make their way back and continue their depredations upon society. Foreign ships bring into American ports large numbers of aliens disguised as seamen, who go ashore and never return. Large sums of money are frequently paid to the pirates who carry on this business. Yet the Government is helpless to stop it.

For several years Senator King has been attempting to secure approval of a bill that would prevent the smuggling of aliens as seamen. The measure is still pending before the Senate immigration committee, having been recommitted for further hearings. Every effort ought to be made to translate this bill into law before Congress adjourns.

One other factor of vital importance at this time is the appropriation for the immigration service. In accordance with its arbitrary program of trimming every department's budget 10 per cent, the allowance to the Bureau of Immigration will be cut $1,000,000. Unless this mistake is corrected several hundred men will have to be dismissed, thus exposing the American borders to a greater influx of alien vagrants and criminals. This is not economy, but reckless disregard of the country's welfare. Taxpayers are certain to lose if the border patrols are weakened at this critical time and the competition of cheap alien labor with jobless American men is increased. Ample funds should be available, not only to guard the borders against alien smuggling, but to deport alien criminals and those who are here unlawfully.

Now to make the prohibition muddle complete the Antisaloon League ought to come out for a referendum to determine whether there should be a referendum.

A good practice for the imagination is to speculate as to what Gen. Dawes told the ways and means committee at the bonus hearing in addition to his statements that were mild enough to print.

If the stock market can't hold its own when the bears are in Washington, the Senate may get mad and send them home.

If there is any one who feels worse about the Mooney decision than Mooney himself it must be Mayor Jimmie Walker.

SHAKESPEARE'S CHOICE OF WORDS

From "Table Talk" by William Hazlitt.

We have a great living instance among writers that the quality of a man's productions is not to be estimated in the inverse ratio of their quantity. I mean in the Author of Waverley, the fecundity of whose pen is no less admirable than its felicity. Shakespeare is another instance of the same prodigality of genius; his materials being endlessly poured forth with no niggard or fastidious hand, and the mastery of the execution being (in many respects at least) equal to the boldness of the design.

As one example among others that I might cite of the attention which he gave to his subject, it is sufficient to observe, that there is scarcely a word in any of his more striking passages that can be altered for the better. If any person, for instance, is trying to recollect a favourite line, and can not hit upon some particular expression, it is in vain to think of substituting any other so good. That in the original text is not merely the best, but it seems the only right one. I will stop to illustrate this point a little. I was at a loss the other day for the line in Henry V,

"Nice customs curtsy to great kings."

I could not recollect the word nice: I tried a number of others, such as old, grave, &c.—they would none of them do, but seemed all heavy, lumbering, or from the purpose: the word nice, on the contrary, appeared to drop into its place, and be ready to assist in paying the reverence due. Again,

"A Jest's prosperity lies in the ear
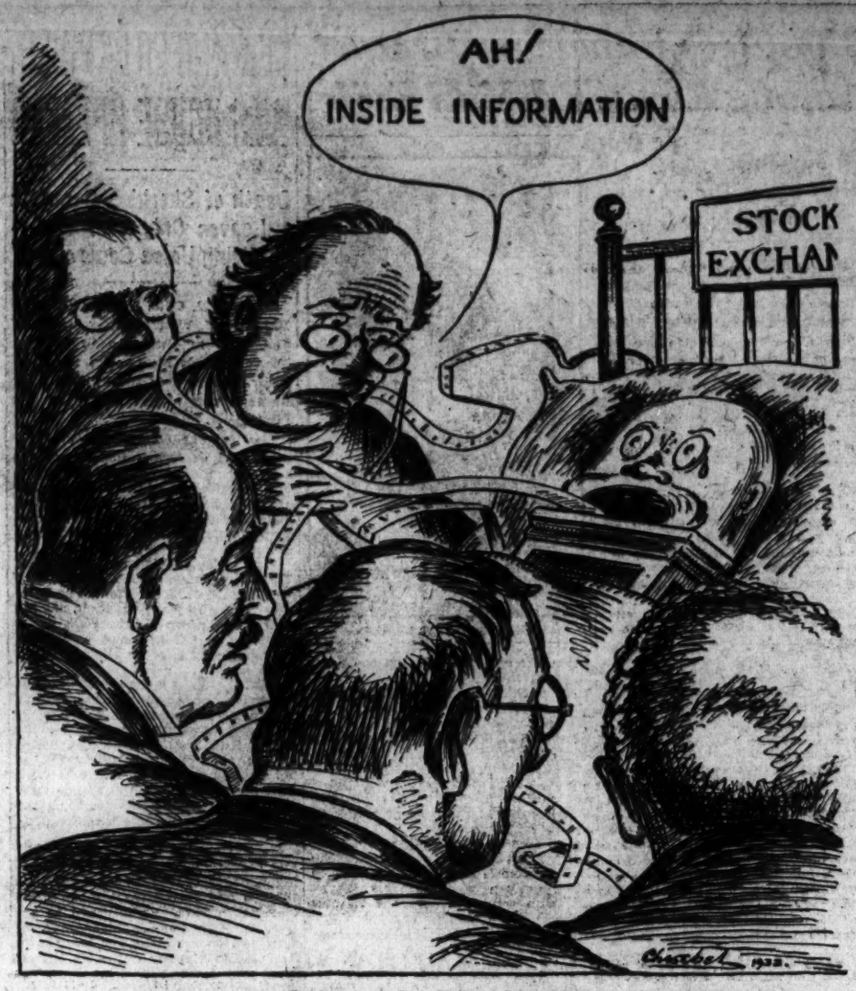
Of him that hears it."

I thought, in quoting from memory, of "A jest's success," "A jest's renown," &c. I then turned to the volume, and there found the very word that of all others expressed the idea. Had Shakespeare searched through the four quarters of the globe, he could not have lighted on another to convey so exactly what he meant—a casual, hollow, sounding success!

I could multiply such examples, but that I am sure the reader will easily supply them himself; and they show sufficiently that Shakespeare was not (as he is often represented) a loose or clumsy writer. The bold, happy texture of his style, in which every word is prominent, and yet can not be torn from its place without violence, * * * is (one should think) the result either of vigilant pains-taking, or of unerring, intuitive perception, and not the mark of crude conceptions, or "the random, blindfold blows of ignorance."



Poisoned by Bear Meat!

POST HASTE.

It was just as well Gen. Dawes could appear personally at the House hearing. He would not have been permitted to transmit all his emphasis by radio.

The railroads are also going into the trucking business, so the prospects are good for another crop of oversupply.

One New York broker is quoted as wishing his name might appear in the Senate list of bears, as he thought it would help his credit and rehabilitate his reputation for astuteness.

The Japanese war minister says the nine power treaty will not be permitted to apply to Manchuria. Certainly not, it refers to China, and was signed by the constituted Japanese government.

The Supreme Court of Illinois permits Chicago to collect three years' back taxes. Judge Capone can not longer delay a Western trip to review the case, so it may happen.

Secretary Stimson arrived in Geneva in good time to enlist in the war to defeat France's League of Nations army.

What has become of the prophets who said India would rise as one man if British authority maintained order and disciplined Gandhi?

The principal importer of oil is selling its foreign properties to the Standard of New Jersey, a company that can use the production abroad. If there were ever any doubt that the oil excise tax would produce no revenue, there isn't any now.

England is doubling the height of her new tariff wall, probably having just heard of the Smoot-Hawley act.

The climate of Honolulu did not interfere with another remarkable coincidence; the defense alienist found Lieut. Massie insane and the prosecutor's expert declared him normal.

It taxes even the imagination of the average observer to keep up with the proposals seriously introduced in Congress as practical revenue measures.

What a terrible time we must have had splitting nickels during the boom time of '29, when there was less currency in circulation than now.

A relief station is needed on Capitol Hill for congressmen with a sense of humor who are suffering from suppressed risibilities.

It is going to be interesting to see whether Mr. Kipling's estimate of the female of the species will be sustained by the Senate investigation of the lady bears.

Al Smith not only hasn't had to shed any vestments, but he will have to learn shadow boxing before attacking Gov. Roosevelt's last speech.

A "CRYBABY" NATION!

The depression, according to Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, in the Forum and Century, has disclosed the fact that the American Nation which has always prided itself on its good sportsmanship and on its ability to be a good loser is actually a nation of panicky crybabies.

As a nation we are good sports when we are winning everything in sight. We developed the delusion that we could never lose. Such delusions are psychologically disastrous.

The depression has shown up the average American as a superstitious, socially maladjusted, politically naive, economically unawakened, psychologically immature adolescent crying for the lost lollypop of prosperity, and pathetically incapable of doing anything fundamental or constructive about it.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE:

For reasons that aren't quite clear to me, you wish to change schools.

I admit, without argument, that the university of your choice has many advantages—every advantage, in fact, that money can provide.

But it has disadvantages that don't show on the surface, and they far outweigh the advantages.

Many of the girls—both graduate students and undergraduates—smoke and drink and pet.

That, I concede, is their private business and none of mine. But since you haven't acquired these habits, and their effect sometimes is disastrous, I am reluctant to place you in an environment where common example might tempt you to acquire them.

If you must learn these habits, you can do it without paying tuition.

Another and greater objection to this school is the fact that many of its professors are atheists or agnostics. Though their duty requires no reference to the subject, one way or the other, they teach their pupils to believe there is no God.

I think you have too much intelligence to be fooled by them, but why sit at the feet of instructors you can't respect?

Atheists seldom impress people who can think, for they never deny God in the dignified, kindly and matter-of-fact way that intelligent parents dispose of Santa Claus. They never have the calm and detached manner of scientists correcting an error.

Always they seem ablaze with resentment, rebellion and malice. They are like sullen schoolboys in revolt against the head master, thrilled by their own daring and determined to be naughty at any cost.

They aren't mentally honest. They merely deny God and make no effort to find an alternative. They see creation, with its countless intricate laws functioning in obedience to some omnipotent power, and yet deny the existence of a Creator. Could you trust a teacher who showed you a complicated machine and told you the metal assembled itself without intelligent direction?

Perhaps this school would do you no harm, but I won't spend good money to expose you to untruth while other schools offer "book learnin'" without Bolshevik propaganda. Love, DAD.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Detroit News.

Under the new congressional reapportionment Minnesota lost one congressman, Missouri lost three, and New York gained two. Now a decision by the United States Supreme Court has invalidated the State reapportionments in these three States because the Legislatures in each instance undertook to make effective bills which the governors declined to sign.

Interesting results are probable in November. Because New York gained, probably only two of its 45 congressmen under the new deal need be elected at large. But unless hurried legislative action occurs in Missouri and Minnesota, the former's 13 and the latter's 9 members of the next House must be chosen by each State's full vote. The election of so many members at large will become a rare political episode.

It could be a useful development. House control might easily be thus determined and the people in the States affected should be less influenced by personalities and more by issues. Probably the candidate for President carrying one or both States would secure from one or both solid congressional delegations of his own political faith.

Contagious Sin.
Buffalo News.

No wonder racketeers are vile. It must degrade anybody to do business with officials who will take bribes.

Diplomatic Suggestion.
Springfield Republican.

Senator Reed has a simple explanation of the movement for the reduction of war debts: "There are, I am ashamed to say, a lot of Americans who get asked to tea by a countess, and immediately break into tears and cancel the debt." To speed things up the British government evidently ought to create more countesses.

But Straddling Is Hard.
Toledo Blade.

Every congressman is anxious to represent enough of his home folk to insure reelection.

Tammany on Spot.
New York Times.

Nowhere was more pain caused by the Smith speech than in the inner circles of Tammany. Its great minds now feel compelled to make a political choice, and nothing could be more distasteful to them. Their previous plans were knocked all askew by the insubordinate and irrepressible "Al" Smith. It had been all arranged to send an uninstructed delegation to the Democratic convention, the members of which would be prepared meekly to accept their instructions from Tammany when the time came to vote for presidential candidates. They would improvise their lifelong preference for this or that man, according to the orders which they got at the moment. But now it seems as if an earlier decision would have to be made by the Tammany chieftains. Their favorite tactics are to play fast and loose with Gov. Roosevelt, and other possible nominees, getting all they can from Albany in the meantime, and waiting to see how much more they could get by going one way or the other at Chicago. But after the Smith outburst, it begins to look as if they would soon be called upon with an imperative "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

No More Bleeding.
Arkansas Gazette.

Long ago the doctors abandoned the idea that bleeding the patient would cure all his ailments, and sooner or later the same light may dawn on the tax-levying agencies.

But They're Not!
Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Jefferson Day follows Jackson Day. If banquet tables were polling places the Democrats would have won this election twice already.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Threatened Pay Cuts and 10 Per Cent Slash in Appropriations Can Be Averted by the Sales Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You are doing nobly in calling attention to the reckless cutting of 10 per cent from all appropriation bills, slashing of salaries, furloughs, &c., for Government employes. It is hoped you will keep up the good work, especially as this cut of 10 per cent is to be in addition to the salary slash or its equivalent.

What has become of the much advertised efforts to reduce unemployment, and what does Congress think will be the result, for instance, of slashing $87,000,000 from the Postoffice appropriation? Has it stopped to realize what a large number of people will be automatically cut off the rolls and added to the bread line? How much business will be left in Washington with the drastic cut of 10 per cent in all bills to be passed?

It will be too late to howl after the reductions are made. Now is the time to act, and if these Government employes have any friends they had better urge them to get busy with the senators and representatives to oppose these cuts and enact legislation that will increase the revenues and make the slashes unnecessary. The sales tax was the solution, is now and will be. "X."

American Women Can Help by Buying American-Made Goods.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While in England this past autumn, confronted with "Buy British" signs on all sides, I wondered why our American women had not adopted the "Buy American" slogan, and thus aid the men of our country during these trying times. Reading my Post this morning I find a most interesting letter from Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, suggesting the "Buy American" slogan, which I most heartily indorse with the addition "and American made."

I have lived abroad for a number of years, and found the most smartly dressed women were those who "Buy American." A British gentleman informed me, after a visit to the States, that he was impressed by the beautifully gowned women and considered the American woman the best dressed he had ever met in his travels.

A Persian friend, who is the wife of an American Army officer, returning to her home in Paris recently to spend a year, purchased her entire wardrobe in America before leaving. When I evinced surprise she said, "Oh, but surely you know American styles are really more beautiful. I always 'Buy American' when returning to France—and find prices also more reasonable."

So I suggest not only "Buy American" but also "American Made."

MRS. FRANKLIN H. KENWORTHY.
Purcellville, Va.

Mr. Allen Says U. S. Chamber of Commerce Is Inconsistent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in your issue of this morning (Thursday) that the United States Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a drive to induce Washingtonians to spend money on repairs on houses, on property beautification, &c.

As I understand it, the United States Chamber of Commerce is also advocating a reduction in the salaries of Government employes. It would seem that the Chamber of Commerce should attempt to explain these seemingly contradictory attitudes. The threat of pay cuts is already inducing Government employes to retrench and restrict purchases and other payments.

T. WARREN ALLEN.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

A BREAKFAST GOES TO WASTE.

I've eaten many a breakfast; I've had eggs in every style;
I've had waiters bring me dishes which I've pondered o'er awhile.
I've had fancy ham and bacon, I've had waffles crisp and brown
Swimming deep in maple syrup from some old New England town.
I've had many a meal at sunrise on the edge of lake and stream,
When they've served a thin, blue liquid which the cook declared was cream,
But the breakfast I'll remember 'til I am a dying man
Was the one they served one morning down in sunny Yucatan.

There were eight of us to eat it—and I'm thinking now of them—
We were headed for the jungle, and we rose at 4 a. m.
Said the guide: "It won't be fancy, but an all-night place I know
Where they'll have your coffee ready since at 5 o'clock we go."
So he led us to the counter on a little, narrow street,
Where two Mexicans were busy cooking eggs for us to eat,
And I saw them dip their fingers in the stew pan, and I said:
"You can have 'em fried or scrambled, but I'll take mine boiled instead."

Now I have a fluttery stomach; all the doctor's art and skill
In the presence of strange odors lack the power to keep it still.
And I watched those two cooks frying eggs for Kettering and Stone
Till I suddenly discovered that my appetite had flown.
And I said: "I don't want coffee, orange juice, or eggs or toast
On this dark and dewy morning, it's fresh air I need the most.
Though we're headed for the jungle on a three days' scouting trip,
I shan't want any breakfast till we're back upon the ship."

SOCIETY

Mrs. Hoover Receives D. A. R. Delegates and Alternates; Also Attends Mrs. Mills' Luncheon.

MRS. HOOVER RECEIVED the delegates and alternates to the forty-first congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the White House.

Mrs. Hoover wore, by request of a number of the Daughters, the now famous "cotton gown" which she had made for and wore at an evening reception during the past season. After the Daughters had all been received in the blue parlor they went out in the garden, by means of the south portico, the windows of the blue parlor which lead to the portico being open.

Mrs. Hoover was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who entertained at her residence in Q street. The other guests were the wives of the members of the Cabinet, including Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. William DeWitt Mitchell, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Walter F. Brown, wife of the Postmaster General; Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Arthur Mastick Hyde, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. William N. Doak, wife of the Secretary of Labor, and Miss Dorothy Fell, daughter of the hostess. Mrs. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of State, was the only absentee, due to her absence in Geneva with the Secretary.

The Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis, was the guest in whose honor the Finnish Minister, Mr. L. Astrom, entertained at dinner last evening. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. delegation. Ambassador Gibson cabled:

"The draft resolution submitted by the British delegation passed the general commission unanimously in the following form:

"Without prejudice to the other proposals which fall to be discussed under later heads of the agenda, the conference declares its approval of the principle of qualitative disarmament; that is, the selection of certain classes or descriptions of weapons, the possession or the use of which should be absolutely prohibited to all states, or internationalized by international convention."

Mr. Titulesco, the Roumanian delegate, withdrew his proposal and declared his satisfaction with the amended form of the British text. Bolivia and Cuba as supporters of the Titulesco resolution declared their satisfaction. M. Tardieu, in accepting the amended text of the British resolution, declared that it gave full satisfaction to his delegation. M. Tardieu concluded with an appeal to the press for a more optimistic point of view in considering temporary setbacks.

Asks Arms Destruction.

Mr. Nadolny, of Germany, in offering his adherence to the British text, stated that qualitative disarmament could not be achieved by internationalization but rather by actual destruction of weapons. He suggested that Germany had set an example in those classes of weapons to be destroyed which might afford the commission a useful example.

The president, Arthur Henderson, then stated that as the principle of qualitative disarmament had been accepted by the general commission, there remained several draft resolutions for consideration, notably the Danish, Italian and American resolutions, which dealt primarily with the method of achieving it. He therefore, suggested that the general commission determine upon a method of procedure. To carry out this suggestion Sir John Simon offered a draft resolution which Mr. Gibson supported with a slight amendment to include the idea of relation to national defense. It was subsequently incorporated by a hastily composed drafting committee and was unanimously adopted in the following form:

"In seeking to apply the principle of qualitative disarmament as defined in the previous resolution, the conference is of the opinion that the range of land, sea and air armaments should be examined by the competent special commissions with a view to selecting those weapons whose character is the most specifically offensive or those most efficacious against national defense or those most threatening to civilians."

In support of this resolution Sir John Simon maintained that the conference should not limit itself to the consideration of one branch of warfare but should consider the whole range of weapons in land, sea and air armaments.

The commission adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE LEADERS PREDICT DEFEAT FOR CASH BONUS

for a two-year program to keep people employed.

Fish was one of several House veterans of the World War who opposed payment of the $2,000,000,000 outstanding on the bonus certificates, contending issuance of that amount of new currency under the Patman bill would force the country off the gold standard.

Legislation to allow veterans to cash bonus certificates at their present value was urged before the committee by Lea.

"I am opposed to full cash payment of the face value of the certificates," he said.

The average bonus certificate would reach its full face value of $1,000 in 1945. The present value of such a certificate is $542. It is this sum Lea would permit veterans to obtain if they wished to do so.

Lea said that under his plan $773,000,000 would be due the veterans, as against $2,160,000,000 under the Patman plan.

Representative Andrew (Republican), Massachusetts, a war veteran, the next witness, said the suggestion that the Government issue new money would serve only to aggravate pessimism and fear for the Treasury.

"Many of the veterans want this payment, but they are under a misapprehension that the Government owes them this money," Fish said.

"In my opinion, the Government does not owe 1 cent to the able-bodied veteran at this time.

"I agree with the suggestions made here for a reduction of interest charged on veteran loans."

Both Fish and Andrew expressed belief that issuance of $2,000,000,000 of new currency would drive this country off the gold standard.

MASONIC DEDICATION PLANS BEING RUSHED

Contractors Are Preparing for Memorial Rites in Alexandria May 12.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The contractors for the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple in Alexandria are busily engaged in putting the final touches on the huge building in preparation for the dedication, which will take place May 12. The weekly pay roll for labor amounts to approximately $15,000.

The work which is now being rushed includes the completion of the great circular auditorium in the rear of the building, with its beautiful marble columns and exquisite fan ceiling, this auditorium having a seating capacity of 1,000; the putting in place of all the permanent grilles, sash and windows throughout the building, including the lofty tower; the marble floor in the auditorium and adjacent halls, and a cement floor, which is later to be replaced by a marble floor, in the main memorial hall.

Building Not Complete.

No attempt is being made at this time to complete the first floor, the two lodgerooms on the second floor, or the tower floors, but immediately after the dedication work will be resumed on these sections. It is expected, however, that several years will elapse before the memorial, with its stained glass windows, mosaics, paintings, sculptures and bronzes, will be completed, partly on account of the policy adopted by the memorial association of doing only the work for which the money is in hand.

The construction of the platform and stand at the memorial, which will be used for the dedication, has been started by a large force of carpenters. This platform will be 80 feet square and will be erected at the foot of the granite steps leading to the temple. The steps themselves will be occupied by spectators so that it will be possible for more than 3,000 persons to be seated during the proceedings. The great majority of the spectators, however, will stand on the grounds surrounding the dedication platform. Loud speakers will be used for their convenience.

Stands Contracts Awarded.

A contract has been awarded for the construction of the reviewing stand, which will be situated on the north side of King street just before reaching the viaduct. This stand will contain 700 seats and will be for the Masonic dignitaries who will review the parade. Directly opposite this reviewing stand will be the largest of the public stands, several other stands for the public being erected on King street. The parade will traverse practically the entire length of King street, and will be visible from the temple for more than a mile.

The dedication committee has received samples of the bronze and silver pocketpieces which have been specially prepared as a souvenir of the dedication. On one side of the medal is contained a bas relief of Washington presiding as worshipful master of Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, or, as it was renamed after Washington's death, Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, and on the other side will be a picture of the memorial temple. A limited number of these medals will be available to the public, it is announced by the dedication chairman, Dr. Robert S. Barrett.

CAPONE AGAIN SEEKS TO HELP LINDBERGH

inquiries made at Scotland Yard, in London, regarding the past life of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh nurse, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wheatley, butler and cook, brought the information that all three had "fine records" in England.

Norfolk, Va., April 22 (A.P.).—Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, spokesman for the three Norfolk intermediaries in the Lindbergh kidnapping case, said tonight that Col. Lindbergh had renewed his request for the trio to continue their work.

Admiral Burrage said John Hughes Curtis conferred with Col. Lindbergh, who "requested us to continue our work. Col. Lindbergh stated to Mr. Curtis he appreciated the cooperation of the press in not attempting to follow his representatives, and again through us asked that they continue this cooperation."

Mr. Curtis and Dean Dobson-Peacock returned to Norfolk together in a Navy plane piloted by Lieut. George L. Richard.

Canton, Ill., April 22 (A.P.).—Fulton authorities said today they had discovered two of the $20 bills which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh paid to supposed kidnapers for the expected return of his infant son.

One bill was given by a couple in a Havana, Ill., variety store on Wednesday and the other in a Havana chain grocery store. Officials are seeking the couple who spent them.

'Al Capone's Last Appeal Reaches Supreme Court

(Associated Press.)

"Scarface Al" Capone yesterday asked the Supreme Court to open the prison doors which lower courts have ordered closed upon him for eleven years.

As the last appeal from his conviction for evading income taxes, the Chicago gang leader contended the indictment was defective and that the section of the act under which he was convicted applied only to collectors of internal rrevenue and not to individuals who evaded payment.

Creating a ripple of interest in the halls of the highest tribunal, Capone's appeal was minutely studied by experienced Supreme Court lawyers. They said the court had repeatedly refused to review cases brought on such grounds and predicted the petition would be denied as soon as the court could act upon it.

Should it be denied, only a petition for rehearing would stand between Catpone and his lengthy term in a Federal prison. Rehearings are not granted by the court in one case out of a hundrad.

New York Mercury at 74.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—New Yorkers doffed their coats today as the temperature soared into the summer ranges, reaching 74 degrees at 2 p. m., the warmest day of the year thus far. The 74-degree mark was 22 degrees above the normal average of 52 for April 22.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, Washington and New York will join by radio in the world-wide tribute to William Shakespeare on the anniversary of his birth today. Special programs will originate in the new Shakespeare Memorial Theater in Stratford-on-Avon, where the Prince of Wales will speak, in the Folger Shakespearean Library in Washington, and in the N. B. C. studios in New York.

The first program from Shakespeare's birthplace will be heard through WRC at 8:15 a. m. Percy Edgar, leading English announcer, will describe the arrival of Wales for the exercises in connection with the opening of the memorial and the unfurling of the royal ensign. The prince will then open the structure with a golden key, and deliver an address from the balcony.

In the program from Washington, where the Folger Library will be dedicated, the keys of the memorial will be presented by Mrs. Henry C. Folger, wife of the donor, to Dr. George A. Plimpton, president of the board of trustees of Amherst College. The broadcast, which will be heard through WRC and WMAL at 2:30 p. m., will include an address by Joseph Quincy Adams, said to be the greatest living authority on Shakespeareana, and a reading by Edith Matthison of Emerson's words on Shakespeare, which first interested Folger in the subject.

The New York program, which will be heard through WRC at 3 p. m., will consist of excerpts from Shakespeare's best known plays, several selections from operas which have been written around his works, and the reading of some of his poetry.

There will be a special broadcast from Stratford - on - Avon, heard through WMAL, at 5:30 p. m., in which Sir Archibald Flower, mayor of Stratford, and Thomas W. Lamont, who is representing the United States in the international celebration of the opening of the theater, will speak.

AN AMUSING feature of the banquet at the twentieth anniversary convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers at Pittsburgh was the introduction, after the awarding of the prizes, of a man who was described as "being a representative of the Soviet republic." He delivered a paper eulogizing broadcasting in Soviet Russia, insisting that Russians were far ahead of the rest of the world in radio matters, and concluding with the recommendation that Russian be adopted as the universal language for broadcasting.

The speaker was heckled by the audience at various stages of his remarks. Many of those present, according to F. P. Guthrie, of the Washington office of the Radio Corporation, were completely taken in by the hoax and were convinced until the end of his remarks that they were authentic. The toastmaster, Prof. W. G. Cady, finally revealed the fact that the gentleman was a resident of Pittsburgh.

ARTHUR TRACY, radio's "Street Singer," will do five or more broadcasts during his stay in Washington. He is doing his first "in person" appearance in this city at Loew's Palace Theater this week. Three of Tracy's broadcasts will go over the Columbia network from the WMAL studios, while the others will be local air appearances.

There will be a second broadcast of the R. C. A.-Victor-Washington Post recording from Station WOL at 5:45 o'clock Monday night.

A record was made of last Monday's broadcast. Anyone desiring to hear it may stop in at E. F. Droop & Sons Co., where it will be played upon request.

"BALTIMORE, 'Cradle of Municipal Music,'" written by Kenneth S. Clark and published by the City of Baltimore, gives a large amount of credit for this development to Frederick R. Huber, municipal director of music. Mr. Huber, who is also director of WBAL, and the man who made that station famous, passes the credit along to city officials.

Baltimore started the ball rolling back in 1914 by appropriating $8,000 for a municipal band.

"Finally, one morning in June of 1915," Mr. Clark writes, "Mayor James H. Preston received a visit at the city hall from Frederick R. Huber, who had come to him with a suggestion that community singing concerts be held on certain summer evenings. The mechanism: the words thrown upon a screen and the municipal band playing the accompaniment. Mayor Preston said, 'Yes,' and, although neither of them probably knew it at the time, that was the start of municipal music, as such, in Baltimore."

In the budget for last year the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra was allowed $33,000, the Municipal Band $20,000 and the Colored Orchestra, $1,500.

Mr. Huber broadcast the first Baltimore Symphony Orchestra program over WBAL seven years ago, and under his direction this super-powered station has been of tremendous assistance in keeping Baltimore and the surrounding territory music conscious.

ANOTHER program has been added to the series of radio broadcasts being conducted on behalf of the National Symphony Orchestra's drive to complete its $75,000 guarantee fund, necessary if the orchestra is to undertake another concert season.

On Thursday next, from 5 to 5:30 p. m., Herman Rakemann, violinist; Emil Simone, cellist, and Malton Boyce, concert pianist, will give a program over Station WOL. Rakemann and Simone are members of the National Symphony.

A melodrama, "An Indian Romance of the Days of Father LeMoyne," the second from the pen of Gaffer Gray, well known to WJSV audiences through his presentation of fairy stories in the "Ambassador from Fairyland" period, will be presented at 3 o'clock this afternoon through the Mount Vernon Hills station.

ARLINGTON COUNTY OFFICE AGAIN OPEN

$25,000 Bond Is Guaranteed by Ashton Jones; Petty Assumes Duties.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

In order that the business of the office of the clerk of the court of Arlington County could function, it having been closed since Thursday morning, Ashton C. Jones, former president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, yesterday afternoon guaranteed the required bond of $25,000. John A. Petty was appointed clerk of the court to succeed William H. Duncan, who resigned. The surety bond, Mr. Jones stated, would be furnished the early part of the week. Duncan was indicted as a result of an alleged shortage.

Upon taking the oath of office administered by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy the newly appointed clerk announced the reappointment of the present personnel of the office, consisting of Deputy Clerks Ralph Remington, Mrs. Lorena Ellis and Mrs. Edith B. Crowder and Mrs. Mary Moore McIntosh, Mrs. Rachel White and Miss Lucy Moss.

The deputy clerks were sworn into office by Judge McCarthy, with Sheriff Howard B. Fields furnishing the necessary bond of $3,000 for Mrs. Ellis and Ashton C. Jones for Mrs. Corder and Mr. Remington.

Mr. Petty says that he has not yet severed his connection with the Washington Real Estate Board. Mr. Petty took a leading part in the campaign to establish the new form of government under which the county is now operating.

He is 47 years old, and is a native of Washington. During the World War he served as an officer in the finance division in charge of a unit of the enlisted men's allotment branch.

Mr. Petty established the free service bureau of the Real Estate Board of Washington for giving advice to the public and also organized a wide field of statistical information regarding property ownership, mortgage transfers and building operations in the District of Columbia.

Several times he was appointed by the District of Columbia Commissioners as one of the delegates from the District to the National Tax Association conferences.

Last night Mr. Petty stated that he was unable to confer with any officials of the Real Estate Board yesterday due to the fact it was necessary to remain at the courthouse to arrange for the reopening of the clerk's office and expected that it would be at least two weeks before he would be able to conclude his official duties in Washington. In the meantime he would spend part of each day taking care of the duties of his new office as county clerk.

Charity Group Denied Right To Solicit in Mt. Rainier

The Volunteers of America, a charitable organization, has been denied permission to solicit funds in Mount Rainier, Md., on vote of the town council, which held that the Mount Rainier Welfare Association was taking care of all the needy in the town.

The application for solicitor's license is the first to be received since the passage of an ordinance regulating drives for funds in the town. It was passed after the appearance of a solicitor who admitted that he was collecting money for the unemployed in New York City.

Two of the four councilmen voted to grant the permit, on the ground that the collection of funds was a constitutional right. The other two voted against it, and Mayor John H. Beall had to break the tie.

Mrs. Letitia Plumer and Ira E. Widmeyer were appointed clerks of the town election to be held on May 2, and the council voted to clean up the property at Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue, adding the cost to the tax bills of this lot.

2 AUTHORS TO READ FROM OWN WORKS

Alexandria Group Will Hear Poems by Muna Lee and Prof. Maynard.

The Alexandria Library Board has announced that two internationally prominent authors will read from their own works at an author's recital sponsored by the board on the evening of May 9 in the Virginia Public Service auditorium.

They are Muna Lee (Mrs. Luis Munoz-Marin) a poet of great distinction, and Prof. Theodore Maynard, head of the English department of Georgetown University. Both are contributors to the Carillon, a national quarterly of verse published in Washington and edited by Caroline Gilfinan (Mrs. Leo F. Harlow), of Alexandria.

Miss Lee, an American by birth, is the wife of Luis Munoz-Marin, president of the University of Porto Rico, and among some of the posts she has filled are that of director of the bureau of international relations at the University of Porto Rico and a speaker before the sixth Pan-American Conference in Havana in 1926, the first time a woman was ever invited to address an international congress on equal rights for women. Her most recent achievement was a visit to Geneva, where she interviewed the delegates regarding the international recognition of the nationality of women.

Prof. Maynard, of English parentage, was born in India, but has spent much of his life in America.

TWO BOYS CHARGED WITH MAKING RUM

Father Is Also Held In Raid Upon Still by Federal Agents in Maryland.

Two boys, one 11 years old and one 13, were charged with manufacture and possession of liquor yesterday when Federal dry agents said they found them cutting wood near a still near Leonardtown, in St. Marys County.

Harrison Mason, father of the two children, and his wife, Bertie, were also arrested. The charges against the wife were dismissed when it was testified at a hearing that she was only in a field near the still, but the two boys were released in custody of their father. He was released in bond of $1,000 on charges of manufacture, possession, and possession of articles for the manufacture of liquor.

There was a ton of rye meal at the still, the agents said, and 1,800 pounds of sugar. The distilling plant consisted of two 300-gallon stills, and 2,500 gallons of alleged mash was also found. Both boys were with their father, chopping wood near the still when they were arrested, the agents said.

Robert and Francis Cutchember were arrested at another still near Valley Lee, and released on bond of $1,000 each. Seven gallons of alleged whisky, 500 gallons of reputed mash, and a 300-gallon wooden still were found, it was reported. Dixie Curry, of St. Marys County, was also arrested yesterday on liquor charges. He has been sought since a man was seen to run from a still during a raid on October 20.

Highest Court Gets Ethyl Alcohol Fight

Two Companies Challenge West Virginia Ruling Forcing License.

(Associated Press.)

Maryland and Virginia manufacturers of preparations in which ethyl alcohol is used yesterday challenged in the Supreme Court the regulations of the West Virginia prohibition commissioner requiring them to take out a license before they could deliver their products in that State.

The issue was presented by McCormick & Co., Inc., of Baltimore, and Durham Bros., Inc., of Roanoke, Va. Through their counsel, Philip C. Friese, they contended that they operated under a permit granted by the Federal Government and that West Virginia was attempting to impose an illegal restriction on interstate commerce.

W. G. Brown, West Virginia prohibition commissioner, and R. Dennis Steed defended the license requirement by asserting that certain extracts, perfumeries and other articles manufactured under Federal permits were susceptible of being used as intoxicating liquor.

Meteor Believed Found On Hagerstown Farm

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 22.—Efforts were being made today to remove what is believed to be a meteor, which is buried 8 feet in the earth on the Stafford Hall farm of Leo Cohill, near here. The hole was not there last Friday, when Cohill and helpers sprayed trees in the orchard.

William, young son of Cohill, found the hole Sunday between two apple trees. The hole, 5 feet wide and 8 feet deep, is surrounded by bluish stone chips, unlike any rocks in this section. The youth reported it to his father, but no investigation was made as Cohill thought it perhaps was an old well, the top of which had fallen in. When the trees were again sprayed yesterday, he came upon the hole and is convinced by its appearance that it was made by a meteor.

Hit-and-Run Driver Enters Plea of Guilty

Withdrawing his demand for jury trials, Raymond E. Manney yesterday pleaded guilty in Police Court to two charges of connection with hit-and-run cases. He will be sentenced next week.

Manney's automobile struck a machine driven by Joseph C. Edwards, 1685 Crescent place northwest, at Twelfth and N streets northwest April 8. Four days later his machine collided with one driven by Llewellyn Johnson, 408 New Jersey avenue northwest, at Eighteenth and California streets northwest. While he was in court on the latter charge he was recognized by Policeman Q. E. Heyne, who wanted him for colliding with Edwards' automobile. Manney then pleaded guilty in both cases.

Mayor Vetoes Detroit Pay Cut.

Detroit, April 22 (A.P.).—Mayor Frank Murphy today vetoed an ordnance which would have reduced salaries of all city employes by 33 1-3 per cent. In a statement accompanying the veto, however, the mayor left the way open for further action on the ordnance, which was passed recently by a 5-to4 vote of the city council. Six votes are necessary to give the ordnance immediate effect.

How to Be Beautiful

Expert Answers Readers' Queries.

M. J. W.—At 40 you should not be troubled with a double chin and I can well understand your anxiety. The use of an astringent, brisk patting with a quite large pad of cotton, then a tie-up should help. To make the tie-up open the cotton, place under the chin and with a piece of cheesecloth or gauze tie securely, knotting the tie-up overhead. Allow this to remain for about ten minutes. Pass a piece of ice over the tie-up every few minutes. A few neck exercises will also help. Sit erect in a chair. Slowly drop head as far forward on chest as possible, then slowly pull as far back as you can. Feel the neck muscles tensing as you do so. Repeat ten times. Now try this one. Face forward. Now turn head slowly as far to the right and back as possible, front. Repeat to the left. For the complete treatment send for my bulletins "Signs of Age," also my "Facial Resume."

"Patty"—At your age, I would not advise strenuous reducing measures. Although you are quite a bit overweight, 14 is too young to hamper nature; you may stretch out, so to speak, in the next few years. In the meantime, do some stretching exercises every day; join a gymnasium (if you do not have one in school) or a dancing class. Massage your fingers with cream, working from tips down to the wrist in a slight pinching movement for the fingers, then a round and round movement for the back of the hand. Follow the instructions given to M. J. W. (above) regarding the double chin. Send for my bulletin on blackheads and pimples. This subject was covered at length in this column recently.

E. M.—Exercise, not a special diet, will help to firm a flabby bust. Swimming, golf and tennis are excellent for this purpose and arm stretching and flinging exercises are good. My complete set of exercises will be sent to you if you will repeat your question and send self-addressed, stamped envelope. Since your hair is so fine, brush it before and after washing and add a vinegar rinse after the shampoo. Every morning you might try using a little water or wave-setting fluid in an atomizer, pinch your hair into place and wear a net while you dress, giving the hair ample time to dry and set. I think you will find this plan highly satisfactory.

Constant Reader—Age and height must be given in order to determine the average weight. My weight chart is yours for the asking. Repeat your question and send self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Just a Reader—There is no way of keeping the eyebrow hairs from reappearing after they have been plucked. The condition of your fingernails may indicate lack of lime in your system. Do watch your diet carefully. Also try soaking the nails in a little warm olive oil every night and keep the nails quite short for a while.

Interpreting the Mode

Spring house cleaning 1932 is really house decorating! (Says Dah-ray.)

NEW YORK, April 22.—Spring house cleaning, 1932! Miladi goes about her spring housecleaning nowaday with paint and brush, nails and hammer, gadgets and an artistic eye.

Because modern conveniences having made spring or any other particular time of the year more housecleaning time than any other, the urge to renew must somehow or other be satisfied. Spring, and the housewife's fancy seriously turns to thoughts of prettying up, her home as well as herself.

Good effect on hubby, too, to convince him that the doldrumpressions are over. Good effect on yourself, too—on every one. Something new and something quaint and artistic, especially when it is done by your own clever fingers, has a miraculous effect on all concerned. And sh-h-h-h-h, it may serve to remind him that violets do only cost 20 cents after all—and gardenias are, oh, so enduringly romantic! He has rather forgotten, in the stress of things, hasn't he?

Well, for five dollars, as little as that, you can renovate your entire house! I promise you! A dollar can of black lacquer will go such a lo-o-o-o-ng way—an' a 50-cent can of red even further. Seventy or eighty cents' worth of colored papers, ten cents' worth of glue, oh, only women who have made "somethings" out of "nothings" really know that it is true, and what things you can do with so little expenditure.

Books, articles, leaflets, magazines, hundreds of helps are available for making new your house for spring. Whether it be a house or a one-room apartment, don't let this spring go by without making at least one new thing for it—one will lead to another, and the first thing you know, you will emerge, like Ceres, from the darkness of winter things—new, happy, and one with spring!

* * * *

And you can start by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the new leaflet Dahray has just finished, which tells you some brand new house-furbishing tricks.

There are the oddest candlesticks which she made out of—guess? Rocks! And the candles that go with 'em—or in or on 'em, which cost ten cents apiece to make and look like dollar-'n-a-half art candles from an Artsee Shoppeee. And lots of other new ideas like this, that she has never told you about before. Better send for the leaflet—new things for your house, modern spring cleaning!

What to Wear When.

Afternoon informal wear, shopping, that is, or meetings, anything less formal than bridge or tea: Dress in black crepe de chine, woolen coat in green or red or beige, with black fur trimming of the flat variety. Or dress in either of these colors, and coat in black. Shoes, black kid with high heels but decollete instep. Hat in felt or straw, feather or flower trimming. Gloves, black or white, depending upon the formality of your afternoon. Stockings, fine silk, but not too shreer, nor net. Jewelry of fancy colors in stones, diamond trimmed. And fine linen handkerchief, always white. Formal afternoon wear is something else. * * * Manana.

What Today Means

"TAURUS."

If April 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 11:30 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 9:45 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 a. m. to 8 a. m. and from 1:30 p. m. to 3 p. m.

The uncertainty of life will be demonstrated in more than one way on this date (April 23). Unexpected handicaps, hitches in engagements and delayed trips are amongst the planetary predictions. Romantic flirtations may tempt the men of the family, and there is a possible estrangements therefrom with some one dear to them.

Children born on this April 23 will know what they want in this world and will make a fuss if it is not forthcoming. They will have domineering, inquisitive, materialistic and practical natures, with fierce tempers when aroused. They will be babyish when ill, but should be too robust to be subject to many ailments.

Born on April 23, you have rather a timid, plastic and an indifferent nature. You will be a rather willing victim of circumstances, taking the good and the bad in your stride with little effort to change them. There are two opposing camps of people: those who want excitement at any price and those who will pay the required toll for security. You belong to the latter group. Your policy has both its good and its bad points, but it is not one which spells progress with a capital P. It makes you hesitating when hesitancy is fatal; passive when active resistance is called for, and satisfied when a little more ambition would be to your good. You are wax in the hands of all the kind-hearted bullies who have so easily scared you.

You are unselfish, willing and good-natured, and lack the grit to say "no." You do not seem to realise the difference of being imposed upon and just normally playing the game. You can not be a pack-horse and have time to attend to your own jobs and to take up those interests which might mean so much to you individually. You love the smiles of the world and are too distressed at the frowns. As you are not very materialistic and have both religion and philosophy upon which to fall back, your life will probably yield to you more happiness than it does to the average run of humanity.

Successful people born April 23:

James Buchanan, fifteenth President of United States.

Stephen A. Douglas, statesman.

Chauncey M. Depew, railroad president.

Viscount Allenby, British general.

William Shakespeare.

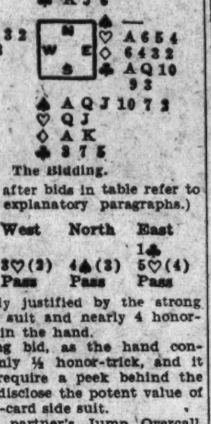
WHERE MASS OUTRANKS QUALITY.

So potent is the power of Aces and Kings that a special term has been coined to designate such holdings at Contract Bridge. We call the Aces and Kings, and the Queens and the Knaves, either singly or in combination, "honor-tricks," to designate cards which are almost certain to win tricks, even against an adverse trump declaration.

These principles generally prevail, but occasionally the Gods of Distribution play such pranks that there is a veritable revolution in the card world, and mass, as represented by the lowly deuces, treys and four spots, goes on a rampage and destroys the hierarchy of the card world. Such a deal was the following:

South—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | 1♣ |
| 2♠(1) | 3♡(2) | 4♠(3) | 5♡(4) |
| Dbl.(5) | Pass | Pass | Pass |

1—Certainly justified by the strong trump suit and nearly 4 honor-tricks in the hand.

2—A daring bid, as the hand contains only ½ honor-trick, and it would require a peek behind the veil to disclose the potent value of the five-card side suit.

3—Despite partner's Jump Overcall, the Double Raise on this holding is too strong. The value of the club honors has been practically nullified by East's Opening bid.

4—East's bid of five hearts is justified, in view of the score and his strong distributional values.

5—South's Double does not appear unduly optimistic.

The hand was played in a Duplicate game at Granville, Ohio, the seat of Denison University. The participants in the game were members of the faculty and students at the college, as well as business men in the town.

Many North and South players played the hand at four spades and were defeated 1 or 2 tricks, depending upon the accuracy of the defense. Mr. Paul B. Stager and his partner played the contract at five hearts, doubled, which, as can be seen, was readily made, the only losing cards being the Ace and King of diamonds. Between them, East and West mustered barely 3 honor-tricks. North and South held the rest, but the card "commune" was on a rampage and the nobility had no chance.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Distribution is an important factor in the play of all hands at Contract, as even Aces and Kings may not be able to safely pass the barrier of the Declarer's trumps.

Advice on Gardening

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE give me a list of six reliable climbing roses. The catalogues are confusing, they make you want to buy them all.

MISS TILLIE F. L.

American pillar, single flowering variety, rosy crimson; Dr. Van Fleet, good foliage, pale pink; Dorothy Perkins, unrivaled for bloom and vigor; Paul's scarlet climber, scarlet; Breeze Hill, deep cream with tints of cream and salmon. Any of the above-mentioned varieties will prove satisfactory if planted in good soil in the sun.

I want to plant some perennials in a shady stretch of my border. I have wonderful success with perennials in sun, but I am totally ignorant as to which varieties will grow in shade.

MRS. JOHN F. T.

Aconitum, campanula rotundifolia, arenaria and aquilagia will grow in shade. Myrtle and Japanese spruge are splendid ground cover plants for places where grass refuses to grow.

Please give me some information about a terrace which I am about to make without the help of a skilled landscape man. The only help I will have will be my two sons, high school boys, who will lift and carry the flat stones, which have been given to me. I have planted about the terrace some barberry and I want some instructions or advice about laying the stones. I have enough sand available or I can get cement if that is best.

HELEN D. S.

Your flagstones should be carefully laid in sand and the pockets can be filled with good soil. By pockets I mean the spaces between the stones. Near the edges of the terrace allow some space between stones for planting dwarf rock plants, hardy pinks or sedums. These plants must be carefully watered until they become established.

I have had several house plants which have frosted. Is there any way of saving these plants? They were only frozen in places where they were not protected.

MRS. WILLIAM D. E.

Plants which have been touched by late frosts should be shaded and sprayed frequently with cold water. With such treatment they usually recover.

I am desirous of transplanting a magnolia tree, but can not attempt the work until May, as the tree is on my country place. Will May be too late to do this successfully?

JULIA C. E.

Magnolias may be transplanted in May.

Last season I lost almost all of my hollyhocks with blight. I also had some blight on my delphiniums. Is there any preventive treatment I might use at this time? It is dreadful to see beautiful plants simply dwindle away.

MRS. HENRY S. H.

Spray your plants with lime sulphur or Bordeaux mixture before they show signs of blight and repeat the applications every two weeks. You may begin to spray at this time.

Please tell me how often to divide phlox.

ELSIE B.

Phlox should be transplanted and divided once every three years; only the younger, outside divisions should be reset.

Is it true that painting the tents of tent caterpillars with creosote will destroy them?

THOMAS W. B.

Yes. Another method is to burn them.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

A Gentleman of Leisure.

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: I read your codlumn every day and enjoy it a great deal. I have never had any occasion to write until now and this is my problem. I do hope you can help me.

I am 19 years old. I have known a fellow for five years. I went out with him off and on, but for over two years and a half I went out with no one but him, and he went with only me. We had never said anything about going steady, but we seemed to enjoy each other's company more than any one else's. I love this fellow and he thought the world of me, because he said so and he had often hinted of marriage, though he never said he loved me. During these two years he hardly worked at all. He would come to the house and there we would sit, or go visit some friend. We very seldom went to any place of amusement because of his lack of funds. I never said anything, because I knew he wasn't working and could not afford to take me any place. He always said how good and considerate I was, sitting home with him and not complaining because we didn't go out. (I did this because I loved him.) Many times I could have gone out with other fellows and had a good time, but I would rather be with him. Because I refused these invitations so often these boys stopped calling and now I am alone and hardly ever go out.

About five months ago he secured a position in which he met many fellows. All of a sudden he stopped calling and coming to the house. Occasionally he would call and say he was coming, but he never arrived. If I meet him on the street he seems pleased to see me and when I am leaving him he will say "So long, sweetheart, I'll see you some time." His mother said she does not know what has come over him. He stays out late and sometimes does not come home for days. He stays at some fellow's house. The other day when I met him he told me he was just waking up to himself. He is not a child. He is going on 24.

Miss McDonald, I want to know if it would be right for me to ask him what the trouble is? I was good enough for him when he was out of a job and now that he is working and can take me out he doesn't bother. What would you do in a case like this? My parents do not care for him. He is from a very poor family and I have always had everything I desired. My mother doesn't think he is good enough for me. But I don't care; I love him. I could forgive him for the way he is treating me. What shall I do? I miss him a great deal. I was so used to having him around.

Miss McDonald, this has been on my mind a long time and I at last got enough courage to write it. I hope I have not bored you with this lengthy letter, but really I am miserable. Thanks lots for your advice, as I know it will be beneficial to me.

BETTY.

Put this weak soul out of your mind, and what is more important get rid of that inferior feeling that dictates such an attitude as your letter reveals. The phrase "I was good enough for him when he was not working" tells me the whole story. Good enough! He is not and never has been good enough for you or any girl. Fancy a man who for years could sit around 24 hours a day idle. An utterly vacant mind. Such men are defectives. And they usually end by being the dupes of others, dragged into some unlawful enterprise that promises gain without labor.

What your parents must have been going through as you gave up two years of your life to a perfectly worthless man can only be guessed. They were indeed unusual to permit him to do his lounging in their home, entertained by their daughter. Reward their confidence in your ultimate good judgment by letting this prize seek a new parking place. Your asking him concerning his actions would be as futile as it would be humiliating. These people do not know why they do things. Most of them end their lives in some one of our public institutions. They are irresponsible from birth. No normal man can sit for two years without working. Pride, ambition, health all urge him on. It is the subnormal that lives in a daze and dies in a jail or a hospital for the mentally infirm.

You are a normal young girl with all your life before you. Keep clear of the misery that attends any entanglement with inferior men. There is no worse fate than sharing such misery as these men invent. Fancy yourself married to a man who might at any time take a two or three years' rest and let you figure out the problems of rent, food and clothes for his offspring. And the one thing they always have is offspring.

Thank the fate that has delivered you from years of misery and shame. Begin a normal life, add interest in activity, and save yourself for a man worthy of the name.

IRON AS A TONIC.

OLD-FASHIONED iron tonics are finding support in the reports that come from laboratories. The most recent one scores a bullseye for our old friend, tincture of chloride of iron. Our readers well remember this as the kind of iron which we were told to drop into a small glass of water and then to suck through a glass tube, in order that the teeth might not be spoiled.

It was the popular iron tonic a generation ago and, in large doses, it was regarded as the standard treatment for erysipelas, blood poisoning, general sepsis, rheumatism, and many other diseases. When our friend, the old time family physician, was called into a home, the chances were good that he would prescribe tincture of iron before he finished. The drug stores regarded it as a best seller.

Then there came an agitation for organic iron and medicines containing the metal in this form which nearly drove our old friend from the market. The men who advocated it talked very learnedly and they had some research reports to back them up. Somehow the effects were not wholly satisfactory and the current began to run into a third channel. We were told that the only really effective iron was that which was known as food iron—that which had been picked up by plants and animals and stored as organic iron.

This group of preparations proving not wholly satisfactory, several scientists at the University of Wisconsin found that iron was not effective as a medicine unless a trace of copper was available. In some instances a man had all the copper he needed stored in his body; in others he supplied his needs from his food. But in some cases it was necessary to combine the needed iron with the needed copper. When this discovery was established the scientists reopened the entire iron-as-a-medicine question. Research by Dr. C. A. Elvenjen shows that if a little copper is mixed with the iron almost any preparation of the metal is efficacious. However, inorganic iron and, particularly, ferric chloride, the base of the old-fashioned tincture, is better than organic iron. The old ones are the best and probably this is true for Blaud's pills, carbonate of iron, and other old standbys. Furthermore, the iron we find in human foods is a mixture of organic and inorganic iron, and the larger proportion of the latter it has the better.

All of this relates to secondary anemia. Pernicious anemia is another story. However, much the most frequently encountered anemia is the group that we call secondary anemia. Babies are born with a fair stock of iron stored in them because milk contains almost none of the necessary metal. By the time they reach four months of age that supply is half exhausted. They remain low in iron until they reach about two years of age, at which period their iron content begins to rise. At many other times, both in childhood and adult life, the store of iron runs low. For these anemias Dr. S. Maurer and his associates have found liver as well as inorganic iron to be a good source. It seems that almost any preparation containing iron will do, provided a little copper is available.

NEURITIS.

Mrs. H. L writes:

1. What is neuritis? Is it curable?
2. What is enlargement of the bronchial tubes? How does it work? Is it curable?
3. What is bronchitis?

REPLY.

1. Neuritis is inflammation of a nerve. Some cases are caused by infection, some by pressure, some by blows and hurts. Most cases are cured, though some methods of cure fail.

2. I judge you refer to what is called bronchiectasis. People who suffer from chronic bronchitis, chronic consumption and chronic asthma develop this. It is being treated by operation, and by pouring medicated oils into the tubes.

3. Bronchitis is an inflammation of the tubes that run throughout the lungs. It is apt to become chronic and to lead to bronchial asthma and bronchiectasis. Old cases are not easily cured. BMany cases do well in warm climates.

½cup molasses
1 cup Town Club Coffee, cold (Swings)
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in little hot water
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon each—ginger, ground cloves, allspice and nutmeg
½ box Sunkissed Raisins
1 cup of M. B. Frazier's black or English walnut meats
12 dates
8 figs
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 cups of Gold Medal Flour (Sanitary)

Cream butter, add sugar, eggs molasses, coffee and soda dissolved in little hot water, beat well. Put the fruit (cut fine) and nutmeats in a dish, sift the flour, salt, baking powder and spices over them (to get them well floured), then gradually and thoroughly beat into the wet mixture. Pour into a well greased cake pan, bake in a moderate oven for one hour. At end of hour test by sticking toothpick or clean broom straw into cake to see if thoroughly done.

If smaller cake is desired, use one-half of ingredients.

Bee Brand Pure Food Colors
Bee Brand Whole Cloves
Paprika
Lettuce (Sanitary's)
Cottage Cheese
Kraft Mayonnaise (Sanitary's)

Directions—Place eggs in a saucepan of water and boil for 15 minutes. Immediately remove shells, and while holding under a stream of warm water, press each egg into the shape of a crabapple by holding firmly between the thumb and finger. Apply a tint of orange pink with Bee brand pure food colors. Insert a whole clove to represent the blossom end of the apple and a tiny twig of green leaves to represent the stem. Arrange on a crisp bed of lettuce with cottage cheese. Serve with Kraft mayonnaise and garnish with paprika.

SPICED APPLE SALAD.

6 apples
2 cups sugar (Sanitary Stores)
1½ cups water
1 teaspoon cinnamon extract
15 drops red pure food color
Kraft Mayonnaise (Sanitary Stores)

Directions—Combine sugar, water, cinnamon extract and food coloring in a saucepan. Place over fire and bring to the boiling point. Pare and core the apples and place whole in the hot sirup. Cook apples until they can be pierced with a fork but be careful to remove them before they have lost their shape. Remove apples and continue cooking the cinnamon sirup until the jelly stage is reached.

Remove from the fire and pour over the apples. Cool. Arrange individual salads by placing each apple on cup shaped crispy lettuce.

Serve with Kraft mayonnaise.

Instead of peeling potatoes for steaming or boiling, simply cut a narrow strip around the center of each one. After being cooked, drained and dried in the ordinary way, the potatoes slip easily from the skins, when the opposite ends are pressed between the thumb and forefinger.

The Homemaker

By NANCY CAREY.

ONCE again a Saturday, and may we here at the Institute be a-wishing to you a pleasant week-end? And what for the column today? The answer is obvious, the rest of the recipes for tomorrow's repast and all the request recipes for which we can find space. So first to you, Mrs. F. We cook our cabbage delicious in just as much water as our largest kettle will hold and not boil over, keep the water boiling hard as you sprinkle the finely chopped cabbage in, and use salt and a pinch of soda in the water. Boil for eight minutes without cover. You'll be delighted with the result. Season with salt and pepper to taste when you have drained the cabbage and placed it in a previously heated serving dish.

Boiled Beef Tongue

Wash the tongue well and soak it over night. Cover with cold water and simmer over low fire for four hours, or until tender when pierced with a fork. Add more water, if necessary, to keep the tongue well covered. Cool in the liquor in which it was boiled and when cold remove the skin, stripping it back from the tip.

Green Salad.

1 bunch watercress
1 tomato
1 green pepper
1 onion
1 slice pimiento
4 radishes
1 small cucumber, if desired.

Wash watercress. Cut the pepper in thin rings and the cucumber, radishes and onion in very thin slices. Dice the tomato and pimiento. Toss all the ingredients together lightly and serve with French dressing.

Jennie's French Dressing

¾ cupful sugar
½ whole clove
1 teaspoonful salt
1 teaspoonful mustard
Little garlic and onion, grated
Paprika to taste
1½ cupfuls oil mixed with above
1½ teaspoonfuls Worcestershire sauce
Few drops of tabasco
1 cupful lemon juice
2 tablespoonfuls catsup.

Put in bowl and beat well with egg beater. Bottle and shake well before using.

Banana Butter
(For Mrs. Wilman.)

3 cupfuls banana pulp
3 cupfuls sugar
½ cupful lemon juice
1 cupful fruit pectin
¼ teaspoonful butter.

Mash bananas and add sugar, butter and lemon juice. Bring slowly to boil, stirring constantly. Add pectin. Bring to boil again. Boil one minute. Remove from fire. Allow it to stand eight minutes, stirring occasionally. Pour into sterilized jelly glasses. Seal with paraffin at once. Seal again when cold.

Jellied Meat
(For Miss Kate R. M.)

2 cupfuls white stock
2 tablespoonfuls granulated gelatin
½ cupful cold water
½ sweet red pepper
½ sweet green pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 cupfuls veal, cut in half-inch pieces
Olives.

Soak gelatin in cold water. Bring stock to the boiling point, add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Pour a little of the gelatin mixture over the bottom of a loaf pan, form a design of the egg, pepper and olives. Chill until set. Add the meat and remaining stock gelatin mixture and set aside to harden. Serve cold.

Nut Loaf.
(For Mame W. C.)

1 cupful nuts, chopped
2 cupfuls stale bread crumbs
1 teaspoonful mixed herbs
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoonful salt
Dash of paprika
2 cupfuls tomato sauce.

Combine ingredients, using only enough sauce to moisten (about three-quarters of a cupful). Pack in greased mold, cover tightly and steam for a half hour, or bake in a moderate oven from 30 to 35 minutes. Unmold and serve hot with remaining tomato sauce.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey—I have been reading your column for a long time and now want to ask your help, too. It is the same old problem—how to get back my proper weight. I am 25 years old, 5 feet tall and weigh 157 pounds. Do you wonder I want to reduce? I have large bones and do not look well thin. My face becomes peaked and ill looking. I lead an active life, taking care of our home and children, but should like to reach at least 130 pounds before July. Do you think I can do it? MRS. L. A.

Of course you can, Mrs. L. A. At the rate of two pounds each week, you will have come well within sight of your goal by the time July comes around again. You should weigh about 117 pounds for your age and height, but it will be wise to make 130 pounds your aim, for the present, at least. When you have reached that, further reduction will seem much less difficult. Besides it may very likely be that 130 will be the best weight for you. If you have a large frame, you will naturally weigh more than another of the same age and height but of slighter build.

If you go about reducing your food intake gradually, you should have no such unfortunate results as the drawn expression of a too thin face. Eat the things which you know are good for you, making the necessary restrictions and alterations, and exercise only moderately at first.

It is usually overanxiety to become slim and sylphlike which is the cause of all reducing being considered dangerous and full of hazards. It need not be, you know. On the contrary, when advisable, it brings only health and vitality to those who follow sane and wise methods.

Let me hear from you soon so that we may send you our folder of reducing suggestions and menus, and best of luck to you. Let us also hear of your progress as you go along.

$5 PRIZE AWARDED FOR CHICKEN RECIPE

"Gravy" Sauce Preparation for Southern Delicacy Also Given.

Desserts and salads took a back seat to Southern chicken this week.

The Post's $5 recipe award went to Mrs. W. G. Atkins, of 4134 New Hampshire avenue, for her interpretation of the Southern style in preparing chicken.

Of course, every one likes chicken. It is like apple pie in that respect—and a new recipe is always welcome.

Mrs. Atkins' formula follows:

SOUTHERN CHICKEN.
(Awarded $5 Prize.)

1 Sanitary baking chicken
½ pound Sanitary butter
1½ cups Sanico flour

Cut chicken up, roll each piece in melted butter or pork drippings, then roll in seasoned flour. Place drippings in roaster and heat until there is sufficient fat to cover chicken. Put in oven. When it begins to brown, add ½ cup boiling water. Baste frequently until well browned, then cover and let cook one hour (425 degrees), or until tender. Serve with the following sauce if wanted, or with plain gravy.

Melt two tablespoons Sanitary butter, stir in two tablespoons of Sanico flour, add ¾ cup of scalded milk. Allow to cook until mixture thickens; stir constantly. Now pour in ½ cup cream and season to taste. Serve. MRS. W. G. ATKINS.
4134 New Hampshire ave. northwest.

Lahim Mushour.
(Lamb Broiled on Skewers.)

2½ pounds shoulder lamb
2 or 3 sliced onions
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt
Pepper

You will need as many steel skewers as there are persons to serve. Cut the lean meat into pieces about two inches square. Mix the oil and lemon and pour this marinade over the meat. Let it stand about an hour, turning now and then. Season with salt and pepper and push the pieces of meat onto the skewer, with a piece of onion between each two pieces of lamb. Broil for about 20 minutes just as you would steaks or chops, turning occasionally so that all sides will be nicely browned.

Market Meanderings

Fruit Blossoms on Sale at Flower Stands; Way to Buy Best Eggs and How They Should Look Told by Merchants.

If there were more food emporiums in the vicinity of the Tidal Basin, the charm of the cherry blossoms this week would have added greatly to the Meanderer's always pleasant task of finding food news to report to the housewives of Washington. But other spots in the Capital are festive with blossoms, too, proclaiming nearly as riotously as do the cherry blossoms, that spring is here again.

Masses of fruit blossoms predominate in the flower stands of the markets. Great clusters of apple and plum blooms sell for a quarter. Potted rose bushes are prominently displayed, reminding the market visitor that it is time to plant them in the rose garden. For 75 cents or less one can buy sizable potted rambler roses. Monthly roses, pink, yellow, and red, cost more than the rambler roses. Cut blooms of lavender, pink, salmon, red, and white gladoli sell for $2 a dozen in one big downtown market.

The sturdy background of a business founded by his grandfather and carried on with distinction by his father, gives to one of the youngest and most successful merchants in a big Washington food market the deep pride which he takes in his work. For more than 100 years the name of this family has meant high quality in the foods they sell. Dairy products and eggs sold under the family name must be of unquestionable quality, the customer knows.

"If you are paying for the best eggs, don't accept them if they are more than a day old," he said. "Too many eggs sold as strictly fresh are hennery eggs, and not too carefully kept. Then, it is important to watch their size. If you are paying the top price, a dozen eggs of the right size should weigh about 1¾ pounds." So saying, he put a dozen of his own carefully selected eggs on the scales, which registered just the weight he had mentioned.

"When the strictly fresh egg is broken, how should it look?" the Meanderer inquired. "I can best show you that by breaking one of these," the marketer readily replied, and readily did break one of the eggs on a piece of wrapping paper. And the gist of the egg-freshness demonstration was that the yolk of the egg should be thick and well-rounded, and that the white, too, should be thick and should spread thinly, but should cling closely to the yolk.

From big dairy farms in Fredericksburg and Kensington these large, fresh eggs are brought daily to this marketer's stand, along with unusually good butter and cheese and other dairy products. And by the well-established reputation of the products—a reputation for which the foundation was laid in 1830—and by her family's delight with the dozen eggs which she bought, took home and poached—the Meanderer knew in 1932 that here was a marketer who knows whereof he speaks, and who is conscientious about the things he sells.

Whole wheat is highly recommended as a health-giving food, and some housewives buy wheat at feed stores in large quantities, the Meanderer learns from a good authority in a health-food shop on Fourteenth street northwest. The wheat kernals may be cooked whole or ground coarse as any other cereal is cooked. A small wheat grinding mill is a new idea offered in this health-food shop. It can be adjusted to grind the wheat fine or coarse.

Another food idea, new to the Meanderer is vegetable tea. It tastes much like orange pekoe tea, and is a food beverage containing the essential mineral salts, especially calcium, iron, and phosphorus. Persons forbidden to drink real tea are substituting this tea for it. It is an American product from California.

If it is left to the man of the family to shop for the meat for the week-end, he won't overlook the choice, juicy, prime ribs of beef selling for 25 cents a pound in one stand at a big food market in the Northwest section. Some other excellent meat values at the same meat stand are porterhouse steak, 30 cents a pound; sirloin, 35 cents, and round steak, 23 cents.

Fresh dates found in a little shop in a busy street in the northwest section come from "Garden of the Setting Sun, Mecca, Calif.," according to the label on the box. The dates, which were just being unpacked by the proprietor, are said to have been packed immediately after they were gathered and cleaned.

Chevy Chase housewives interested in obtaining chain-store prices plus free delivery will find the combination available now that an upper Connecticut avenue grocery has merged with a prominent chain store concern. Some interesting values offered this week by this particular store are: Leg of lamb, 23 cents a pond; two dozen eggs, 35 cents; three cans of stringless beans, 25 cents; fancy fresh crabmeat, 32 cents a pound, and granulated sugar at 10 pounds for 41 cents.

In the corner of a big, centrally located market, at a bakery stand where charlotte russe is fresh every day, there is also to be found a new French pastry, with luscious strawberry centers, selling at only 5 cents each.

FOUR STORIES ABOUT APPLES.

DID you ever hear these stories about apples, stories which show that the apple stands for human power, beauty, strength and love?

Let's begin with the bright red apple that brought power to the human race. Two hundred and fifty years ago there was a quiet young scientist who used to blow soap bubbles all by himself out under the apple trees. The neighbors thought he was rather a simple-minded fellow. But he wasn't. He had the kind of mind that can wonder about simple things, instead of taking them for granted. And this young man, watching those soap bubbles, was able to work out many of the laws of light, and to invent the reflector telescope.

One day, by watching an apple fall—so the story goes—he was able to work out, for the first time, the laws that govern the motions of the moon and the sun and the planets, and in fact everything on earth and in the universe. That scientist, of course, was Sir Isaac Newton, who discovered the law of gravity!

From his work sprang much of our control over nature, and the marvelous things science does today. So I say this apple gave us power.

The job of judging the first beauty contest was given to a young farmer lad named Paris. The contest wasn't run on the level, I'm sorry to say—because three goddesses tried to bribe the young farmer. Juno promised him power and riches; Minerva, glory and renown in war. Venus bribed him with the promise of fair Queen Helen, the most beautiful wife in the world. She received the apple. So this apple, I say, represents Beauty.

The third apple represents strength. When Hercules was a young fellow he went in search of the golden apples which Juno had received as a wedding present. She had given them for safe keeping to some young ladies called Hesperides. So he went to their father, old man Atlas, for help. Now Atlas' job was to stand in a certain spot—stand there forever—and support the pillars of the sky on his shoulders. He said he'd be glad enough to go get the apples—if Hercules would only take care of his heavy burden while he was gone. Atlas finally returned with the apples. Then Hercules had to argue with him to take the sky off his shoulders again. Which Atlas finally did. This apple, we might say, represents Strength.

Then there is the apple that stands for Love. There was a very beautiful girl by the name of Atalanta, who was told that the worst thing she could ever do would be to get married. So she set out to make herself as much of a tomboy as she could. Still, she stayed as beautiful as ever, and young men persisted in asking her to marry them. Finally she agreed that she would marry any man who could beat her in a race—but those who failed must die. She beat everyone easily. Then the referee, a handsome lad named Hippomenes, said he'd race her himself. Atalanta begged him not to; she rather liked that lad, I think. Now Hippomenes, in addition to being handsome, was a shrewd boy. He had three golden apples. As soon as the race began he dropped one of the apples; and Atalanta, being a woman, couldn't resist stopping to see what it was—and pick it up. Twice more he worked the same trick—and so won the race. And Atalanta married him.

There is a fifth story, in which the apple represents Freedom. That famous story in which William Tell's arrow went straight through the apple on his son's head, is so familiar to us all that I won't recount it again today.

CHURCH TO OBSERVE 75TH ANNIVERSARY

Fifth Baptist Celebration Tomorrow to Be Lead by Pastor.

Seventy-five years ago tomorrow a small Baptist congregation was organized in the Southwest section of the city, and took the name of Island Baptist Church. Its organizer was the Rev. Chasteen C. Meador, at that time a student in Columbian University, now George Washington University. Dr. Meador was a licensed preacher and had but recently come to Washington from Bedford County, Va. This church is now known as the Fifth Baptist Church.

After more than 47 years of continuous service as pastor of this church, Dr. Meador retired in the summer of 1904 and became pastor emeritus. He was succeeded as pastor by Dr. Weston Bruner, who served from 1904 to 1909, when the Rev. John E. Briggs, of North Carolina, accepted the call. Dr. Briggs has served 28 consecutive years, and is still vigorous. He came here from Atlanta, Ga., where he was pastor of Capitol Avenue Baptist Church.

Having had but three pastors, it is remarkable that a great celebration was had under each one. Dr. Meador celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary, Dr. Bruner the fiftieth, and now Dr. Briggs celebrates the diamond jubilee.

The present church building was erected in 1891, at a cost of $50,000. To it was added, in 1925, Darlington Hall, at a cost of $60,000.

During the first 50 years of its existence the church raised a sum estimated at a quarter of a million dollars. During Dr. Briggs' pastorate the sum raised has totaled $501,928.77.

Under Dr. Briggs also 4,214 members have been added to the church, of whom 1,946 were added by baptism. The present enrollment is 1,417, with a total enrollment in the Sunday school of 1,652.

A splendid program has been arranged for tomorrow's celebration. In addition to the special music, the pastor will be assisted by Dr. H. W. O Millington, executive secretary of the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches, and by Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, president of Furman University and president of the Southern Baptist Convention, who will preach at both services.

"In Earnest or In-ertia" Is Subject of Sermon

Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Church, Connecticut avenue and Bancroft place, will preach at 11 a. m. on the theme: "In Earnest or In-ertia."

Both sections of the new confirmation class will organize at 3:30 p. m., the seniors with the rector and the juniors with the assistant. This class will be presented at the Cathedral late in May or early in June.

At 4:15 there will be organ music by Charlotte Klein, F. A. G. O. At 4:30 p. m. the Rev. Robert Shores will preach.

New Younger People's Church Group Started

Dr. John C. Palmer, minister of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, will preach tomorrow morning on "Fidelity the Best Evidence of Faith."

A group of the younger people of this church met Thursday night in a conference with the older members and started the organization of a society which will embrace all of the young people of the church, those who are married and those who are not.

Dr. Smith to Address Eastern Shore Parley

Dr. Harvey Baker Smith, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church, Park road west of Fourteenth street northwest, will address the Eastern Shore quarterly meeting at Snow Hill, Md., next Tuesday evening.

Tomorrow morning Dr. Smith will preach on "The Morning Cometh," and in the evening his sermon topic will be "Marriage and the Master's Presence."

Rev. Clinchy Continues "Question" Sermons

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, minister of the Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church, will preach the fourth in a series of sermons on "Five Present-Day Questions," at the morning service in that church tomorrow. The Rev. Mr. Clinchy's subject will be "What Do We Mean By Living Unselfishly?"

Season's Last French Service Is Tomorrow

The Rev. Dr. Florian Vurpillot, pastor of the French Congregation, which worships at St. John's Church, Lafayette square, will hold the last service for the season tomorrow at 8 p. m. and will preach on "Une derniere recommandation de Jesus."

Dr. Pierce to Preach On "Godlike Hours"

Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, minister of All Souls' Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest, will preach tomorrow morning on "Our Godlike Hours." The Church School will meet at 9:45 o'clock.

Christian Science Churches

"Probation After Death" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Job 23:10: "He knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 3:13, 14.) The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Progress takes off human shackles. The finite must yield to the infinite. Advancing to a higher plane of action, thought rises from the material sense to the spiritual, from the scholastic to the inspirational, and from the mortal to the immortal." (Page 256.)

HAS LEAD CHURCH

DR. JOHN E. BRIGGS, Pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church.

Minister to Talk On Holy Land Trip

Dr. A. J. McCartney to Give Illustrated Lecture Tomorrow Night.

Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, minister of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, has chosen for the theme of his morning sermon tomorrow, "The Appeal to Our Nobler Instincts."

In the evening at 8 o'clock Dr. McCartney will give an illustrated lecture on "The Picture Paths of Palestine," covering scenes and places which he viewed this past summer during his trip to the Holy Land. This lecture will be in the chapel.

Thomas E. Rhodes, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, will address the All Comers Men's Class tomorrow morning, his subject being "The Coming Kingdom."

At the annual meeting of the Men's Society of the Church the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: T. H. B. McKnight, president; E. E. Honsberg, Col. Nixon and John W. Haines, vice presidents; Lawrence M. Proctor, corresponding secretary; Bryan K. Ogden, recording secretary, and Sol Arnold, treasurer.

Report on Presbytery To Be Given Church

On Sunday morning at the Central Presbyterian Church, the pastor, Dr. James H. Taylor, will preach on "The Message to the Churches in the Book of Revelation." This is the third of the series on this subject.

CHURCH WILL MARK 40TH ANNIVERSARY

Valparaiso U. President to Deliver Sermon at Christ Lutheran.

Christ Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Gallatin streets northwest, will celebrate tomorrow its fortieth anniversary with appropriate ceremonies led by the pastor, the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel. Dr. Henry H. Kumnick, president of Valparaiso University, will deliver the sermon.

This church is the outgrowth of a desire on the part of a small group of Lutherans to have an English-speaking church. They met on April 11, 1892, and organized a congregation under the name which has ever since been used. The officers elected were: Henry German, president; W. Charles Heitmueller, secretary, and Henry Alberts, treasurer. Bernard Emmert also had an important part in the organization movement.

Every one of these men is still living and all of them, except Mr. German, is a member of this church. He resides in Seattle and is a member of the Lutheran Church there.

The Rev. C. Morhart was the first pastor. He served faithfully until 1908, a period of sixteen years, when the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel was called, and he has led the growing flock ever since.

In 1893 the first house of worship was erected at New Jersey avenue and Morgan street. The building or plant went up in units, and it was not until December 5, 1909, that the beautiful Gothic church of cut Indiana limestone was dedicated.

Year by year the members moved out of that community and finally it became necessary for the congregation, in order to save itself, to select an entirely new location. First a parsonage was purchased at Upton street and Connecticut avenue and then the property on Sixteenth street for the church building. In 1929 the original property was sold to Israel A. M. E. Church, and the congregation has worshiped at Zion Lutheran Church and later in the Colony Theater.

On Sunday, September 13, 1931, the new church was dedicated with three impressive services. The church is built of Port Deposit granite and also faced on the inside with the same granite and is of the early Norman type of architecture found in many of the old towns of England. It has several unique features. Special efforts were made to give it proper landscape setting. The advisory council of architects of the building department of the District have placed it in the distinguished class.

FISCHER TO FACE RED SOX IN SERIES FINALE TODAY

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THE mystery of the now missing batting punch so generally ascribed to the Washington Ball Club in its meanderings through the South's citrus circuit is taking rank with the Lindbergh child-snatching.

That the Washington Club has hardly hit the weight of Charles Augustus, jr., is evident in its first nine games of the season. The batting punch of the club has been sadly lacking. In many games it has been worse than that. In half a dozen games, Ted Husing would have had a word for it.

Only by grace of brilliant pitching do the Nats occupy their present high station in the American League standing. Thus the dope has been kicked askew into the very faces of the experts who blandly admitted that the Nats were not much on pitching, but that their hitting was something else again, and quite potent.

The deep-seated theories of the experts on paper haven't worked out on the grass of the American League diamonds. From the lead-off position down through sixth place, the Nats were supposed to have the greatest show of sustained batting power ever boasted by a Washington club.

Buddy Myer, Heinie Manush, Sammy West, Joe Cronin, Carl Reynolds and Joe Judge were supposed to have fortified the Nats with a great amount of slugging that was caluculated to offset weak pitching. Yet the Nats have played two 1-0 games and one 2-0 contest.

Not one of these power boys of the batting order have an average of better than .275 to show for their efforts in the first nine games. Joe Cronin has been a great offender from his vantage point in the "clean up" role with an average of only .259. Buddy Myer is in the doldrums with a .237 mark. Heinie Manush and Sammy West boast averages of only .275 and Carl Reynolds has hit only .240. Joe Judge can show only a .250 average.

These are false averages, every one of them. Joe Cronin, Heinie Manush, Carl Reynolds and Sammy West are .300 hitters, naturally, just as surely as Charles Augustus, jr., is still missing. Joe Judge and Buddy Myer will hover about the .300 mark as long as they are able to drag a bat to the plate. But the figures have told the truth of their batting efforts thus far.

A word in defense of the Nats' efforts at bat this far is found in the pitching they have been asked to face. In their nine games this season, they have taken on consecutively some of the cleverest among the American League twirlers. In order they have met Danny Macfayden, Jack Russell, Horace Lisenbee, Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw, Rube Walberg, Leroy Mahaffey, Danny Macfayden again and Jack Russell once more.

The result has been a foregone conclusion virtually every time Grove or Earnshaw faced the Nats. Three other pitchers in the American League are calculated to cause the Nats almost as much trouble. They are Ferrell, of Cleveland, and Gomez and Ruffing, of the Yanks.

Thus the fact that the Nats have faced good pitching is an excuse for their batting weakness. They will be asked to face much good pitching during the pennant campaign and a sharp upward trend in the batting averages is imperative, if they are to remain a pennant contender.

Manager Johnson appears to be tearing a page from the well-known pitching book of Connie Mack in the matter of his relief twirlers.

Against the Athletics in the recent series in Philadelphia, Johnson found it logical to insert as relief pitchers two stars he had depended upon to rotate as regular starters. Crowder and Marberry were injected into the games in the late innings and obliged Johnson by a fine brand of relief work.

Mack has been operating his aces Grove and Earnshaw on this theory for the last four years with salient effect. With his club leading by a single run in the late innings, or the score tied, Mack has regarded the game as a new ball game and has not hesitated to send in Grove and Earnshaw to protect his lead or hold the opposition at bay until another lead is established.

Johnson's two experiences with Crowder and Marberry in relief roles have been successful and they doubtless will be seen in action in that capacity whenever the occasion demands their presence.

Allison Beats Shields in 3 Sets

Makes Strong Bid for Davis Cup Singles Post by Victory.

Vines Also in Finals of Mason-Dixon by Ousting McCauliff.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 22 (A.P.).—Wilmer Allison, originally picked to play only in the doubles on the United States Davis Cup Team, today made a strong bid for the No. 2 singles berth when he defeated his team mate and chief rival for the honor, Frank Shields, in the semi-final round of the Mason and Dixon tennis championships.

Allison allowed the lanky New Yorker only five games as he swept through the match by the score of 6—2, 6—2, 6—1, to earn the right to meet Ellsworth Vines, national champion, in the championship match tomorrow. Vines gained the final round with a straight set victory over Dr. Eugene McCauliff, of Yonkers, N. Y., 8—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Allison Proves Sensation.

When the Davis Cup Team of four—Vines, Allison, Shields and John Van Ryn—was named, it was intended that Vines and Shields should play in the singles and Allison and Van Ryn in the doubles against Canada at Washington, D. C., next week. Since then, however, Allison has given the tennis fathers food for thought. He defeated Vines twice before overwhelming Shields today and won four of the five tournaments in which he has played. In the other he went to the finals.

The real upset of today's tournament occurred in the semifinals of the men's doubles, where Marcel Rainville, Canadian Davis Cup player, and McCauliff, playing together as a team for the first time this week, defeated Allison and Van Ryn, the national doubles champion. The Rainville-McCauliff combination won, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3.

Vines and Shields won the other doubles semifinal, defeating J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, national indoor titleholder, 6—2, 5—7, 7—5.

Virginia Hilleary, of Philadelphia, won the women's singles championship, defeating Mrs. John Van Ryn, the defending champion, in three hard fought sets. The score was 6—3, 1—6, 9—7.

The schedule for tomorrow calls for the women's doubles finals at 10 a. m., men's singles championship match at 10:30 a. m. and the finals of the men's doubles at 2:30 p. m.

Cubs Bunch Hits Early To Defeat Reds, 5 to 4

Chicago, April 22 (A.P.).—Chicago's Cubs bunched seven of their eight hits in the first three innings today to defeat Cincinnati, 5 to 4, in the third game of the series.

Guy Bush pitched well for the Cubs until the seventh when he weakened and required help from Charley Root. The victory gave the Cubs a 2 to 1 edge in the series.

Tigers' Lead Is Belittled By Mack

A's Pilot Says Detroit Can Not Maintain Fast Start.

NEW YORK, April 22 (U.P.).—Connie Mack, lean, gray-haired manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, remained unperturbed today when word was received that those amazing Detroit Tigers had secured a firmer footing on the top of the American League ladder by swamping Cleveland again, 16 to 3.

"It's a little too early in the season to get excited about anything yet," he reassured smilingly as he lounged back in a huge leather chair in the lobby of the Alamac.

"Actually, I'm glad to see Detroit getting a running start. They'll need it in a few weeks when warm baseball weather arrives and the Yanks, Nats and Athletics begin hitting their stride."

Tigers Youngest In League.

The veteran pilot of the American League champions emphasized that the Tigers comprised perhaps the youngest team in the American League, and that youngsters usually got off to a better start than veterans in the cold weeks.

"But," he declared, "I'm confident they'll not remain in the lead when the other boys get going. It's a little too early to make any analysis of the race, but I feel certain it will develop into a hot fight between New York, Washington and Philadelphia. Good showings by the other teams help make the race more interesting."

He admitted he was not satisfied with the work of the A's thus far, but he was confident they would begin playing championship baseball shortly.

"Don't think for a minute that I'm sure we will win the pennant this year," he cautioned. "The Nats played below their standard last year. They are showing great improvement already. Moreover, the Yankees are stronger. We will be fortunate to finish among the first three. Anyway, it looks like a good fight, and that's what everyone wants."

U. S.-British Golf Play Scheduled at Brookline

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—The 1932 Walker Cup Golf matches between teams representing the United States and Great Britain will be played at the Country Club, Brookline, Mass., the United States Golf Association announced today. Dates will be set later, probably for the first week in September.

Tilden, Burke Win in Pro Tourney

"Big Bill" Beats Pare, 6-3, 6-4, But Bows in Doubles.

Najuch Succumbs to Burke in Strenuous Battle, 7-5, 13-11.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

THE old Wizard of Oz of the tennis racquet, W. T. Tilden 2d, in all his pristine glory, strutted his undeniable stuff yesterday on the courts at Wardman Park Hotel, with his glare, his ruffled temperament, his cannonball service and his first showmanship functioning on what looked like all twelve cylinders.

He cracked open the tennis season with a loud swishing thrust of his lethal racquet as he swept over Emmett Pare in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4, in the first round of the Wardman round robin professional tournament. Albert Burke was the other victor who emerged from yesterday's play, beating out a 210-pound jovial German giant, Roman Najuch, 7—5, 13—11, in a bitter match that lasted well over an hour.

Tilden tasted unlooked for defeat in the doubles when, paired with the other singles winner of the day, he went down before the withering play of Pare and Najuch in a riotous doubles, 6—1, 5—7, 6—3—a match fought out in fading daylight, punctuated by brilliant rallies, dominated by Najuch's Babe Ruthian overhead smash, Pare's pickups that defied most of the established laws of gravity, and Tilden's fine display of the court conduct that has made him the greatest figure the game ever knew.

Tilden Opposes German Today.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the show goes on, with Pare meeting Burke in singles, Tilden contesting the ponderous and amiable Najuch, and Tilden and Najuch meeting Pare and Burke. Tilden and Najuch last met at Palm Beach, in February, when the German held Tilden three match points only to see the victory snatched from him when the gaunt ghost of the tennis courts applied supernatural steam to his drives and won out.

Fought out under perfect tennis conditions, yesterday's matches produced unsuspected good form. Najuch and Burke played as close a match as the year probably will produce. The huge German, with ample muscle, held under slight restraint by his belt, looks like one of Jack Curley's rasslers who got his bookings mixed up and played tennis instead of growling with Tiny Roebuck.

But Najuch put up a marvelous exhibition of tennis against Burke, who won out, 13 to 11, in the second set only by producing a brick wall defensive game that was simply impenetrable, even by the resounding socks of Najuch. It was a perfect display of backhand driving, was this battle. Both men use the continental style of play, and their match was a living essay on the premise that tennis can be played gracefully and with great pressure at the same time.

Tilden romped over Emmet Pare, engulfing the valiantly fighting former Georgetowner with a myriad assortment of strokes. It was the Tilden of old, now wafting the ball in slow motion barely over the net, then blasting it with a speed that did not give the alert Pare time to move his racquet.

Pare and Najuch went right after Tilden and Burke in the doubles, leading 5 to 0 in the first set before dropping a game. Tilden, ably abetted by Burke, averted a straight set loss by a swooping net attack in the second set, but Pare and Najuch were not to be denied, and they won the final set and match with a swirl of offensive hitting before which few combinations in tennis could have remained erect.

TIGERS BEAT CLEVELAND AGAIN

Add to League Lead by 16-3 Triumph; Make 22 Hits.

CLEVELAND, April 22 (A.P.).—The soaring Detroit Tigers tightened their grip on first place in the American League today as they battered Cleveland pitchers for 22 hits and a 16-to-3 victory.

Detroit now has a one and one-half game lead over Washington, which was idle today, the Tigers having won eight games against two losses, while the Nationals have won six and lost three.

Even the Detroit pitcher, Whitlow Wyatt, joined the hitting barrage, making four hits, including a home run and a single both in the ninth inning.

Wyatt kept the Indians' ten hits well scattered and was pulled out of tight places by three double plays.

Earl Averill hit for the first time in five games today, and Frank Pytlak, recruit catcher from the Buffalo International League Team, in his first big league appearance, hit a double.

ERROR GIVES CARDS 5-3 VICTORY

6-Game Losing Streak Ended by Waner's Muff in 10th.

PITTSBURGH, April 22 (A.P.).—The world champion St. Louis Cardinals snapped out of a six-game losing streak today, to down the Pittsburgh Pirates in ten innings, 5 to 3.

It was the second ten-inning battle between the clubs in two days.

Loose fielding on the part of the Pirates virtually tossed the game to St. Louis.

Adams scored the winning run when Lloyd Waner, hero of yesterday's contest, muffed Bottomley's short fly. Gus Suhr also did a bit of juggling that helped the Cards to victory.

Nats Lacking In Batting Punch

Owe High Standing to Clever Pitching in Most Games.

Johnson Prescribes Morning Workout for Batters.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

MANAGER WALTER JOHNSON had his Nationals out bright and early at Griffith Stadium yesterday morning trying to teach them how to hit and this afternoon at 3 o'clock his charges again will meet the Boston Red Sox to see if their yesterday's lesson did them any good. Carl Fischer, young southpaw, will do the Washington hurling, with Horace Lisenbee likely to draw the box assignment from Manager John Collins.

In the nine games the Nationals have played so far, they have managed to win six, but this has been due, except in two cases, to good pitching. Oddly enough, it was the mound staff which was rated most questionable in the preseason dope, which also indicated that the team's punch would be twice as potent as it has been.

It so happens that the N

ENGLISH KNIGHT WINS FEATURE RACE AT GRAW AT $74 MUTUEL

Maiden Sets Entire Pace In Upset

Outruns Microphone, Happy Warrior in Feature Sprint.

Battering Ram Fouls General Court; Is Disqualified.

By WALTER HAIGHT.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, April 22. — English Knight, owned by F. J. Hayes, mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., gave a crowd of 12,000 something to think about here today when he outran his field in the 6-furlong sprint feature, the Calvert Purse. There was only a faint handclap when Jockey Callahan brought the son of Bright Knight back to the judges' stand, but there was a chorus of "ah's" when a mutuel price of $74.10 was hung up on the board.

English Knight, a maiden 3-year-old trained by C. Manley, had never shown anything in racing circles that approached his exhibition today, although it was common talk after the race that the colt had worked 4 furlongs in 0:48 here recently. That news failed to reach the principal betters, however, who backed Microphone and Pending into cofavoritism.

Microphone took the second honors, a length and a half behind English Knight, with Happy Warrior in third place, two lengths away.

English Knight made every post a winning one. Callahan whipped him to the front at the rise of the barrier and only had to ride thereafter. Schaefer, on Microphone, tried hard to bat his mount up in the stretch but the colt was not equal to the task. Happy Warrior gained some ground on the front pair in the stretch run.

General Court Wins, After Foul.

The fifth race resulted in the first disqualification in Maryland this spring. Battering Ram swerved to bump General Court in the driving finish. After Battering Ram's number had been hung up and his backers had ceased their cheering, the judges decided General Court had suffered interference and announced him the winner. Hatteras moved up to second place and Homework tucked his way into the money.

Frank Hayes' Cantoria defeated the field of maiden 2-year-olds that bought the Griffwood purse in the opener. Happy Anne, from the Labrot group, was second, ahead of Red Run, Sagamore Stable colt. Happy Anne, Cantoria and Red Run broke in the first group and the first named stepped out to a good lead. Jimmy Smith, on Cantoria, moved his mount up rounding the turn for home and drew away from Happy Anne, which was beaten two lengths for the purse. Red Run was another length behind.

Sergt. Donaldson Wins by Nose.

Sergt. Donaldson, a Whisk Broom II colt, was ridden to a nose victory in the second race by Johnny Gilbert. Avalon, the favorite, was the second horse, with Uncovered third. Pancho Lopez was hurried to the front on the trip up the backstretch, followed by Avalon and Sergt. Donaldson. The top pair were running head and head on the swing toward the stretch. Gilbert made his move as the field straightened out, and Nertney, on Avalon, went to the whip.

In the stretch drive, Avalon had the best of the battle to the sixteenth pole; but Gilbert, working hard on Sergt. Donaldson, whipped the colt ahead just at the wire. Sergt. Donaldson was overlooked by a majority of the betters and paid a $12.30 mutuel.

Autumnal Scores Over Boscobel.

Autumnal, a Stephan the Great filly, defeated the favored Boscobel in the third race over the 5½-furlong course. Linton was third. After Autumnal broke on top, Jockey Leishman let the filly fall behind the pace set by Boscobel. Autumnal stayed up to Boscobel's saddle post until the last few yards when she drew up to win by a nose. Linton Nell overcame interference at the start to drive into third money ahead of Bright Luna, the paddock tip.

Major General handed a length and a half beating to Don Tasker in the sixth race and gave the long-shot players another thrill. Major General paid off at the rate of $75.10 to $2. Blaze White was third. With the exception of a few yards soon after the start, Major General had command all the way. Don Tasker came with a stretch rush that did not threaten the winner.

Deedie took the finale from Garlic with War Saint third.

AUTUMNAL, going forwardly from the beginning, challenged stoutly when straightened into the home stretch and, closing with good courage, was up in the final strides. BOSCOBEL, who gained a slight lead when midway of the turn, saved ground thereafter, but was unable to shake off the winner. LINTON NELL secured racing room on the inside in the final three-sixteenths and finished gamely. BRIGHT LUNA was racing resolutely at the end. PREFER came determinedly after dropping back soon after the turn. HURRY MORE aligned fast on the inside through the home stretch. LACE SHAWL was done after four furlongs.

BATTERING RAM, restrained off the pace, gained fast in the final half mile when taken to the outside, swerved and bore over on GENERAL COURT inside the final furlong when moving to the front and was disqualified for a stretch foul. GENERAL COURT, in close attendance of the pace from the start, took a brief lead and held on well when interfered with in the final sixteenth mile. HATTERAS closed a big gap. HOME WORK, prominent throughout, continued gamely to outstay BROADWAY LIGHTS. Latter, messed about badly and repeatedly blocked until leaving the back stretch, finished well when securing clear passage. MY FERGUS could not keep up when reaching contention.

MAJOR GENERAL raced GREYLOCK into quick submission, drew clear midway of the final turn and, continuing stoutly, held DON TASKER safe under pressure. Latter, very sluggish in the first half mile, settled in his stride and, securing racing room next the inner rail thereafter, closed full of run. BLAZE WHITE made a stout effort when leaving the back stretch, but hung badly in the final test. GLORIA MARIS, under restraint for six furlongs, weakened badly when placed to a drive. ## AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL:

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK.

They staged the Parade of the Wooden Soldiers here yesterday. Among those who came marching home were Sergt. Donaldson, English Knight, General Court and Major General. And what a load of booty! I managed to slip in three winners, including the Sergt.

There is a possibility that Buddy Ensor will be up on Lightning Bolt in today's feature. Mrs. John Hay Whitney has first call on his services. If the veteran doesn't come down from New York, Albert Robertson will. That's all the big news for today.

BILL.

The absence of Equipoise makes the $10,000 Philadelphia Handicap a wide-open race. TRED AVON is my choice. This is the first time this spring that the Lebrot miss has been asked to go the route and I firmly believe her capable of turning back this high class opposition. Distances over a mile were her forte last year and Trainer Irvine seems to have her ready to renew operations successfully in the longer races. Finished fast in two sprints. Had little chance against Equipoise after being forced back by a jam. SPINACH seems to have found new life. Romped home ahead of Boundless Deep the other day and may be made the favorite here. B'AR HUNTER tucked away a pair of decisions at Bowie and is dangerous even among these.

FIRST RACE—SCUTTLE raced well last year with fair horses. Was beaten off by narrow margins. The filly is reported to be in condition and has a chance to leave the maiden ranks here. WAR HERO, son of Man o' War, has been close up and should take this second money. TORTWAY made up some ground behind Vishnu at Bowie and may get third.

SECOND RACE—ALL COLUMBIA is as honest as any of these platers thrown in this sprint. Has been freshened up and may step out to lead these from start to finish. CHOSEN PAL has been running in better company. Did well at Bowie. DADDY NELSON may use that stretch rush to advantage in this sprint.

THIRD RACE—KEGGY seemed to be short

EASTERN DEFEATS TECH, 5-4

Lincoln Park Team Wins On Rallies

Lanahan, After Poor Start, Holds Tech Nine Safe.

Turner Pitches Well; Loses When Hit Bounces Away.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL made its debut in the high school baseball series yesterday and simultaneously scored its seventeenth consecutive series victory as a stubborn Tech team bowed, 5 to 4, in one of the best games witnessed in recent years. The contest established a new high mark for schoolboy baseball. It was remarkably free from errors, close until the final putout had been registered, and was witnessed by an enthusiastic gathering of several hundred fans.

Dick Lanahan, lanky Eastern southpaw, got off to a shaky start and Tech assumed a 3-run lead in the first two innings of the fray. Two of the markers came in the first inning when Carl Nau poled one over the right field fence with Wills resting on second base. Eastern retaliated with an attack that sent Joe Mills scurrying over the pan in its half of the first, but Tech came right back and counted twice in round two on a pass to "Little Ed" Turner, Wills' triple and a timely single by Vic Gauzza.

Bases on Balls Bring Runs.

Two were out in the fifth frame when the defending champions inaugurated a rally which enabled them to approach within a run of tying their opponents. Lanahan and Mills drew free tickets to first, and both scored when Eddie Fitzpatrick dumped a Texas Leaguer in right center. The tying and winning runs came in the eighth inning. With one down Moore was safe on a fielder's choice, and Fitzgerald, running for Bassin, was nipped at second. Miller walked and the pair then engineered a double steal. Pusateri clouted a long single to centerfield, which took a bad bounce and evaded Virnstein, the hit going for three bases.

Ed Turner, who twirled for Tech, shaded Lanahan a bit in the earlier stages of the game, but Lanahan improved as the game progressed and was going at his best pace when the tilt ended.

TECH BEATEN AT TRACK, 71 TO 56

Wins 7 Firsts But Bows to Episcopal; Smith Stars.

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 22.—Tech High, of Washington, displayed unsuspected strength in its track team here today, but yielded to the unbeaten Episcopal High squad by the score of 71 to 56. The visitors took seven firsts, several of them totally unlooked for, but the better spread-out caliber of the Episcopal outfit turned the tide in its favor.

Smeltzer, of Tech, won both the sprints, nosing out Dodson in each. Smith beat out the favorite, Tufts, to give Tech first place in the 120-yard high hurdles. Tech, always strong in the relay, showed that this year is no exception when its quartet nosed out the guests in the good time of 3:38 1-5.

Esunas showed well for Tech by winning the discus with a 116-foot 5-inch heave and placing second to Bob Train, crack Episcopal field events man, in the shot put.

New Teams Added By Senior League

Brookland Boys Club and Takoma Tigers Play for D. C. Title.

Two new teams applied for franchises in the senior division of The Post's Capital City League at the meeting held last night in the office of the Playground Department at the District Building. Harry Clark, manager of the Brookland Boys Club, and C. Y. Turner, pilot of the Takoma Tiger Seniors, requested the franchises.

At the meeting it was announced that the loop would be officially opened Saturday, May 14, when the Miller Furniture Co. nine plays a team yet to be named as a feature of the Festival of Youth celebration to be staged on the Monument Grounds. Its opponent will be selected on the strength of its performances in preseason practice games.

A move to have the league directors restore the 18-player limit to its former place in the regulations was inaugurated by A. R. Bowers, manager of the Dor-A Club. The motion was unanimously adopted by the teams and will be presented to the board for further action. A discussion, involving the amount of the franchise fee, absorbed a large portion of the meeting. The matter will be taken up again at another meeting to be held Monday night.

SHIKAT-STEIN BOUT HERE LISTED

Top Notch Wrestlers Headline Program at Auditorium.

DICK SHIKAT, smoothest of all the boys who plod about the ranks of rassling, heads next week's card of bouts at the Washington Auditorium, where he will meet Sammy Stein, another topnotcher in Eastern mat circles.

Jim McMillen, a third headliner in these parts, appears in a preliminary match, in which he will meet real competition in Howard Cantonwine, one of the most interesting of the newer boys. This match is limited to 30 minutes, all of which probably will be used.

The rest of Matchmaker Turner's card will be announced tomorrow.

Shikat's appearance in town will be preceded by another former champion when Gus Sonnenberg, ranking No. 2 man of the Bowser Boys, meets Bull Martin at Bolling Field Monday night.

Karl Pojello, a strong favorite here, also will appear in the Bolling Field show. He is paired with Clivio Massimo, who was beaten badly by Martin last week. Marvin Westenberg, hailed as "the coming champion," is down on the card to meet a professional bad man in Charley Strack.

Sam Cordovano, late of Georgetown, meets his toughest competition yet in Danny Winters, 20-year-old mastodon. In another Bolling Field match Lee Wycoff, former big league pitcher and St. Louis University Frank Merriwell, has to do with Bob Wilkie.

HILLTOP NINE BEATEN, 8-7 BY N. Y. U.

Lindquist Pounded at Start; Rally in 8th Falls Short.

Special to The Washington Post.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 22.—New York University's hard-hitting batters carved a handsome lead off three Georgetown pitchers early in the game here today, but almost had the game stolen when the Hoyas staged a few rallies of their own. The final score was 8 to 7.

Georgetown started Lindquist, who was nicked for three solid hits and walked a batter in the first inning. Four runs resulted and Heaney was sent to the hill at the start of the second inning.

N. Y. U. kept pecking away at Heaney's offerings, but most of its runs came in lots of one. The Hoyas, after their two runs in the first inning, were held in subjection by Signer, who began to weaken in the seventh and eighth. Georgetown rushed three runs across in the eighth, but just failed to tie.

McNamara, the star pitcher and leading hitter of the N. Y. U. outfit, clouted four hits in a busy afternoon, being the mainspring in the Violet attack. He hit a home run over the running track in the center field for the longest blow of the game.

G. U. Prep Trounces Friends Nine, 11 to 0

Scoring 8 runs in the first inning, Georgetown Prep experienced little difficulty in disposing the Friends School baseball team, winning by a score of 11 to 0 in a listless game played at Garrett Park yesterday. Every man on the Georgetown squad saw action.

The game went only seven innings because of darkness. Keating held the losers to two bingles in the six innings he toiled, and Barry mowed them down in order in the final frame. Cohan slammed a home run for the victors.

SUGGESTION FOR A BRIEF PARTY PLATFORM.

("I would like to see the Democrats adopt a platform at Chicago that is so brief it could be read and understood by the man on the street in a few minutes."—Alfred E. Smith.)

* * * *

1—We frankly admit that these are trying times, that the problems confronting the Nation are very complicated and that we do not think they can be solved merely by a change of faces at the White House.

2—We make it known at the outset that our candidate is not a miracle man, a Hindoo magician, a Hercules, an intellectual genius or a Boy Wonder.

3—Realizing very clearly that we are facing a tremendous job, all we can promise is to do our best.

4—We hereby reaffirm our faith in Santa Claus, but promise not to depend on him in the pinches.

5—We want the jobs.

6—The pussyfooters and straddlers have made it impossible to get through any honest plank on prohibition, war debts and other vital issues, but we think the voters know pretty much how the candidate stands on these matters and what he will do about them, if elected.

7—We evade any long pledges about moratoriums, tariffs, economic readjustments, &c., because we don't know any too much about the subjects and the voters wouldn't believe us, anyhow, but we guarantee to try to bring about the following benefits, which, we think, appeal more to the average man:

(a) Three meals a day, if we get the breaks.

(b) Two meals a day, if we don't

(c) A roof over every man's head and an honest attempt to plug up any leaks.

(d) Enough jobs to go around, if we can possibly do it.

(e) An honest and sincere effort to raise the wage level.

(f) Shoes for baby.

8. We stand for a deflation of orators in public life.

9. We flatly reject the theory of a chicken in every pot and a two-car garage with every home, but we pledge ourselves to do what we can to get some meat in every sandwich and no police court summons for parking the flivver in front of the shack.

10. We will try to be on the level with ourselves and with the public.

11. We present the above statements and pledges as having come from sources which we believe accurate, but they are not guaranteed by us.

RETAIL TRADE DIPS IN 55 LEADING CITIES

Industrial Plants Slow In Recovery, Reviews Report.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Diverse opinions regarding the trend in industry and trade during the past week are given in the weekly mercantile reviews, but from the general summaries it appears that the week was not featured by any developments of special significance.

Dun's said that business continued at a fairly even tenor, holding its previous small gains and recording betterment in the lines that took on increased activity under the stimulus of favorable spring conditions.

Spring's backwardness, said Bradstreets, has had an untoward effect on industry and commerce generally. Their reports from 55 leading cities and centers show that merchandising has fallen behind and that industrial plants, though making a brave effort at recovery are slow in accomplishing anything like an upturn.

Production of cigarettes during March totaled 8,446,897,851, compared with 9,802,400,017 in March, 1931. Production of large cigars totaled 355,282,130, against 440,472,410 in the like month of last year.

New bond offerings this week amounted to $60,984,000, compared with $11,192,000 last week and $11,720,949 a year ago.

A decrease of 9.6 per cent in employment in the silk industry during March, 1932, as compared with the previous month, is reported by the Silk Association of America, Inc. March employment was 20.5 per cent lower than the same month last year.

Wall street hears that the March quarter report of the National Steel Co. will show the 25-cent dividend earned by a small margin. The company was one of the few steel companies to earn its dividend last year.

Wall Street Briefs

(Associated Press.)

William A. Irvin, newly elected director of the United States Steel Corporation, has been elected a director of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Union Pacific's holdings of Railroad Securities Co. common and preferred stock were transferred during 1931 to the Kansas City Industrial & Land Co., another Union Pacific affiliate, it was reported in Wall street today. The Railroad Securities Co. owns a large block of Illinois Central Railroad stock.

Standard Investing Corporation announces that it will purchase for retirement and cancellation up to $500,000 principal amount of its debentures at prices not exceeding 60 per cent or par plus accrued interest to May 6, 1932. The company has asked for tenders from the holders of both the 5 per cent debentures and 5½ per cent convertible debentures.

Commenting on the S. S. Kresge Co. dividend situation at the annual meeting, C. D. Van Dusen, president of the company, said the dividend would not be passed, but that the board would take action which in its judgment was the best for the company.

The short interest on the New York Curb Exchange increased 15,727 shares between March 31 and April 15. The total on the latter date was 83,550 shares compared with 67,823 shares at the end of last month. During the fortnight 3,384,359 shares were dealt in.

In view of the indicated yield of 20 per cent Wall street would not be surprised if the Standard Gas & Electric Co. took action fairly soon toward lowering the $3.50 annual dividend rate on the common stock. The next meeting of the board for dividend action is scheduled for early in June.

John M. Lovejoy, president of Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware, has informed the stockholders that the company's estimated profit in the first quarter of 1932 was $175,000 compared with profit of $53,155 for the same period last year and total profit of $123,711 for all of 1931.

The L. A. Young Spring & Wire Co. had March quarter net income of $5,773, equal to 1 cent a share on the capital stock, compared with $233,080, or 56 cents a share on the first quarter of 1931.

Warner Quinlan Co. reports a net loss for the year ended December 31, 1931, of $711,524 after depletion, depreciation, interest and taxes and other charges. This compares with a net loss of $1,655,832 in 1930.

The National Credit Corporation, formed last autumn to advance aid to banks, announces the fourth refund of subscription payments. The payment, amounting to 10 per cent or $13,500,000, will be made to the participating banks on May 2, it will leave $74,250,000 of the corporation's gold note paid-in capital outstanding.

Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. for the quarter ended March 31, reports net loss of $10,776, after taxes, interest, depreciation, and depletion, compared with net profit of $66,252, equal to 41 cents a share on the common stock in the first quarter of 1931.

The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, as trustees of the Chesapeake Corporation collateral trust 5 per cent bonds, continued the largest holder of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway common stock at the end of 1931, with 2,449,300 shares. The remainder of the stock owned by Chesapeake Corporation is held in the name of nominees included in the list of twenty largest holders. George F. Baker, jr., is listed as a holder of 83,828 shares

Thouugh reconciled to a crop of very poor earning statements for the first quarter, Wall street now is looking for an occasional bit of good news along with the bad. It was gossip today, for instance, that Texas Gulf Sulphur and Air Reduction companies would just about earn their dividends for this period.

Taking a look ahead, Wall street wondered from what source it could next expect encouragement. Prompt action by the Senate in putting its tax bill into shape and by both houses in agreeing on measures of Government economy, it was felt, would help clear the picture materially. Financial fundamentals, it was pointed out in banking and brokerage circles, have been strengthened greatly by the credit expansion activities of the Reserve system, even though it may be some time before business takes advantage of the benefits thus provided.

Meanwhile, events at Washington will be closely followed.

Holland Withdraws $13,544,900 in Gold

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—The gold statement issued by the New York Federal Reserve Bank today revealed the first of the shipments of earmarked gold held here for the account of the Bank of the Netherlands.

The bank reported withdrawals for export amounting to $14,363,900, of which $13,544,900 is being shipped to Holland, $619,000 to Belgium, and $200,000 to England.

The export movement was offset by a decrease of $13,344,900 in the earmark account, an import of $99,300 from Mexico and the receipt at San Francisco of $114,000 from China.

B. & O. ADDS MORE AIR-COOLED TRAINS

Accommodation Extended to Long-Distance Runs in Sleeping Cars.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad yesterday inaugurated what is said to be the first long-distance, air-conditioned sleeping car train, when the National Limited, running daily in both directions between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis, was made up entirely of fully air-conditioned cars. Next month, the Capitol Limited, operating daily between New York, Washington and Chicago, will likewise be air-conditioned throughout, including sleeping cars, it was stated.

This development is in line with the effort of the company to air-condition its trains as rapidly as equipment can be provided. It began the innovation in April, 1930, when the dining car Martha Washington, announced then by the company as the first railroad car to be air-conditioned, was placed in service. Last year, the parlor cars and coaches on the Columbian, running between New York and Washington, were air-conditioned and announced as forming the first complete train so equipped.

While it is possible to lower the inside temperature to 70 degrees, in order to avoid discomfort to passengers, it will not be lowered below 75. Humidity control, they explain, is also provided, ranging around 50 per cent.

When the train is in motion, power for the air-conditioning system in each car is supplied by a generator driven from the car axle, automatically charging batteries at speeds varying from 12 miles per hour to maximum speed of train. With this system the air-conditioning equipment is operated continuously, whether the train is standing or moving.

Columbia Phonograph Co., Inc., yesterday announced reorganization of its executive personnel and its entry into the field of radio receiving set manufacture and merchandising. H. E. Ward, of Chicago, has been elected president and H. Curtiss Abbott, of New York, vice president in charge of sales merchandising and advertising. F. J. Ames remains as treasurer. Messrs. Ward and Abbott were elected to the board of directors also.

Mr. Ward's business experience covers many years in the radio industry, particularly in connection with financing. Mr. Abbott is a sales and merchandising director whose experience dates back to the beginning of the radio industry. Mr. Ward will devote his entire time to Columbia affairs, from the executive offices at 55 Fifth avenue, New York.

R. HOE & CO. AGREES TO EQUITY RECEIVER

113-Year-Old Printing Press Manufacturer Has $11,926,134 Assets.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—R. Hoe & Co., Inc., manufacturer of newspaper printing presses, was petitioned into an equity receivership in Federal court today.

The officers of the company filed an answer in which they consented to the action.

Although not incorporated until 1924, R. Hoe & Co. has been doing business for 113 years. It was founded by Richard Hoe.

The action was instituted by Kenneth A. Christian, a stockholder, on a claim of $3,243. Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman appointed the Irving Trust Co. and Henry R. Swartz equity receivers under a joint bond of $50,000.

The petition set forth that, due to the widespread distribution of the product of the company and its uninterrupted operation for 113 years, "its good will is of exceeding value."

The corporation was capitalized with 100,000 class A shares and 180,000 shares of common, both of no-par value. It has a funded debt of $4,502,000, and the consolidated balance sheet as of February 29 last showed gross assets of $11,926,134. The petition showed that current liabilities, in addition to the funded debt, amounted to $2,821,862.

The petition showed the board of directors, April 18 last, adopted a resolution authorizing the company's officers to consent to the action.

The disappointing course of events in the steel industry in March has prepared Wall street for another decrease in the monthly unfilled tonnage figures of the United States Steel Corporation, to be released on Saturday. A decrease will be contrary to the March 31 showing for the past three years.

Du Pont Earns 74c On Common Stock

Compares With $1.01 Per Share in First Quarter of 1931.

Philadelphia, April 22 (A.P.).—Earnings of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. for the first quarter of 1932, applicable to the common stock amounted to 74 cents a share, compared with $1.01 a share in the first quarter last year.

The earnings included the company's equity in undivided profits or losses of controlled companies not consolidated, and amounted to $8,059,134, compared with $11,229,595 for the same period in 1931.

The figures for 1932 include income from General Motors investment amounting to 45 cents a share on Du Pont common, as compared with 68 cents for the first quarter last year.

Net income for the first quarter this year amounted to $9,689,433, compared with $12,856,929 for the first quarter in 1931. Excluding income from the General Motors investment, the income was $4,700,100, a decrease of $472,829.

The value of the Du Pont Co.'s investment in General Motors Corporation common stock, equivalent to 9,981,220 shares, was adjusted on the books of the company in March, 1932, to $168,682,618, or from $17.90 a share, the previous valuation, to $16.90 a share.

Cotton Belt R. R. Plans Note Issue

Proposes $4,500,000 Flotation for Renewal of Bank Loans.

(Associated Press.)

The St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve $4,500,000 of notes to care for renewal of bank loans and a note of $750,000 to the Railway Credit Corporation.

The notes are a part of the refinancing of the road, which is also known as the Cotton Belt, and which became a unit in the Southern Pacific system on April 14.

The commission, two weeks ago, approved a loan of $18,000,000 to the road by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. As a condition of the loan it required that the Cotton Belt arrange with banks holding $9,000,000 of short term notes to carry half of this sum for so long as the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan runs.

All finance corporation loans run for three years or less, so today's applications ask authority to issue notes to mature June 1, 1934.

The notes to be issued would be $1,000,000 to the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., of St. Louis and $3,500,000 to the Chase National Bank, of New York. They would bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent.

PARAMOUNT PUBLIX REDUCES PAY AGAIN

Third Cut in Recent Months; Earned $2.01 a Share in 1931.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Employes of the Paramount Publix Corporation, one of the country's largest moving-picture conterns, were informed by the management today of another cut in their salaries and also that vacations of two weeks without pay would be enforced this summer.

Two previous reductions in pay amounting to around 20 per cent have been taken by Paramount workers during recent months. These cuts applied to salaries in excess of $50 weekly. The slash announced today is 5 per cent of the first $50 of all salaries, and affects every person employed by the corporation.

Net income of the corporation, of which Adolf Zuker is president, totaled $6,345,488, or $2.01 a share, in 1931, against $18,381,178, or $5.90 a share in the previous year. Dividends of 2½ per cent in stock were paid on the common shares after June 27 last year, but these were discontinued with the quarter ending March 31 last.

Mr. Zukor denied reports that Sam Katz was slated to succeed him as president of the company.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

| Number of advances | 94 | 297 |
| Number of declines | 307 | 119 |
| Stocks unchanged | 127 | 118 |
| Total issues traded | 528 | 534 |

Stocks.

Leaders fell off 1 to 4 points in an extremely thin trade. The market offers every appearance of being at the ragged end of a period of excessive liquidation. Standard Oil of New Jersey sold at a new record low of 20. Eager interest centers in the forthcoming dividend meeting of U. S. Steel directors.

Bonds.

Trade waned notably following yesterday's rally, and the turnover was but $8,000,000.

Curb.

Shorts are about all covered and the public is on the sidelines. Prices followed the big board in a thin market.

Wheat.

Heavy liquidation of a large speculative account, coupled with rumors of Government financed wheat sales to Europe dominated the trade. The close was 1½ cents below Thursday's.

Cotton.

Weakness developed on May switching and the lethargy in stocks and grain, despite firm Liverpool cables. Offerings increased sharply on the bulges and at the end the close was at the day's low.

Life Insurance Concern Insolvent, Suit Alleges

St. Louis, April 22 (A.P.).—Suit for a receiver for the Mississippi Valley Life Insurance Co., alleging insolvency, was filed in Circuit Court today by William James Moran, of El Paso, Tex. Moran asserted in the suit that the company has failed to pay him the $1,190 cash surrender value of a policy he holds.

The company has about $30,000,000 insurance in force. It is capitalized at $100,000. An accounting for $15,000 alleged to have been carried by the company in a Eureka Springs, Ark., bank until April 15, an audit and a marshaling of assets also was asked by Moran.

Representative Hart Denounces Farm Board

Baltimore, April 22 (A.P.).—Representative N. J. Hart, of Michigan, in an address here today characterized the Federal Farm Board as another "noble experiment" which is costing the Government $30,000,000 yearly, while its employes live in luxury in Washington.

STOCKS AT NEW LOW IN GENERAL SETBACK

Rails Yield Ground With Other Groups; Losses Range $1 to $3.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Demand for stocks thinned out today and the market more than lost what it had gained in Thursday's rally.

The Standard Statistics-Associated Press composite of 90 leaders closed in new low grounds at 47.3, off 2.7 points net and two-tenths of a point under the previous minimum established on April 13.

Industrials and utilities were particularly soft, although rails also suffered some sharp setbacks. Volume, however, receded to 884,920 shares.

Ignoring favorable implications in the weekly Federal Reserve Bank statement, the market appeared to need more tangible and substantial fare than could be gleaned from credit improvement. With such practical nourishment lacking it fell back abruptly, thus duplicating the retreat made after last week's brief upturn.

Chartists took the view that technical conditions had been weakened by short covering yesterday.

Many 1 to 3 Point Losses.

Losses of 1 to 3 points were numerous, embracing such leaders as U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, Case, Woolworth, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Public Service of New Jersey, National Biscuit, Consolidated Gas, North American and American Can.

In the rails, Santa Fe was down 3¼ net, Union Pacific and Norfolk & Western 4½, and Delaware & Hudson 7.

American Telephone made a new low at 97½, off 4½. But cut its loss to 3¼.

Standard Oil of New Jersey touched 20, a record low for the present shares.

Royal Dutch steadied on official assurances from London that the company's position was "strong and liquid," notwithstanding unfavorable rumors.

Rails were probably unsettled by estimates of much smaller revenues for the Railroad Credit Corporation than had been estimated. The year's probable total was put at $60,000,000, or about half of the most liberal forecast heard when the corporation was formed last fall. At that time it was hoped that the traffic decline would be halted. But events have proved the amount "pooled" out of freight surcharges and loaned to needy roads is suffering accordingly.

March operating figures are not at all favorable by any means, for example, Southern Pacific's deficit of $101,236 contrasted with net operating income of $1,177,613 a year ago, although the loss was less than in January and February, 1932.

Steel Dividend Doubtful.

Proximity of U. S. Steel's dividend meeting was another obstacle at which speculative sentiment shied. Although only the die-hard optimists held out hope for a payment on the common, there was probably some skepticism as to whether the stock, or indeed the market, had fully discounted an omission, the size of the expected deficit is naturally a matter of concern, for it will reflect to what extent reduced costs could counteract a very dull three-month business period.

Money markets were rather surprised by maintenance of the 3 per cent rediscount rate here, but there was no shrinkage in the supply of funds. Some dealers pared time accommodations slightly. Yesterday's bill rate cut failed to bring out enough acceptances to meet demand, and it was assumed that the large holding banks were counting on still higher prices.

Bank Closings Decline; 11 Suspended in Week

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Bank suspensions throughout the country continued at a low rate during the week ended April 21. The American Banker reports that during this period eleven institutions having deposits of somewhat more than $8,000,000 closed their doors, while three banks reopened.

Since January 1, bank suspensions have totaled 583, involving deposits of approximately $251,000,000.

BONDS DIP SLIGHTLY ON LIMITED VOLUME

U. S. Government Issues Are Easier; Industrials and Utilities Weak.

By VICTOR EUBANK.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Interest in the bond market waned today and prices mulled about without indicating any particular trend.

Total transactions dropped from $14,768,000 yesterday to $8,681,000 par value and the average for the 60 corporate securities was off two-tenths of a point.

Most of the United States Government obligations slipped quietly into the "easy" class, although there was no urgent liquidation apparent and declines were confined to fractions. Some profit-taking appeared in this department during the session.

Selling or buying "at the market" continued to be a hazardous order as there was a variance of a number of points between bids and offers in numerous issues. For instance, Baltimore & Ohio 5s, series D, lost 4¼ points on the transfer of two bonds. Rock Island general 4s advanced 4 points on a similar turnover.

Rails Relatively Steady.

The railroads were comparatively steady, but inconsistent. Central Pacific guaranteed 5s dropped a point and the first 4s gained 2, Chicago & Northwestern 4¾s lost 1½ and the 6½s were up ¾. Rock Island general 4s advanced 4 and the refunding 4s sagged 1¼. Illinois Central 5s gave up 5 and the collateral 4s gained 2¾. New York Central 4½s gained 1⅜ and the refunding 5s lost 2. Nickel Plate 6s sank 3 and the 5½s were up 2¼.

The utilities and industrials were mixed. Losers included American & Foreign Power 5s, American & International Telephones, North American Edisons, Postal Telegraphs, International Mercantile Marine, Paramount Publix and Remington Rand.

Firmness was shown by liens of Detroit Edison, Columbus Gas, Gulf Steel, Sinclair Oil, Standard Oil of New York, Tobacco Products of New Jersey and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

French bonds were the attraction in the foreign groups, both the 7s and 7½s attaining new peaks for 1932. The Argentines, Chileans and Columbians improved, as did issues of Oriental Development. Brazilian government loans were heavy, the 7½s losing 9⅞ points. The Japanese and Germans eased.

Curb Trade Slow.

Volume fell off and security prices declined in curb market today. Sales totaled 120,000 shares against 150,000 yesterday, and many leading issues were off from fractions to 2 or more points.

The fairly sharp upturn yesterday, which was attributed largely to short covering, was more than lost when this source of buying suddenly withdrew from the market. While there apparently was no increase in the moderate but persistent pressure of offerings, there was little buying power present to absorb it.

Utility issues again led in activity with Electric Bond & Share common declining 1½ points to 13¾ and the preferred issues reacting ⅜ point for the 6 per cent and 1¼ for the 5 per cent stock.

Commonwealth & Edison declined 4¼ points in fairly active trading while declines of 1 or more points occurred in several preferred issues including Georgia Power, Northern States Power, Alabama Power and Empire Gas.

The oils gave ground more grudgingly, still retaining their better undertone as a result of recent price advances.

Rail Credit Revenue Put at $60,000,000

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—The Railroad Credit Corporation will have an estimated gross revenue of $60,000,000 this year against an original estimate of $100,000,000 to $125,000,000, E. G. Buckland, president of the corporation, said today.

It was stated by Mr. Buckland that in spite of the lower estimate of revenue "no unfavorable developments are expected in the near future as far as the corporation is concerned; that is, in the province of meeting interest charges."

BRITISH AND IRISH BONDS AT NEW TOP

Buying Reported From Government Source to Aid Pound.

New York, April 22 (A.P.).—Great Britain & Ireland 5½, per cent bonds of 1937, the most important British bond issue listed in the New York market, established a new high price for the year this week in moderately active buying.

Strength of British government bonds has been a feature of the market during the past two weeks. The British 5½ per cents sold as low as $840 per $1,000 unit of September 21, 1931, when England was forced off the gold standard. They moved up to their $1,000 par last week and in early trading today went to a new high price above last week's top figure of $1,007.50.

Recent buying of the 5½ per cents has given rise to reports that the British government is buying its own bonds here as a part of its effort to keep the pound sterling on a steady price basis around $3.75 to $3.80.

While American bankers who ordinarily handle the British government's operations in this market declined today to make any comment, it was widely believed in Wall street banking circles that the British government was an active buyer. By selling the pound sterling in New York, it was explained, the British authorities would be able to retard the sharply rising tendency which recently appeared in the pound sterling.

C. & O. INAUGURATES AIR-COOLED TRAINS

Sleeping Cars on Exhibit Here; Notables Attend Their Preview.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

The George Washington, announced by Chesapeake & Ohio Railway officials as the world's first air-cooled sleeping car train, was given a preview yesterday on Track 10, Union Station, and formally dedicated for service. Vice President Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, were among notables who inspected the train which was visited by more than 5,000 persons. It was open for inspection from 11 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock in the evening.

The train will operate between St. Louis, Indianapolis, Chicago, Cincinnati, Lexington, Louisville in the West, and Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Richmond, Norfolk, New York in the East. In keeping with such a service inaugurated during the Bicentennial celebration year of its namesake's birth, the cars of the train have been given names associated with George Washington's history.

The air-cooling and conditioning system of the train "created to celebrate the two hundredth birthday anniversary of the father of transportation in America," is perfected by the Pullman Co., and officials of the railroad state it differs in many important respects from first systems which were largely experimental.

Washington Rapid Transit Co. filed its statement of operations for March and the first quarter of 1932 yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. The item, net income for the month, reveals a deficit of $6,453.19, an increase of $2,982.94 above the deficit for the month a year ago. There is a deficit of $23,509.57 in this item for the first three months of the current year, an increase of $13,494.97 over the similar comparative period last year.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

HAVING a "face that is a fortune" is not confined to artists' models and movie stars. Thomas Wedders, who, if he had ever entered a beauty contest, would surely have lost by a nose, took advantage of his enormous proboscis and with it managed to earn a living. Wedders traveled about England during the eighteenth century, giving the populace an opportunity to view the largest nose ever sported by a human.

Many of the faces that have literally been turned into fortunes have been as far from beautiful as nature will permit. Mary Bevan, of London, who prides herself on being the world's ugliest woman, gets paid for posing as such. All who have seen her would say that it was a face that only a mother could love, but Mary Bevan proved differently. One day, from the circus crowd gathered around this unusual woman, there emerged a handsome young man with something in his eye other than curiosity, and persuaded her to become his wife.

Since Mary's good fortune, there have been numerous aspirants to the "ugliest woman" and "ugliest man" thrones, but none has managed to succeed quite so well as she. But who knows, perhaps today Old Mother Nature is sculpturing a face that will bring the house down wherever it appears!

Maybe you have a face that is worth a fortune! Is your face blue, like Indigo's, the blue-faced man of the circus? Is your face covered with hair, like Lionel's, the lion-faced German? Can you keep from smiling or batting an eye for hours? Have you a beard 17 feet long? All of these and numerous other such facial characteristics have been commercialized.

Any reader wanting further proof of anything depicted here should address the author, care of The Washington Post, and inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply. JOHN HIX.

POLICE HEAR BEDELL AND SLAIN GAMBLER CONFERRED LATELY

Police Redouble Search for Man Wanted in Legation Rum Theft.

5 ARE VAINLY GRILLED IN MURDER OF HENRY

Gunmen's Car Is Traced to Fictitious Address in Camden, N. J.

A tip that Milton (Milsie) White Henry, slain gambler, had a secret rendezvous in Baltimore last week with William E. Bedell, under indictment here for the Salvadorean liquor robbery last spring, pointed a new line of investigation for police last night in the search for the slayers of Henry.

A house in a town "somewhere between here and Philadelphia" was being covered, police admitted, in the hope of apprehending Bedell, who has long eluded efforts of authorities to arrest him. The latter is also wanted for questioning in connection with the killing of Jack Cunningham, in a downtown alley last year.

Hunt Extends to Jersey.

As the search for the slayer of Henry swept as far North as Camden, N. J., yesterday five habitues of local gambling establishments were arrested and grilled in connection with the gambler's death.

Three of the men arrested were viewed by a trio of persons who saw the death car speed away from the scene of the murder. None of the witnesses was able to identify the trio.

Two of the men questioned were picked up while driving a sedan with Pennsylvania tags. They had no drivers' permits nor registration card and they were questioned until late last night by homicide squad detectives.

The movements of Henry to within approximately eight minutes of his assassination were retraced yesterday by police. A group of men with whom he played cards on the morning of his death were questioned. All said that Henry had played bridge at a penny a point and that only a few dollars changed hands in the game. A game of hearts was also in progress, police learned, but Henry did not participate.

Professionals Suspected.

Although it is known that Henry maintained fear of an attack and that he was always armed, he declined the offer of a friend to accompany him part of the way home, police learned.

This man, one of Henry's closest friends, could ascribe no reason for the murder. Main police lines of investigation adhered yesterday to the original theory that Henry's death was the work of professional killers. It is believed that he had been shadowed for several days and that his death came at a time judged most safe for escape of the gunman.

Efforts were still in progress last night to connect with the murder a black sedan found a few hours after Henry's death on Eleventh street northwest between N and O streets. This machine tallied closely with witnesses' description of the death car. A well-known gambler living near the spot where the machine was found could throw no light on its presence there.

The "C" tags on the machine were traced by Camden, N. J., police to a fictitious address. No fingerprints could be obtained despite a minute's examination by department experts

PRELATE WILL LEAD ANNIVERSARY MASS

Seventy-fifth Birthday of St. Vincent de Paul Society Observed Tomorrow.

Archbishop Michael A. Curley, archbishop of the Baltimore diocese, will pontificate at a solemn high mass tomorrow at St. Matthew's Church at 8 a. m. in celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the St. Vincent de Paul Society in Washington.

The Jubilee Communion Mass will be followed by a communion breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel, at which the French Ambassador, Paul Claudel, will be principal speaker. A number of prominent guests will attend, including all members of the St. Vincent de Paul Conference of the city. Other speakers will be the Right Rev. Edward L. Buckey and Dr. John O'Grady, head of the Bureau of Catholic Charities.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul was established at the University of Paris in 1833 by Frederick Ozanan and is the oldest charitable organization in existence. It reached America in 1850 and the first Washington conference was established at St. Matthew's in 1857. There are now 33 conferences in the Capital.

NEW MISTRIAL ENDS AUTO INJURY ACTION

Voluntary Testimony Given by Woman Plaintiff Is Held Prejudicial.

A mistrial in the court of Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, in the District Supreme Court yesterday, marked the second such ending to a suit by Frances Gray, 1758 Q street northwest, against Holger L. Langmack, of 3711 Macomb street northwest.

Miss Gray was injured when she was struck by Langmack's automobile at Dupont Circle, June 25, 1929. Through Attorney Foster Wood, she brought suit for $10,000 and there was a "pro tem" mistrial when the defendant was asked by his attorney as to whether he had a family. Langmack replied that he had a wife and six children, and this was considered sufficiently prejudicial to enter a mistrial.

That was not done, though, when Attorney Wood asked that instead, the jurors be instructed to disregard the statement. They later brought in a $1,500 verdict for Miss Gray. This was set aside on motion by Attorney Wood when he learned that the jurors had failed to heed the admonition to disregard the "family angle."

Yesterday, while she was testifying, Miss Gray volunteered the testimony that the defendant had, at the time of the accident, said he would properly compensate her. This was considered by the Chief Justice to be prejudicial to Langmack's interests, and he decreed a mistrial. The case can not come up again until the next term of court, which will be in the fall.

50 Holdup Victims To View Trio Held

Three Men Arrested After Night Clerk at Hotel Is Robbed.

Approximately 50 victims of recent taxi and other holdups tomorrow will view three Negroes arrested early yesterday after they had allegedly held up and robbed the night clerk at the Capitol Park Hotel of $10.

Those in custody are Charles Hughes, 29, said by police to be employed as a janitor at the Jefferson Apartments, 1204 Sixteenth street northwest; Ruben Hughes, 24, of 1523 Corcoran street northwest, and Joseph Srtange, 30, of 1420 Sixth street northwest.

Charles Hughes was captured by Robert Cox, Negro bell boy at the hotel, who pursued the bandit trio. Arrest of the other two men followed his questioning by headquarters detectives.

Police Called To Get Ghost In Apartment

Police were called in last night to stop the meanderings of an apparition in the basement of an apartment house at 221 F street northwest. They were brought in on the case by Thomas C. Reese, resident manager of the apartment, who says that he has a good janitor and hates to lose him.

And Reese is just before losing him. Freeman Irvin, colored, and his wife, Leola, who have their rooms in the basement, have put the world on notice that the basement is too small for them and the apparition at the same time. Either Mr. Spook leaves, or they do.

The thing seen by Irvin and his wife in the wee hours is described as tall and dark, always attired in black, flowing robes and a white cap. It is rather methodical too, running on a schedule much like a local train. It always appears between the hours of 2 and 3 a. m. on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. (Does not run Sunday, Monday and Wednesday.)

It begins its call by softly opening the basement door and then gently tapping about, rapping on the walls and finally rapping on the door of the janitor's apartment. If Irvin calls out, he will be answered by a burst of wild laughter.

Irvin has tried several times, police were told, to frighten the alleged ghost away.

Traffic Case Handling In Courts Discussed

Handling by the courts of traffic cases formed the subject of a conference yesterday afternoon attended by police officials, several Police Court judges, members of the Traffic Advisory Committee, the corporation counsel, representatives of the American Automobile Association and civic bodies.

No statement was issued at the close of the gathering, although it was said all types of traffic cases and their court dispositions were discussed.

Labor Agency Bill Urged by Operator

Favors Regulation, but Tells D. C. Committee License Fee Is Too High.

Testimony favorable to more stringent regulation of employment agencies here was presented before the Senate District committee yesterday by the corporation counsel's office and an employment agency operator. The committee, however, delayed action on the bill which would tighten the prevailing law.

J. M. Sinsheimer, who maintains an agency, said he favored registration and closer supervision of operators, but opposed the proposed $100 license fee. He said $50, which is double the present license requirement, should be sufficient.

Assistant Corporation Counsels Vernon West and Thomas Cameron indorsed the measure. Senator Kean (Republican), New Jersey, said he wanted to examine the bill more closely before a vote was taken.

A bill extending to two years the period in which property sold for taxes in arrears can be redeemed by the original owner by payment of taxes and costs, was referred to Senator Austin (Republican), New Jersey, for further consideration.

Ruth Tuckerman, Fall Victim, Better

Is Improving in Hospital After Bradley Hills Riding Accident.

Considerable improvement was noted last night in the condition of Miss Ruth Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, who was seriously injured Wednesday at Bradley Hills, Md., when she was thrown from her horse.

The 16-year-old rider suffered a fractured skull and other head injuries. She was at first treated in her home in Edgemoor, Md., but Thursday was removed to Emergency Hospital.

Until yesterday she had been unconscious since the fall, but last night she was semiconscious and her mother, who is in constant attendance at her bedside said that physicians believe she will have completely regained consciousness by this morning.

The play was directed by Rhoda Watkins and the Rev. E. L. Ford. The proceeds of the entertainment were applied to the church expansion program.

Rum Car's Smoke Screen Fails to Prevent Capture

Despite the handicap of a billowing smoke screen two traffic policemen last night successfully consummated a mile and a half chase of a large suspicious sedan and confiscated the auto with its cargo of 330 gallons of white liquor.

Policemen R. M. Finch and W. H. Bell, of the Traffic Bureau, spotted the sedan as it came across the District line via Benning road. They gave chase and the car immediately speeded up, loosing a cloud of acrid smoke.

At Twenty-third street and Benning road the car slacked pace and two men jumped out, disappearing on foot.

Shortly before the wild chase through the Northeast section, Policeman L. H. Peterson, of the Traffic Bureau, confiscated an auto bearing 72 gallons of white whisky at Virginia avenue and E street southeast. Peterson was parked at the intersection when a sedan drew up 50 yards away and two men jumped out and disappeared.

MEMBER PROTESTS OFFICERS' ELECTION BY DISTRICT P.-T.A.

Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, in Letters, Raps Methods Used in Balloting.

HOLDS FUTURE VOTING IS SERIOUSLY MENACED

Declares No Check Was Kept on Those Participating; Easy Control Seen.

A protest of Tuesday's election of officers of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers was made yesterday by Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker.

Letters which described the voting as an "utterly questionable election" and as "a dangerous precedent" were sent to the president, Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, who headed the winning slate, and to Mrs. L. Case Brown, parliamentarian for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Parker, who is a past president and legislative chairman of the Grant P.-T. A. and a member of the John Quincy Adams and the Force P.-T. A., based her protest on several points.

Official Slate Held Boomed.

She declared:

That delegates were instructed to vote the official slate by presidents of some associations, who did not mention the other candidates, although they knew others existed.

That identification cards were issued to each voting delegate, but no check was made to find out who received the cards on election day.

That anyone with an identification card was allowed to vote by dropping their ballots in the box.

That no check was made of the ones who dropped their ballots in the box.

That no check was made of the number of voting delegates from each school who were present and voted.

Sees Danger in Future.

"Under the method of the election, anyone in office in the future could have an unlimited number of identification cards printed; they could be distributed just before the meeting and the same procedure could be followed as at this election, and one group would be able to control the elections indefinitely," Mrs. Parker said.

Mrs. Parker protested the fact that instead of voting and being checked off by schools or name, everyone with an identification card voted by dropping the card and the ballot in the box.

Mrs. Saunders, the newly elected president, received 512 votes. Her opponent, Mrs. E. C. Rittue, was the choice of 45 voters.

Owner of Building Absolved in Injury

Court Holds Risk Company Renting Structure Was Not Responsible.

Holding that the Capital City Life Insurance Co., owner of the premises at 807 E street northwest, was not liable for the injuries sustained by William J. Lawler when he fell through a railing there on September 27, 1929, Justice Oscar R. Luhring yesterday directed a verdict for the insurance company.

Lawler was a member of the Plasterers Union, which rented the building, and maintained dominion over it. Justice Luhring's decision held, in effect, that the owners of the property were not liable when it was rented to others. Attorneys Charles S. Baker and B. L. Tepper represented the insurance company.

Lawler, it was shown at the trial, was badly hurt in the fall. Lawler sued the insurance company for $25,000, and the case had been on trial in the District Supreme Court for two days.

Slayer Sentenced To 30-Month Term

Manslaughter Term Meted Out to Epstein After Self-Defense Plea.

Henry Epstein, 21 years old, confessed slayer of Henry Wilson, 30 years old, in a gun battle March 25, yesterday was given a sentence of two years and six months, following his plea of guilty to manslaughter.

He had been indicted for first degree murder, but through his attorney, Myron Ehrlich, he convinced the court that Wilson was the aggressor and that the deceased had drawn a gun and shot him. The shooting occurred at an apartment house at Second street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

In fear of his own life, Epstein said, he drew out a .25-caliber automatic pistol and shot Wilson once. The man died the next day in Casualty Hospital. Epstein was brought here from Baltimore by a lawyer and was turned in to police by Ehrlich.

Picket Regulation Rules Are Sought

Fur Workers' Union Is Invited by District to Suggest Plan.

Daniel E. Garges, secretary of the Board of District Commissioners, yesterday requested Marx Lewis, attorney for the local fur workers' union, to draft an amendment to the section of the District sign regulations which has been interpreted as preventing picketing and to submit it to the Commissioners.

Upon receipt of this proposed change the Commissioners will set a date for a public hearing on this and other suggested changes in the regulations.

It is expected that the regulations will be amended so as to permit picketing, as members of the original committee which drafted the sign regulations have said that they had no intention of prohibiting picketing when they adopted the provision in question.

Cooling Systems Oiled Up As Hot Weather Arrives

Washingtonians yesterday went about their daily tasks in one of the hottest days of the year. Although the heat on downtown streets approached summer intensity, officials at the Weather Bureau declared it was not a record for 1932.

President Hoover set the style for comfort. As the temperature continued to mount, the electric cooling system in his private office was ordered into operation. Placed into use for the first time this year, the refrigerating apparatus was regulated until the temperature in the President's office and adjoining suites was a few degrees below that in the sunshine outside.

A downtown theater also inaugurated its cooling system. Patrons at the Fox Theater found relief from the hot sun in the air-cooled confines of the show house.

The highest temperature recorded at the Weather Bureau was 77 degrees at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This showed a rise of 31 degrees from 6 o'clock in the morning. The kiosk at Pennsylvania avenue and E street northwest registered 90 degrees at 4:30. A temperature of 80 degrees was recorded at the bureau earlier in the month, officials stated.

NATIONAL THEATER TO CLOSE APRIL 30 DUE TO LABOR ROW

Only 2 Plays Will Be Given Out of 10 Scheduled; Cash to Be Refunded.

MOVE FOR AGREEMENT WITH MUSICIANS FAILS

Union Refuses to Sanction Waiving of Contract for Second Year.

Two weeks' notice of closing has been filed by the National Theater to become effective after the second Saturday of the theater's eighth annual season.

The ten-week repertoire of plays scheduled for performance will be discontinued and the National will remain untenanted for an indefinite period according to Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the theater. The closing date, April 30, will leave eight of the ten scheduled plays unpresented, and arrangements are being made to return the subscription funds to holders of season tickets for the weekly presentations of the National Theater Players.

To Cost 60 Jobs.

Mr. Cochran stated that the closing will put about 60 persons out of work, but that the move became necessary since a satisfactory arrangement with the musicians employed could not be reached. A contract with the Musicians Protective Union, he said, called for six musicians and a leader in the orchestra pit, but financial returns warrant only four. The contract, he asserted, was waived last year due to depleted box-office receipts, and a renewal of this waiver, he claimed, was necessary to continue operation of the theater.

Union Head's Explanation.

The president of the Musicians Union, A. Courtney Hayden, in reference to the contract which is responsible for the closing of the theater, said that the document was valid and was waived last year when Mr. Cochran stated that he would make no request for any other waiver during the duration of the contract.

Many Trees Planted By Alta Vista Children

Tree planting exercises, honoring the name of George Washington, were held yesterday at the Baptist Home for Children at Alta Vista, Md. The trees were presented to the home by the Drake Class of Calvary Baptist Church.

Mrs. C. H. Dowell, president of the board of women managers, received the trees on behalf of the home. The plantings consisted of 50 young ornamental and pine trees and a group of 15 sweet-gum shade trees obtained through the Tree and Parking Department of the District. Two cedar trees from the old George Washington farm near Fredericksburg, Va., were also planted.

Folger Library Called Gem of Architecture

Noble Shelter Provided for Shakespeare Treasures of Business Man Who Honored Poet; Widow Carried Dream to Fulfillment.

By JAMES WALDO FAWCETT.

The Folger Shakespeare Library, to be dedicated and opened for inspection today, is conceded by critics of architecture to be one of the noblest small buildings in the world. Of delicate and harmonious lines and of graceful proportions, the structure may be likened to a fine gem, skillfully cut and polished by a lapidary genius. Diminutive, as compared with its huge contemporaries, it has a charm which many of them conspicuously lack. It is a building to take into the heart and eternally cherish.

The story of the edifice derives from the dream of one man, Henry Clay Folger, and from the enthusiastic cooperation of his wife and a group of his personal friends.

Mr. Folger was a business executive, a financier, one of the uncrowned sovereigns of the petroleum industry, an officer of the Standard Oil Co. of New York. Modest and unpretending, he pursued the ordinary routine of a master of industrial development, going back and forth from his home to his office an unnoticed figure among hundreds in the streets of the metropolis. But his devotion to his large industrial interests represented only the more obvious phase of his mind. Hidden under the routine of his existence there was a generous and romantic idealism centering, somewhat curiously perhaps, about the name, the life and the work of William Shakespeare.

Labor of Five Decades.

Few persons knew Mr. Folger intimately, but those who did enjoy his personal friendship realized in the course of years that his character as a business man was but an outer garment worn through the day and taken off, like an overcoat, at the day's close. The uncelebrated, reticent and reserved inner man spent his leisure in the slow and painstaking collection of a priceless treasury of books, pictures and other souvenirs of the great poet for whom he had conceived such a compelling affection. Through more than five decades, Mr. Folger patiently accumulated, item by item, the most valuable, interesting and useful mementos of Shakespeare to be found first in America and later in England and the continent of Europe. Word spread among bibliophiles and dealers in ancient books that he was specializing in this field, and many sought to make his acquaintance for idealistic or commercial ends. But Mr. Folger was difficult of access, and remained to the close of his life a name and a legend among book people, known to but few and intimately known to practically none.

Mr. Folger all the while was planning the ultimate disposition of his vast collection. He had come to anticipate bequeathing his treasures to the people of the United States. As to just how the gift should be made, he was for a time in some doubt. At last he sought the advice of trusted friends with whom he had maintained contacts originally made while yet a boy in school. Among these were Dr. John Franklin Jameson, chief of the division of manuscripts at the Library of Congress, and the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, with both of whom he had attended Amherst College. In consultation with these wise helpers, Mr. and Mrs. Folger together perfected their long cherished plan. It was decided that the collection should be housed in a special building constructed for the purpose, that this building should be erected in the Nation's Capital, and that it should remain an independent institution, free from Government control, in the trusteeship of Mr. Folger's alma mater.

How Location Was Found.

A story is told that, having decided upon Washington as the location for the library, Mr. and Mrs. Folger came to the Capital and walked about together in the rain, seeking a suitable site for the structure. Mrs. Folger has said, "At different times we considered different locations. At last we chose the block in East Capitol street between Second and Third streets. Then there was the problem of purchasing the property. There were fourteen houses in the block, the celebrated old Grant's Row. They had to be bought one by one, and the task occupied nine years. In this matter Mr. Folger's agent was the late John Cstesby Weedon, and we owe much to his devoted cooperation. When finally assembled we had a plot of ground 331 feet long on the East Capitol street side and 154 feet deep on Second and Third streets. We began clearing the site on Armistice Day, 1929. Mr. Folger wished that, in recognition of Mr. Weedon's services, the honor of removing the first bricks from the houses to be razed should be his. Mr. Weedon was persuaded to accept the invitation, and so it was he who began the labor of demolition."

Meanwhile there had been many conferences with Dr. Jameson and other experts on library methods, as to the practical necessities of the proposed building. Dr. Jameson, in the very beginning, was asked the point-blank question, "Is Washington the place for this library?" and Dr. Jameson had answered: "Forty years ago I should have said no, but now I say yes." Mrs. Folger explains that both Mr. Folger and Dr. Jameson had been quietly watching the development of the city as a cultural as well as a political Capital. Their affection for Washington had increased as the city itself grew in beauty and in cultural character.

Various Sites Considered.

New York had been considered as a possible location for the library building, but Mr. Folger had felt that New York was destined to be a great commercial city and not, in the true meaning of the phrase, a great center of education, an opinion in which his friends concurred. The University of Chicago had offered to provide a special building in that city for the collection, and Mr. Folger had been favorably impressed by the university's proposal, but Chicago, too, was rejected in preference for Washington. It became Mr. Folger's earnest conviction that the library should be a contribution to the noble plan for the new Washington. This definitely decided, the site assembled, and the clearing of the property begun, Mr. and Mrs. Folger with the generous cooperation of Dr. Jameson, Mr. Morrow and other friends, settled themselves to work out, detail by detail, the actual physical design of the library structure.

Mr. Folger approached Alexander B. Trowbridge, distinguished architect, engineer and connoisseur of art, literature and music, and at his suggestion, engaged Paul P. Cret, of Philadelphia, designer of the beautiful Pan-American Union Building and other celebrated structures. Mr. Trowbridge, after several conferences with Mr. and Mrs. Folger and with Mr. Cret, proceeded to Europe to study and think about the library project. In his absence, Mr. Cret began the first sketches for both exterior and interior elevations.

The two architects labored together to accomplish a veritable marvel of cooperative genius. Their problem was to find and develop a design sympathetic to the contemporaneous architecture of Washington and also to the esthetic traditions of Elizabethan England. In effect, they had to bridge the twentieth century with the sixteenth, Mr. Folger's time with Shakespeare's. They had to take into consideration the conditions of their site, its advantages and its limitations. Moreover, they had to be faithful to the spirit of the Elizabethan era and the intensely practical environment in which the modern scholar perforce must move.

Called "Frozen Melody."

They found their solution in a device at once exceedingly clever and reticently modest. They made the exterior of their design conform to no special period in the history of architecture. It is as nobly plain and unadorned by artificial invention as nature itself. But today entering the building, the visitor finds himself led through corridors of no particular style or type, lured backward a step at a time until unconsciously he enters the authentic atmosphere of the Tudor epoch from which the architects drew the inspiration for their design of the four integral parts of the library interior.

The building rises above a low, verdant terrace. It is built of fine white Georgia marble which time will mellow. The walls are plain to the point of actual homeliness, but by means of lofty windows with graceful grills and screens of intricate wrought iron, tall doors and, across the base of the principal facade, a series of nine bas-reliefs reproducing scenes from Shakespeare's greater plays, the plainness is corrected with a genius almost mathematical in precision and balance. The building has no cornice, but its absence is unnoticed. Four deep-cut inscriptions in homage to the poet take the place of a frieze. The velvet lawn, with its borders of dwarf yew, seems to have been a deliberate factor in the architects' composition. The ensemble approximates perfection. The visitor thinks of nothing to add and of nothing to subtract. The building stands, like a gracious melody, spiritually satisfying in all its aspects. Mrs. Folger, gifted with a kindly talent of appreciation, says the architects have accomplished an esthetic miracle.

Four Major Purposes.

Inside the building there is a natural apportionment of space to serve four major purposes. On the south side the library proper, a magnificent large room for the use of students of Shakespeare's art and time, occupies what may be called the sunnier portion of the plan. A balcony encircles the apartment, providing shelves for an upper tier of books to match a lower tier below. Dark oak trusses, hand hewn and carved, support the vaulted roof.

A carved timber screen of Appalachian oak fills the east end of the room, supporting a reproduction of the Shakespeare memorial in Trinity Church at Stratford-on-Avon. Here the portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Folger hang. At the west end a great Gothic window of stained and plain glass exhibits seven colored figures representing Shakespeare's "Seven Ages of Man." This noble window, like the others in the room, has special dignity in no way injured by its quietness.

In the center of the north wall of the reading room is a huge fireplace, with wrought-iron equipment. The roses of the Tudor House and Shakespeare's arms have been used extensively; they have been molded in plaster, carved in wood and worked in metal. This gracious apartment, a student's paradise, will be the place in which Mr. Folger's ideal for the scholarly purpose of his foundation will be met. Here qualified students freely may consult the books collected by the donor. His capacity to sympathize with the modern scholar's requirements is exemplified by the fact that a property equipped photostatic laboratory is hidden behind the paneling.

Relic Exhibition Room.

Paralleling the reading room, filling the north center of the building, is an exhibition hall for the display of the relics which Mr. Folger accumulated in his quest for Shakespeare material. Critics have said that this hall is beyond all question one of the finest rooms in the United States. Its proportions are symmetrical in the highest degree. A composition of rich carved oak, delicately molded plaster, etched stone and artistically set tile, this portion of the total plan has an atmosphere of aristocratic grandeur and knightly courtliness

ARCHITECTURE WINS PRAISE OF EXPERT

Trowbridge, However, Does Not Regard Building as Too Modernistic.

"The architecture of the Folger Shakespeare Library," says Alexander B. Trowbridge, consulting and supervising architect of the lovely new building, "is a departure from strict architectural traditions, but it can hardly be said that it is an extreme illustration of modernism. When Mr. Folger first began to consider definitely the exterior appearance of his library he took it for granted that it would have to be built in the style of the Elizabethan period, which to many minds means a brick building with stone trim. Knowing the Washington tradition already well established for the use of buildings of classic appearance, I explained to Mr. Folger the desirability of securing a building which would harmonize with the neighborhood in which it was going to be placed. He readily acquiesced in the idea of choosing an architecture that would fit properly into the Washington picture, and was greatly pleased when he was told that it might be possible to treat the interior of the building in the early Renaissance and Tudor periods of English architecture.

"In the meantime, while discussing these points with Mr. Folger, I told him of my own impatience with a good deal of the work which was being done in America. I felt that we were standing still, in a sense, if we accepted the idea that we could not design a classic building without imitating one of the well-known examples of ancient architecture, with its columns, its entablature and all of the decorative details which may have had a meaning at the time they were originally created, but which have no relation whatever to the life of today. Mr. Folger very properly asked, 'If you are going to omit those features which have always been considered the hallmarks of classic architecture, how are you going to preserve the classic spirit to which you have frequently referred?' And I replied, 'By the use of sculpture.' I reminded him of the bas relief friezes in the highest expression of Greek architecture and how the world had generally accepted them not only as superb architectural features, but also as examples of sculpture of the finest quality. And I added, 'Where could we find a more wonderful source for sculptural subjects than from the dramas of Shakespeare?' And as it was agreed to ask our architect, who had not yet been selected, to avoid the usual approach to classic architecture and to endeavor to produce something having individuality. Above all he was to be told to consider sculpture in relief as an important feature of the exterior.

"Mr. Cret was selected without competition for this work because of several notable qualifications he possessed. In his student days at the Ecole des Beaux Arts he exhibited work which showed a penchant for the use of sculptured panels in low relief. He showed a predilection for a classic architecture having a flavor which differentiated it from the kind of architecture selected by his colleagues in the school. When he came to this country one of the first designs he executed was that of the lovely Pan-American Union, which exhibits a freedom from imitation, even though it is distinctly a Renaissance design. But it was the masterful way in which he developed the interior of the Detroit Institute of Arts which prompted me to bring him to Mr. Folger's attention. The interior of the Detroit building is an example of ingenuity and fine taste, especially in the placing of various specimens of medieval and Rennaissance architecture brought from Europe to form a portion of an institute exhibit.

"The relations established between owners and architects were remarkable for harmony and sympathetic understanding. Never has an architectural project moved ahead more smoothly or with a happier group of workers. The James Baird Co., Inc., was appointed general con-

Civic Chiefs Join Scholars In Shakespeare Tributes

Dedication of Folger Library Today Draws Praise for Rich Qualities of Immortal English Dramatist From Numerous Washington Leaders.

Civic leaders throughout the city have joined with literary scholars in tributes to Shakespeare and to the Folger Library being dedicated here today.

Bankers, lawyers, physicians, teachers and others have manifested their interest in the event. The Post presents the following expressions:

Dr. August J. App, head of the English department, the Catholic University of America:

"Where Shakespeare is most studied and appreciated, there, if past experience is a guide, culture and scholarship are purest and richest. No nation or individual goes to Shakespeare without returning more refined and ennobled. To me the opening of the Folger Shakespeare Library here in Washington is a most striking symbol of the silent but steady shifting of learning and scholarship from the Old World to the New."

Albert W. Atwood, economist and publicist: "The opening of the Folger Library can hardly fail to promote interest in and study of the great dramatist's works. This is especially desirable in a period of discouragement and depression, mental as well as economic. What we need today is not so much a new economic system or economic planning or other miracle performances, but plain, ordinary sense of humor, common sense, sense of proportion and wisdom in general. Shakespeare's plays are packed full of these qualities, presented in the most inspiring and helpful form, in language that raises the perception and stirs the soul. What we need, economically and in every other way, is wisdom and courage; and Shakespeare, like the Bible, provides one of the greatest sources of these human essentials."

Michael L. Eidsness, jr., superintendent, Division of Stamps, Postoffice Department: "It need not be emphasized that the postage stamp, however humble and lowly it may appear when considered merely from the standpoint of the performance of its mission, represents the one medium above all others by which every individual, regardless of age or condition, comes in direct and intimate contact with his Government. • • •

"This gift to the Nation of the Folger Shakespeare Library gives students of America access to a wider field of learning. Its stimulus to education will be beyond measurement, and the postage stamp will play an ever important part in the dissemination of the knowledge gained within its walls."

Robert V. Fleming, president, Riggs National Bank: "In my judgment, the opening of the Folger Shakespeare Library marks an important milestone in the development of the City of Washington.

"The National Capital is fast becoming not only one of the most beautiful cities in the world, but with its magnificent buildings and the location here of such handsome gifts as the Folger Library, it is becoming a world center of art, education and culture."

Help to Students.

The Rev. Mr. A. H. Lucas, headmaster, St. Alban's, the National Cathedral School for Boys: "The local field in secondary education will be vitally interested in the opening of the Folger Shakespeare Library. If the boy of today approximates a taste for Shakespeare, he will find it in the prescribed course of English for the four upper years. As a guileless freshman he is led, perhaps reluctantly, even protestingly, through 'Julius Caesar' and 'As You Like It.' A year or two later the characters of Portia, Viola and Juliet take on real flesh and blood for him, and by the time he becomes a sixth former he is able to appreciate some of the majestic gloom of 'Macbeth' or the deep philosophy of 'Hamlet.'

"It is not likely that the average boy of today will learn to study Shakespeare unless Shakespeare is transmitted by personal contact between pupil and master. It may be a task, or a labor of love, but it belongs specifically to the field of English in the secondary school, and the Folger Library will aid us immensely."

Dr. Theodore Maynard, head of the English department, Georgetown University: "Shakespeare is, above all others, the poet of humanity. He may have been surpassed in certain respects, by Homer in a since unattainable combination of sweep and poise; by Dante in burning intensity; even by Virgil and Milton in sustained perfection of art. But Shakespeare combines more of the varied elements of life than any poet before or since his time. And his range is so great precisely because he had an unparalleled sensitiveness united to an unparalleled capacity to express everything that he had thought, observed or felt. Such a sensitiveness would have driven any other man insane. He delighted in it, enjoying an easy power of expressing it. There is bombast in him, mainly by way of concession to his audience, but there is never any sense of strain. For he conveys his gusto of experience to us by his gusto of creation."

Location Held Suitable.

Dr. William F. Notz, dean, School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University: "The location of the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington marks a notable forward step in making our Capital City an outstanding national cultural center.

"This new institution, it is hoped, will presently assume leadership in fostering the dynamic forces, creative ideas and inspiring ideals which humanity owes to the genius of Shakespeare, and which unceasingly and for centuries, have quickened and vitalized the spiritual, social and political life of nations the world over.

"In these days, when time seems out of joint, it is from Shakespeare, who above most others was close to the universal heart of humanity, that individuals as well as nations may learn to interpret the facts of life and of human nature, to advance the cause of human fellowship and international understanding, and to draw hope and inspiration for the future welfare of society.

"May this magnificent monument symbolize a revival on the part of the American people of true and genuine culture and a rededication to the ennobling ideals expressed and immor-

Not if men's tongues and angels' all in one
Spake, might the word be said that might speak Thee.
Streams, winds, woods, flowers, fields, mountains, yea, the sea,
What power is in them all to praise the sun?
His praise is this,—he can be praised of none.
Man, woman, child, praise God for him; but he Exults not to be worshipped, but to be.
He is; and, being, beholds his work well done.
All joy, all glory, all sorrow, all strength, all mirth,
Are his: without him, day were night on earth.
Time knows not his from time's own period.
All lutes, all harps, all viols, all flutes, all lyres,
Fall dumb before him ere one string suspires.
All stars are angels; but the sun is God.

LIBRARY DECLARED TRUE WORK OF ART

Critic Finds Folger Temple to Shakespeare Appropriate in All Ways.

By ADA RAINEY
Art Critic, The Washington Post.

The newest, and in many ways fairest, gem in the crown of beauty that dowers Capitol Hill is the Folger Library, which will be dedicated today. Its glistening white marble fashioned into a form of the utmost simplicity, set in a square of foliage and flowers, makes an appeal to the mind and heart. It is a shrine created by the love of a man of singular sincerity and simplicity of mind to honor the greatest creative genius in English literature, William Shakespeare.

There is an appeal to the humanity of us, for every one loves a play, loves to see how runs the life-stream in our fellows. In these plays there is the lift of idealism set in language that the humblest can understand, and there is the sheer beauty of poetry and the drama of life in universal form. And who is so unresponsive as not to thrill to the beauty of the building, the sculptured figures set in an expanse of marble seat bordered by azalias that fling their brilliant color in blazing contrast with the dark foliage of shrubs?

The building has been designed by Paul P. Cret and Alexander B. Trowbridge. The architects have dared to escaped from the formualized buildings that are spreading themselves over the city, and yet have created something that is in harmony with the spirit of the National Capital. No formal style has been followed, but the straight lines of suggested columns sunk into the facade and accentuated with metal grill-work makes an impressive entrance to the library.

Statue Strikes Keynote.

The impish figure of Puck by Brenda Putnam, daughter of the Librarian of Congress, with the inscription, "What Fools These Mortals Be," strikes the note of fun and joy which runs through the plays of Shakespeare. This and the figures of the front of the building by John Gregory are the only sculpture of the building, with the exception of certain stylized masks and animal figures decorating the entrances. But they are sufficient, and they speak of the humanity of the plays. Gregory's figures depict scenes from nine of the chief plays, depict them brilliantly.

Within, the note changes from simplicity and directness to the warm mellow beauty of the Elizabethan age, with its golden oaken beams and doorways, and its rich glowing windows of glass peopled with figures from the plays of the dramatist. There are two great high rooms, running parallel to each other, which are of marvelous charm. The furnishings of the reading room are in keeping with the room itself. Long tables with shaded lamps provide ample facilities for the readers who can luxuriate in chairs of the period with tall backs covered with rich tapestried velour. Here are two portraits by Salisbury of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Folger, who gave the library and who so lovingly collected the books, the paintings and the other Shakespeareana gathered here. Long shelves of books, two stories high, with a gallery running around half way up, make the background for the pervading scholarly atmosphere.

The collection has been founded upon honest scholarship and an unerring taste in selection. In the exhibition room on the north side are the paintings of Shakespeare, the scenes from his plays and the great actors that have portrayed his characters during the years from the time when they were first produced to the present.

Here is the famous Lumley portrait of Shakespeare, a study by Sully of Lear, a portrait of Garrick by Reynolds, of Edmund Kean by John Opie, and numerous scenes from the plays done by Turner, Angelica Kaufmann, Benjamin West and many others.

In cases there are delightful Chelsea figurines of Shakespeare and his creations and many a fascinating stage property used by famous actors. Here also are shown the choice edi-

High Dignitaries Laud New Folger Library

Ambassadors, Ministers, Educators and Writers Pay Tribute to Shakespeare and Memorial Structure to Be Dedicated Today.

The Ambassador of Great Britain: I am very glad to learn that The Washington Post is devoting a special section to Shakespeare in connection with the dedication of the Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library. He had a breadth of human understanding from which in these difficult days we can all draw inspiration.

The Ambassador of France: In the name of the people of France, I am glad to pay a tribute of admiration and gratitude to Shakespeare, the great poet, philosopher and playwright.

The whole world is indebted to him for having brought more beauty into it; his insight in the tragedies and comedies of human nature is an everlasting source of wonder and inspiration to the layman, the scholar, the poet.

The beautiful building erected in Washington, thanks to Mr. Folger's generosity and Mr. Paul Cret's talent, is a monument worthy of the poet and of a great English-speaking nation.

The Ambassador of Germany: There is no other foreign poet of any period who is as much admired in Germany as Shakespeare. Although the knowledge of his works in Germany dates back to Shakespeare's lifetime, it was Lessing, with his criticism in the Seventeenth Literaturbrief, and after him, Schlegel, with his masterly translation of Shakespeare's dramas, who introduced Shakespeare to the German mind. With the rest of the world and especially with his own homeland, we extol his genius, particularly on occasions such as the dedication of the Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library. "The elements so mix'd in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world: 'This was a man!'" I congratulate the Capital of the United States of America in having been able to add the Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library, which contains so rare a collection of Shakespeareana, to the number of its beautiful buildings.

Hiram Bingham, United States Senator from Connecticut: Enchanting master of the drama in infinite variety, that age has been unable to wither, Shakespeare is enthroned anew in the mind and heart of this Nation as king of tragedy and comedy through the medium of the Folger Library, erected as a sanctuary for students of his works and times.

I am glad that in the snow-white Georgian marble palace that today houses the most complete and valuable collection of Shakespeariana in the world is Dr. Samuel Johnson's telling tribute to the great dramatist. In one convincing sentence that leaves nothing to be added is thus epitomized the outstanding reason why, after a lapse of more than three centuries, custom has not staled the influence of this Elizabethan playwright upon the world's intellectual concepts: "This therefore is the praise of Shakespeare, that his drama is the mirror of life."

The Rev. Dr. S. Parker Cadman, Minister, Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.—I regard this beautiful Shakespeare Memorial Library as the consummation of a great purpose entertained by the late Henry C. Folger and his wife (whom I rejoice to say is still with us) during the whole of their married life, and now brought to its completion on a great day for Washington and for the Nation.

As the pastor of Mr. and Mrs. Folger for the past 30 years, I can testify to the energy, concentration and devotion which they so boundlessly exhibited in behalf of this patriotic enterprise. It was the dream of their lives, and to it they gave all they were and much of what they had. You know the result, and the Nation will presently know it.

I have no words at my command to express the admiration I feel for the devotion thus exhibited. It takes a lasting and concrete form which will greatly enrich the culture of the American people.

Dr. Lucius C. Clark, Chancellor, the American University—The Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library is more than a dream in marble. It is more than an outward frame for sheltering most beautiful volumes. It is a habitation.

Shakespeare's men and women, who will entertain in this palace of splendor, will adapt themselves to practically every condition in life.

Even college youth has been directed to this master, for, with freshmen, it is "A Comedy of Errors;" sophomores, "As You Like It;" juniors, "Much Ado About Nothing;" and seniors, "All's Well That Ends Well."

A half-hour each day with Shakespeare and the Bible would be a tonic to the soul of our modern world.

Dr. Helen Gray Cone, poet, critic and teacher: All lovers of "the things that are more excellent" must rejoice in the enlargement of facilities for Shakespearian research, and in the emphasis thus publicly placed upon the ideals of scholarship. Our vital connection with the past needs to be insisted upon, in the face of a modern tendency to break away from it; and surely the richest treasure of the English-speaking peoples is the supreme work of Shakespeare. "Rare utterance of a spirit nobly wise."

Dr. William John Cooper, Federal Commissioner of Education: It is very fitting that there is dedicated today in the Nation's Capital a library devoted to Shakespeare. For this we have to thank the late H. C. Folger, of the Standard Oil Co., who left the money in his will. The library itself is small comparatively, but its influence will be very great. In it are rare editions of the poet, and these will draw the attention of Shakespeare scholars not only in this country but also from the Old World. This building and its contents will be the pioneers, I am sure, of other monuments in this city equally illustrious.

Dr. Wilbur L. Cross, Dean, Graduate School, Yale University; Governor of Connecticut:

In literary history, time has brought in no more magnificent revenge than the assemblage for scholarly research of the great collection beautifully housed in the Folger Library of works by a man who in his own day was reputed to have but "little learning." Today all American students are rightly congratulating themselves upon the addition of this superb treasury to their already rich resources.

On this occasion, when we are rejoicing in the fact that Shakespeare is thus brought nearer home to our scholars, there is one cause for sadness—in the thought that on our stage he seems for the moment to be drifting further away from the people at large, for whom he wrote his festive comedies and that line of tragedies that stretches out to the crack of mortal doom. It is a matter for regret that so able an organization among the younger artists as the Theater Guild of New York was recently moved to abandon its plan for bringing "Much Ado" to life again on the boards. Of the author of this gay comedy, Thomas Fuller (who was a boy of 7 at Shakespeare's death) said that he could "turn with all tides, tack about and take advantage of all winds, by the quickness of his wit and invention." We need not fear that his robust plays will ever for long lose their place on the stage. But let us hope that the celebration in honor of the legacy transmitted to the Nation by Mr. Folger will in the near future spur our theaters as well as our seats of learning to share more freely with us their glorious heritage.

Dr. Walker Damrosch, composer and conductor, founder of the New York Symphony Orchestra: The dedication of the new Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library is another beautiful testimony of the eternal youth of Shakespeare.

As a musician, I find in his plays the most extraordinary appreciation of music, just as the lawyer, the doctor, the philosopher, the naturalist, the historian, the soldier, find in him an uncanny insight into their callings, their aspirations and the influence of their respective professions on mankind.

The mystery that one man should know so much has never been lifted, but the facts are there, and mankind will rejoice in them for centuries to come.

Walter Prichard Eaton, poet, essayist and critic: All scholars will rejoice that the Folger collection is made available, and it should be a matter of pride to all of us that the library which houses it is in the National Capital, marking one more step in the development of that city not only toward a place of civic beauty but of intellectual wealth. However, I can never forget that Shakespeare did not write his plays to be studied. He wrote them to be acted in the living theater, for the entertainment of men and women, and it is only when thus acted that they truly come to life. If the Folger Memorial Library can also bring about performances of these plays, done by skilled actors and directors, and available to the public at reasonable rates, it will be doing more for the proper study of Shakespeare than has yet been done by any public, or semipublic, institution in America, where we leave the drama, even the drama of Shakespeare, to the chance exploitation of a few struggling players or to the greed of shopkeepers.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president, National Geographic Society: It is significant of the common tradition and enduring friendship of the United States and England that on the same day, April 23, there will be dedicated in Washington the new Folger Shakespeare Library, while at Stratford-on Avon there will be dedicated the new Shakespeare Memorial Theater.

The date is that of the birth, also of the death, of the greatest genius of the common language and the common literature of the two nations.

Shakespeare died four years before the Pilgrims set foot on Plymouth Rock. Year after year, three centuries later, more and more Americans annually visit the little English town which has become a beautiful memorial to his memory and a shrine of English-speaking peoples. The Folger Memorial Library, both for its architectural beauty, and for its fine collection of books, will be a fitting New World shrine to the dramatist who forged and fixed our language into a pattern that has been second only to the English translation of the Bible in its literary influence.

Moreover, the Folger Memorial Library adds one more to the notable institutions which make the Washington of today not only our political capital, but an ever-growing educational, scientific and literary capital of the United States.

Dr. Henry W. Farnam, emeritus professor of economics, Yale University: Last autumn I had the privilege of visiting the Folger Library building before it was opened to the public. I therefore know how beautiful and well-appointed it is and am glad to express through The Washington Post my deep gratitude to Mr. Folger for his priceless gift, and my regret that he did not live to see the fruition of his vision. The library will exemplify to coming generations the happy result of combining great business ability with a taste for and an appreciation of literature. It will also, I hope, stimulate a renewed interest in the critical study of Shakespeare. Mr. Folger's success in one of the typical great productive enterprises of our day enabled him to embody in marble his enthusiasm for a great poet. We commonly think of Shakespeare as a genius whose imagination "bodies forth the forms of things unknown." Few realize that he was a shrewd

The Three.

Washington, Lincoln, Shakespeare, they are the three whom Americans universally worship, and you will not find a fourth of ours or any other nation to add to this trinity.

DREAM IS ACHIEVED IN FOLGER LIBRARY

Noted Homes Torn Down to Build Treasure House of Shakespeariana.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Word jewels of a master poet now repose in a casket, the excellence of which he may have dreamed but his day never saw. These gems, whose facets often were brightened in a rush-strewn tavern, now are guarded in a house finer than that of good Queen Bess, their fashioner's most exalted patroness. Collected by an admiring son of a land then little known, they will receive an appraisal a hundred million times more generous than their maker ever hoped for. Bought for a sum greater than the worth of the Armada's bullion, their coffer is the shrine of Shakespeareana in the Western Hemisphere—the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington.

This shrine was begun in 1929 with the clearing of the site for the building on the south side of East Capitol street between Second and Third streets. It was made possible by a foundation created by the late Henry Clay Folger, former president of the Standard Oil Co., of New York, and possessor of one of the finest Shakesperean collections in the world. The building houses this treasure.

Clearance of the site for the structure erased from the city one of its old landmarks. This was Grant row, a solid block of large row houses, erected in 1871, by Capt. Albert Grant, during a period when it was believed that the city would expand to the east of the Capitol instead of the west. Because of this error of judgment, it was said, Capt. Grant became bankrupt and for many years the row was referred to as "Grant's folly."

Residence of Notables.

The group, however, had been the residence of numerous prominent persons, including former Postmaster General Brady, Gen. Charles Ewing, former Senator Henry T. Blair, of New Hampshire, and former Representative Ackmand, of Georgia. For a number of years, prior to demolition of the row, several of the dwellings had stood vacant, silently expectant, it would seem, of their eventual fate.

From this somber, silent cocoon emerged a chrysalis of beauty. From a clayey excavation, amid piles of old brick, pure white marble walls arose in a classic conformation, harmonizing with the design of the neighboring Congressional Library, its addition, and the United States Supreme Court Building.

Day by day the imposing edifice ascended. It was designed by Paul P. Cret, of Philadelphia, designer of the Pan-American Building at the northwest corner of Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue. Associated with him on the library project was Alexander B. Trowbridge, of this city. James Baird Co., Inc., was the constructor of the building, the original estimated cost of which was $1,500,000.

Tudor Gothic Style.

In keeping with the atmosphere of the days of the Bard of Avon, the interior of the monumental building was done in the Tudor Gothic style of his time. The building was divided into three sections, one containing a large reading room, another a great exhibition gallery and the third an Elizabethan theater, built to represent an old English courtyard with platform stage for mummers of the time of ruff and rapier, of sock and buskin.

This museum, housing a collection of approximately 70,000 rare volumes of Shakespeare's works, has a wing serving as an administration section. The building, which has been extensively landscaped, is approximately 216 feet wide by 112 feet deep. It is the only structure in the half square between East Capitol street and the alley to the south, Second and Third streets. The main facade of the library fronts on East Capitol street with a driveway giving off on Second street opposite the Congressional Library. The driveway skirts a fountain of white marble.

The planting on the grounds surrounding the building has a great deal to do with the composite effect of structure and setting. The landscaping includes trees, shrubs, hedges and other plant forms to produce an attractive ensemble. A feature is the planting in mass form of juniperus pfitzeriana, which will be grown along the main facade as thick foliage. The landscaping was by J. H. Small & Sons, of this city.

Founder's Room.

A group of rooms at the southwest corner of the structure, originally intended for the use of Mr. Folger as a library, office and study, is to be known as the "founder's room." It will be placed at the disposal of the board of trustees of Amherst College, in whose charge the building has been placed with a $10,000,000 endowment to maintain it. It was at Amherst College that Mr. Folger studied and first became interested in Shakespeareana.

The ventilation systems installed in the library by which the air is cleaned and temperatures regulated, also regulate the amount of humidity. Concealed and indirect heating systems installed by the Standard Engineering Co., of this city, furnish warmth for the building. There is a basement and subbasement to the structure providing vaults and storage places for a large number of books.

What of the man who made this great gift to the city, the Nation, possible? He was born in New York, June 18, 1857, the son of Henry C. and Eliza Clark Folger. He received his degree of master of arts from Amherst in 1881 and an LL. B. degree from Columbia University the same year. In 1914, Amherst honored him with the degree of doctor of literature. He married Emily C. Jordan, of Elizabeth, N. J., on October 6, 1885. He died June 11, 1930, at Glen Cove, Long Island.

Work With Oil Firms.

All his business life Mr. Folger had been associated with oil firms. Joining Charles L. Pratt & Co. in 1879, he was at various times officer and director of a number of companies of the Standard Oil group.

In 1909, he ended a long term of service with the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey to become a director of the Standard Oil Co. of New York. Continuing as a director, he was elected its vice president in 1911 and a few months later, its president. On May 24, 1923, he resigned his office to become chairman of its directorate. On March 30, 1928, he severed all his business connections to devote his time to his library, his hobby for 50 years. The executive had left his desk to worship a poet's work.

business man as well as a poet, and that many a pregnant passage in his dramas reveals a profound understanding of the great economic movements and problems of his day.

Dr. John Grier Hibben, president, Princeton University: I wish it were possible for me to attend the dedication of the new Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library. My engagements will not allow me to be away from Princeton at that time.

Shakespeare stands out alone and unrivaled in a unique position among the immortals of literature in all ages and in all races and tongues. It seems to me most fitting that there should be this particular memorial library in the center of our national life.

Miss Fannie Hurst, novelist and short-story writer: The ever-evergreen genius of William Shakespeare is one of the phenomena of mankind.

His genius has fertilized the intellectual life of several centuries.

There is every evidence that it will continue to reach into the ages.

The Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library is a fitting tribute to his grandeur.

Dr. Ralph Van Deman Magoffin, professor of classics, New York University:

The farther we grow away from the time of Shakespeare, the higher rises his monumental genius. To the English-speaking world Shakespeare stands supreme, and now almost alone, as its great interpreter of the dramatic element in life, previous, contemporaneous and future.

Like all other great classics, the works of Shakespeare are deathless. To read, to study, and to ponder his plays has been and will continue to be a provocative pleasure for inherent in them is an inspirational incentive and an inevitable urge.

I wish to express my earnest congratulations to those who have brought about the completion of the Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library. It takes its place at once among the monuments dedicated to the value of the eternal verities.

Right Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of New York:

The opening of the Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library will be an event of the highest importance and significance. I offer my congratulations to all concerned2 upon this tribute to the immortal poet and dramatist whose works next to the Bible are still the greatest literary glory of the English-speaking world.

Charles Moore, chairman, National Commission of Fine Arts: Washington is already the political, social and scientific capital of the United States. Under the leadership of the Library of Congress (transformed by Dr. Putnam into the National Library), Washington is becoming a literary center. No history or biography relating to the Western Continent can be written adequately without recourse to the manuscript collections of the Congressional Library.

Slowly, with uneven steps, Washington is becoming a center of the fine arts. Today it has no groups of painters, sculptors, musicians such as are to be found in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago. But Washington has excellent elementary schools in painting. The lives of leading American artists show that many of them get preliminary training at the Corcoran School.

The City of Washington, in its monuments represents the whole range of American sculpture, historically and artistically. Scarcely an American sculptor of repute is unrepresented in the National Capital.

In architecture, as in sculpture, the monumental works were designed by men living in centers of commercial activity—where their market is. The Capital of the United States is unique among civilized countries in having no national gallery of art, not even a national portrait gallery. Moreover, there is no effective desire to provide for anything above the display of relics and curiosities. The fine arts are regarded as a superfluity, beyond the cognizance of the Government. Only through private sources come to us the highest and most enduring records of civilization—records by which peoples are measured, the works of the fine arts.

The Folger-Shakespeare Library, therefore, is a gain of first importance to the cultural life of Washington. Its collections of editions and of related materials are surpassingly fine and complete. The means of making these treasures accessible to students, to scholars, and to the interested public, are designed to take the greatest of poets out of the cold realm of classicism and make him a living force in thought and in life. Thus Shakespeare is humanized and vitalized in the Capital of the United States.

Coming as an addition to the Freer Gallery of Far Eastern Art and the Coolidge Concerts in the Library of Congress, the Folger Library in its sphere sets up the highest standards. It is standards of excellence that Washington most needs. Quality rather than quantity is the mark of civilization.

The setting is worthy of the jewel. The advisory architect, Alexander B. Trowbridge, selected as the designer of building and grounds, Dr. Paul Cret, whose distinguished architectural and landscape work in the Pan-American Union won for him high and enduring fame with both artists and public. The Folger Library Building is distinctly a work of art. The general design is rooted in the past, but it also has elements of the "modern" spirit, on which time alone must pass judgment. The interior has subdued opulence and thoroughness in detail such as few architects are able to find clients to support. The sculptural adornments by John Gregory and Brenda Putnam have charm and vitality expressed within the limits imposed by the architecture.

From every point of view, therefore, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Folger (the fruition of which, as so often happens in Washington, he did not live to enjoy, is an acquisition of supreme importance to Washington as a center of the humanities.

Dr. Arthur Stanley Pease, president, Amherst College: The opening of the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington on the same day on which the Furness Library is dedicated in Philadelphia and the new Shakespeare Theater is opened at Stratford-on-Avon, should prove a remarkable event in the scholarly world, testifying to the perennial power and charm of our greatest poet, the heritage of whose works constitutes one of the most powerful bonds which unite the great English-speaking democracies throughout all the world.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General, the Pan-American Union: The opening of the Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library is an event of real international significance. This library will open to the scholars of the world unrivaled facilities for the study of the works of the great poet. Shakespeare is not only the great poet of the English-speaking peoples, but because of the splendid translations that have been made into German, Spanish and French he occupies a high place in the literature of those countries. The people of Washington may well congratulate themselves because of this great addition to Washington's facilities as a center of research and cultural influence.

Channing Pollock, dramatist and critic; former dramatic editor of The Washington Post: There never was a time when more than now we needed to be reminded that life is not merely a vulgar struggle, and that no civilization, as yet, has rested securely and enduringly upon material achievement.

There never was a time when we so needed to be linked with our past, anchored in its traditions, and to have it made clear to us that nothing accomplished in our own generation warrants forgetting or discarding the experience and the accumulated treasures of 3,000 years.

Every reminder and monument of that kind is potentially a sea wall opposing our rising tide of moral and intellectual blackness. But only potentially. Even such a reminder and monument as the Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library depends, for its effectiveness, not upon its own beauties and riches, but upon eyes to see and minds to receive them.

Without these, in numbers—eager, receptive, instructable—a building like this becomes only another sepulchre of learning; another neglected and disregarded cenotaph of departed glory.

Dr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress: For the general reader and the ordinary studies of Shakespeare and of the Elizabethan literature the collections at the Library of Congress fully suffice. But for the more refined studies—including critical studies of the texts and of the backgrounds—the Folger collection embraces source material which the Library of Congress never could have accumulated. The service which it can render to the higher reaches of scholarship, a service complementing that rendered by the Library of Congress, will assure Washington a comprehensive resource unsurpassed anywhere; and the additional service which its foundation permits in widening as well as deepening the general understanding and appreciation of Shakespeare should exercise an influence at large in forms which the Library of Congress could not have attempted. Its establishment here, in close proximity to the Library and in intimate sympathy with it (though with no legal interdependence) is, therefore, of very great moment indeed to learning, to general culture and to the enrichment of the National Capital. The selection of Washington for it has a significance comparable to the selection of Washington by Mr. Freer for his collections in the fine arts.

The Right Rev. James H. Ryan, rector, the Catholic University of America: The dedication of the Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library today in Washington, together with the dedicatory exercises observed at the new Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon are events, taken singly or together, of more than usual international significance, and additional proof, where perhaps none is needed, that Shakespeare is still our most brilliant contemporary. One understands better the prophetic force of Ben Jonson's praise: "He was not of an age, but for all time." It was a noble and generous impulse, indeed, that led Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Folger to plan this unique library as a national monument to the glory of Shakespeare and as an incentive to the study of literature and to place it where it stands today amid the very sources of the Nation's official life.

That such an unspeakably rich collection of Shakespearean material, unsurpassed by any of the great collections abroad, should be located here is evidence of the increasing international importance of Washington. The Folger Library honors the city and the country that enshrine it. It will tend not alone to dignify national life, it will render invaluable assistance to artists and scholars. It will particularly enrich institutions of learning that lie close enough to avail themselves of its treasures. Through it Shakespeare may become in some sense the standard we have lacked for our American language.

PHILADELPHIA OPENS NEW LIBRARY TODAY

Furness Memorial Dedication Will Be Held on Campus of U. of Pa.

By HARRIS HULL.

It often has been said that a man must be dead before either he or his work receive due appreciation. To apply this axiom to Shakespeare would doubtless arouse serious objection on the part of some Shakespeare scholars.

Nevertheless, it appears there is some degree of truth in the statement, for today, on the 368th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, we find at least two cities in the East dedicating important libraries to the preservation of his works, to the perpetuation of the study of his writings and to an appropriate commemoration of his literary life.

It also is interesting to note that at Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace, a new memorial thater is to be opened today. "King Henry IV" will be presented for an audience which will include the Prince of Wales.

Dedication of Theater.

Close students of Shakespeare have said that the dedication of the Stratford Theater is one of the four most important events in the town's history. The others are said to be Shakespeare's birth, the opening of the original Memorial Theater in 1879, and its destruction by fire in 1926.

Both of the two libraries, one in Washington and one in Philadelphia, will occupy distinctive places in their respective communities and will provide the two cities with institutions of outstanding cultural value.

In Washington the dedication of the Folger Memorial Library is an event of outstanding importance.

The story of this great project is told on other pages of The Post. Let us, therefore, turn our attention to Philadelphia, where the Horace Howard Furness Memorial, with its priceless collection of Shakespearean and Elizabethan dramatic literature, will be formally opened this afternoon on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania.

Bequeathed to University.

The Furness collections, which will perpetuate the name of one of the world's greatest authorities on Shakespeare, were bequeathed to the University of Pennsylvania by Dr. Horace Howard Furness, jr., as a memorial to his father, Horace Howard Furness, sr.

The exercises will be presided over by Dr. Thomas S. Gates, president of the university, and will be attended by a distinguished group, including members of the family of the late Dr. and Mrs. Furness.

In addition to an address by President Gates, Dr. Josiah H. Penniman and Dr. Felix E. Schelling will speak to the assemblage.

With the collections, which he gave to the university in his own name and in the name of his late wife, Louise Brooks Winsor Furness, the younger Dr. Furness bequeathed sufficient funds for the erection of a new building to house the library, and also a sum for its perpetual maintenance. Both the elder Dr. Furness and his son served as trustees of the University of Pennsylvania.

12,000 Classic Volumes.

The Furness library contains approximately 12,000 volumes, of which about 8,000 are more or less strictly Shakespearean. There are nearly 1,500 works of other dramatists. The remainder of the library is made up of books of a more general character.

In one particular, the Furness collection differs from the usual library of rare books, for it is not a collection of curios but rather the working library of two generations of Shakespeare scholars who purchased books because they needed them for the tasks in which they were engaged, and who carefully catalogued these books.

When the elder Dr. Furness began the gigantic task of compiling a new Variorum edition of the plays of Shakespeare, approximately 40 years ago, the modern appliances for reproduction were unknown, and as a consequence the Furness library contains, in their original editions, the folios, and many of the quartos, of plays and other works contemporary with Shakespeare.

Copies of Folio Editions.

One copy of each of the first four folio editions of Shakespeare may be found in the collection. The first folio is dated 1623. The second edition, that of 1632, was practically a reprint of the first. The third edition, which was published in 1663, was a reprint of the second folio, and included also a number of other plays. The fourth folio edition bears the date of 1685.

Seventeen of Shakespeare's plays had appeared in quarto form before the first folio edition was published in 1623, and of these quarto editions there are a number in the Furness collection.

Twenty-six other quarto editions of a later date than 1623 also appear in the collection, and there is a complete set of practically all the editions of Shakespeare's works from Rowe and Pope to the New Cambridge edition of Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch and Dr. Dover Wilson.

In German and French editions of the collected works of Shakespeare, the Furness Library is particularly rich.

The general library, too, is of practical utility through its reference books. Sharing interest with the literary works in the Furness collection are many rare items of Shakespeareana which the elder Dr. Furness collected.

Other Relics Gathered.

Conspicuous among these are a log from a mulberry tree believed to have been planted by Shakespeare on his estate at Stratford-on-Avon, a pair of buckskin gloves supposed to have been worn by the celebrated dramatist and an excellent copy of the Stratford bust, which Dr. Furness considered the most authentic portrait of Shakespeare.

The Horace Howard Furness Memorial Building is of English Gothic architecture and is in convenient proximity to the University Library Building on the campus. The interior is similar to the room in which Dr. Furness kept his Shakespearean collection in his home at 2034 Delancy street. Eventually it is hoped to reconstruct the entire library building in conformity with the English Gothic style of the Furness Memorial, which was designed by Robert R. McGoodwin in association with Paul P. Cret, university architect.

The new building has sufficient shelf space for about 14,000 volumes in the main library room and provision can be made for a similar number of volumes in the basement.

representative of the glorious legends of the colorful Middle Ages. Here will be shown the paintings, drawings, sculptures, armor, costumes and other mementos of Shakespeare and his time which Mr. Folger acquired by the generous expenditure of the means gained by his labor in the world of commerce and industry.

The east end of the structure houses a Shakespeare Theater, a faithful reproduction of the professional environment which Shakespeare personally knew. The stage is of the unreserved and intimate type; the players will find themselves in direct association with their audiences. Carved balconies occupy three sides of the room. A painted canopy of canvas hangs over the pit. In these respects Shakespeare's own theater is revived, but modern science has made possible the addition of improvements of which the poet never dreamed. For example, there is a lighting system for the production of all the multitudinous effects of color, light and shade practiced by the present-day producer of plays, may be accomplished. The acoustics are perfect. Audiences of 300 may be seated. From time to time, it is expected, lectures, readings and plays will be presented.

The west end of the building provides accommodations for the librarian, the director of research and their staffs; a handsome study, originally intended for Mr. Folger's personal use; vaults for the protection of the more precious volumes and manuscripts, cloakrooms and storerooms. This section of the building has been most skillfully arranged, with the deliberate ideal of practical usefulness as the motivating principle. It was in these particulars that the assistance of Dr. Jameson, Dr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, and other friends was most valuable to Mr. Folger.

$10,000,000 Endowment.

In the basements are the book stacks proper, with a carrying system to the reading room above. The temperature of all parts of the structure is scientifically regulated.

The building and the land upon which it stands have been reported to represent an investment of about $2,000,000. Mr. Folger provided a fund of $10,000,000 for endowment purposes.

The building of the library edifice occupied approximately twenty months. Construction was begun early in 1930 and was pushed steadily forward, day by day, until the late autumn of 1931, since which time the installation of the furnishings and the assembling of Mr. Folger's treasures have been in progress.

Throughout this period the trustees, William Adam Slade, librarian, and Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, director of research, have had the invaluable assistance of Mrs. Folger. When Mr. Folger died, June 11, 1930, Mrs. Folger took over the task of completing his gift. She was particularly qualified to do this since she had been, since the time of their marriage in 1885, the junior partner in the Folger-Shakespeare enterprise. She says: "We had 50 years together, gathering our collection and planning its final arrangement. We worked together all that time. Perhaps our Shakespeare partnership was something like that of Charles and Mary Lamb, brother and sister, or of Charles and Mary Cowden Clarke, husband and wife. Horace Howard and Helen Kate Furness used to say that we were carrying on the tradition as they themselves were, working together for Shakespeare."

Wife's Valuable Assistance.

Through all Mr. Folger's long quest his wife was his unfaltering assistant and associate. As a matter of routine, book dealers throughout the world sent their catalogues and lists to Mr. Folger's office, and Mrs. Folger assumed responsibility for checking in these publications such items as she conceived might be of interest. She perused with patient care many hundreds of such pamphlets, and with Mr. Folger would study the selections she had suggested. She kept a card file of books proposed for purchase and of books actually acquired, and this file, maintained through the years, is now being used by Mr. Slade in the compilation of the official catalogue of the collection. Mr. Slade and Dr. Adams gratefully salute Mrs. Folger's systematic labors toward the proper organization of the treasures her husband and she herself collected together.

Mrs. Folger has supervised the furnishing of the Library building, and in this respect also has been able to represent the donor.

Born Emily C. Jordan, daughter of Edward Jordan, who was solicitor of the Treasury Department in the administrations of President Lincoln, Johnson and Grant, Mrs. Folger comes of old New England stock. She was graduated from Vassar College in the class of 1879, and married Mr. Folger, October 6, 1885. She has known Washington since her girlhood, and has watched with sturdy faith and loyal enthusiasm the steadily increasing beauty of the city. It has been her privilege to add to the Capital her share in the creation of one of its newest monuments and loveliest ornaments. She says, "Had my husband lived to see the completed library building, I am sure he would have been entirely satisfied. It is his dream come alive at last."

It is a logical presumption that the beautiful building to be dedicated today is no less truly Mrs. Folger's own dream come true.

POE AND SHAKESPEARE

By ELISABETH E. POE,
Editor "The Stylus;" Literary Editor, The Washington Post.

In the glorious company of poets and other men and women of letters, who have paid undiminished homage at the shrine of William Shakespeare, none can excel in lofty tribute that expressed again and again by Edgar Allan Poe, America's own master poet.

It is told of Edgar Allan Poe that he could repeat line after line of Shakespeare's poems and plays before he was 5 years old. This was but a natural sequence in the life of a boy who was the child of Thespians. In a very real sense, Edgar Allan Poe was mentally nourished on Shakespeare. The sonorous blank verse of Will of Stratford-on-Avon was as familiar to him as nursery rhymes to other children.

One can not wonder, then, that this love of Shakespeare, fostered at such an early age, remained with Poe throughout his days.

THE Folger-Shakespeare Memorial Library was designed to express, in construction, the character that has made the work of Shakespeare immortal . . . To interpret such ideals necessitated the choice of superior craftsmen, and, with a natural pride in our own selection as general contractors, we engaged associate contractors and craftsmen in the various trades, upon this basis alone.

WORKMEN GLORIED IN REARING LIBRARY

Superintendent Tells of Pride of Craftsmen in Work of Construction.

"All great buildings are created co-operatively. The Folger Shakespeare Library was constructed by men who know how to work together toward a single goal. They were like the old craftsmen of the Middle Ages. They loved their work, they were proud to do their best and they are proud of the result."

In this way William B. Clemmer, a Washington builder for 35 years, summed up his thought about the craft romance of the beautiful building being dedicated today. Mr. Clemmer was superintendent of construction for James Baird Co., Inc., contractors, from the beginning of the project until its completion, a period of twenty months.

"It may seem curious," he says, "but the men people call 'just common laborers' who worked on the library came back from time to time after their own portions were finished to see how the job was getting on. They maintained their interest in it, and they will be happy to know how eminent and celebrated scholars, Government officials and representatives of foreign countries now are praising their handiwork.

Thrill of Telling Posterity.

"You know, there is a certain thrill in being able to take your grandchildren to visit a fine building that you have had a part in making, and being able to say to them, 'Your old granddad worked on this; he helped to make it what it is.'"

Mr. Clemmer has grandchildren of his own, and doubtless he has treated himself to the pleasure he mentions. His two sons, William, jr., and George, worked on the library with him and were his lieutenants through part of the task. They are carpenters, and some of the cabinetwork which delights the visitor to the building must have been done by them. His brother, George Clymer Clemmer, also worked with him.

Mr. Clemmer himself was a link between the donors, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Folger, and the contractor and subcontractors. Through his hands passed quantities of detail of the very highest importance. To him, too, in large part is due the excellent morale among the men. He was available to all parties. A man of impressive serenity of spirit, he was an ideal liasion officer in the circumstances.

But Mr. Clemmer generously declines appreciation of his services. He says the credit should go to Paul P. Cret and Alexander B. Trowbridge, the architects, and to James Baird, president of James Baird Co., Inc., Thomas McKew, former vice president, and Abner Roe, his successor.

Others Meriting Praise.

Others mentioned by Mr. Clemmer as meriting commendation are:

Isaac Hathaway Francis, mechanical engineer; Norman J. Webb, assistant superintendent; William O'Day, engineer; Robert A. Pugh and W. Reid Brande, timekeepers at different periods; Hugh J. Bevell, Ray Heaton and Jesse D. Graham, carpenter foremen at different periods; A. J. Hess, brick foreman, and Walter D. Jones, labor foreman. "These men were alive with the best cooperative spirit; they united to accomplish the perfection of the building.

Mr. Clemmer also praised the several subcontractors, including:

The Georgia Marble Co., which furnished approximately 40,000 cubic feet of white marble for the outer walls; Norman Campbell, who set the marble and stone; the United States Tile and Marble Co., which supplied terrazzo and slate; Erick Janssen, Philadelphia, who was responsible for the woodwork; the Standard Engineering Co., which undertook the plumbing, heating and ventilating; A. W. Lee, who had charge of the plain and ornamental plaster work; Edward W. Minte Co., which did the beautiful painting and decorating work; J. H. Small & Sons, who created the landscape environment of the building, and Westing, Evans & Egmore, Philadelphia, who supplied special furniture. All these firms are located in Washington, except as indicated.

Clemmer's Notable Career.

Fifty-four years of age, sturdy in build, robust in health and thoughtful, philosophical and kindly of temperament. He was born at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., and came to Washington as a boy. His parents were William B. and Eloise Way Clemmer. He married Margaret McCandlish and, besides his two sons, has a daughter, Mrs. Fay Langhenry.

His first construction work was on rows of houses in the suburbs of the Capital. Hard labor by day and hard study by night made him in the course of time one of the best known construction engineers in the East. Heavy foundation enterprises are his specialty, but his name has been identified with practically every sort of structure. Among the buildings in the erection of which he has participated are the George M. Pullman residence, the Tulane, California, Harrington and Helene Apartments, the Munsey Building, the Commerce and Labor Building, Mount Alto Hospital, the Chevy Chase Club, the Capital Garage, the Federal Fuel and Food Buildings, the Taylor Arcade, Cleveland; the Langhorne residence, Upperville, Va.; the Hampton Library, Hampton, Va.; the Hamilton National Bank, Chattanooga, Tenn.; the Georgian Terrace Hotel, Atlanta, Ga.; the First National Bank, Richmond, Va.; the Greenbriar Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and the new Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest. He built the fine R. J. Reynolds Co. office building, Winston-Salem, N. C., and constructed the upper floors of the Independence Trust Co. building, Charlotte, N. C. In the latter enterprise he elevated the roof of the building and added four new stories while 700 tenants remained undisturbed in the twelve lower stories.

Holds It Ideal Structure.

Mr. Clemmer is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Military Society of Engineers and the Washington Society of Engineers.

The reporter found him in his comfortable and attractive home at 2401 Twelfth street northeast. Surrounded by books, pictures and music, he was taking his ease after the day's toil, an authentic American master builder, a man of constructive science, calm and unperturbed, decently glad of a career of service.

He produced the photograph of a small grandson. "Fine boy," he said. "I shouldn't wonder but that he will follow his father and me * * * some day."

Mr. Clemmer beams when he is asked about the Folger Shakespeare Library. It is his ideal building. He will be present this afternoon when the dedication ceremony takes place, and no one in the auditorium will be happier than he.

tions of the poet owned by famous men. Here is George Washington's personal volume of the plays. Here is Lincoln's Shakespeare and volumes which belonged to King George III, John Quincy Adams, David Garrick, Walt Whitman, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Hawthorne, Robert Burns, Shelly, Thackeray, Coleridge, Grey, Boswell, Lowell, Stevenson, Lamb and Eugene Field. Of printings of the plays and sonnets, there are thousands. There are over 80,000 volumes in the library, the largest and choicest collection of Shakespeareana in existence. Here is the first folio edition of 1623 and many another folio treasured above gold, for they are the records of the thoughts of a master spirit. There are 1,400 copies of "Hamlet," 800 of "Macbeth," 500 of "Romeo and Juliet." The list continues in impressive numbers of first editions and those thought to be authentic or as near authentic as any of the editions are. There are other precious books and manuscripts, including the diary of John Wood, 1662-81, vicar of the church that Shakespeare attended, manuscripts of the Jacobean and the Elizabethan times.

The tiny theater on the east end of the library is a marvel of delight. It is a reconstruction of an Elizabethan playhouse, the court yard of an inn. Cunningly contrived to stage plays with the old atmosphere but with modern lighting appliances, dressing rooms and cleverly decorated curtains for the stage and balconies, one can imagine oneself back in the poet's own days.

Without and within, in spirit and in form, the Folger Shakespeare Library is a great work of art.

tractor without competition, because of a very wonderful record built up by that organization for good workmanship plus integrity of purpose. The selection proved to be a very fortunate one. During the first months that followed this selection, Mr. Thomas McKew, the vice president of the company, in charge of the Washington office, was actively identified with the project. Mr. McKew resigned about two years ago and his successor, Mr. Abner Roe, was elected to the office of vice president, and was placed in charge of the work until its completion. He proved to be a wise director who knew how to secure and hold the devotion of a large number of subcontractors. It is said that the spirit on the job was like that of craftsmen, for the men seemed to take pride in being associated with so lovely a building. It may be that the untimely death of Mr. Folger and the wonderful courage and devotion of his wife while continuing the work to completion were matters of compelling interest to these many workers. Certain it is that the building stands not only as a tribute to the Bard of Avon, but as a lasting monument to the generosity and public spirit of Mr. and Mrs. Folger, and as an example of the best type of modern construction obtained, I believe, through the wise administrative methods of the general contractor."

Praise by John Ruskin.

John Ruskin, English critic of the arts, wrote: "The intellectual measure of every man since born, in the domains of creative thought, may be assigned to him, according to the degree in which he has been taught by Shakespeare."

talized by that master artist, William Shakespeare."

The Rev. Dr. ZeBarney T. Phillips, rector, Church of the Epiphany; chaplain, United States Senate: "I believe the dedication of this library is one of the most important and inspiring events in the cultural life and spiritual life of this city, yes, of even the entire country.

"The whole cultural world owes more, in my opinion, to Shakespeare than to any other one man, and it is proper that here in Washington we should dedicate such a fitting memorial to one so closely allied with our literary life."

Dr. Thomas A. Poole, internationally known nose and throat specialist; Oxford College lecturer: "The influence of Shakespeare on our own cultural life today is immeasurable. His writings have come down to us through the years leaving impressions on each generation. These impressions have been passed on to succeeding generations who themselves have read the works of the one great master of English literature and whose lives have been definitely influenced first by the influence he exerted on their predecessors and secondly by their own reading.

"The dedication of this library is a high tribute by the Folger Foundation, to Shakespeare, to the City of Washington and to the United States whose literary life has been so directly influenced by the English master's works."

"Glorious and Permanent."

The Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church: "There is something glorious and permanent about any memorial erected in the City of Washington. We stand at the crossroads of the world. Here the nations meet. There is no other place on this continent where a memorial is observed and visited by so many people.

"The Folger Library bears witness to the dominance of cultural values in our democracy. This Nation is not mad for wealth! There is among us a fine, deep sense of the values of the mind and heart. In a day when all too often we are accused of being materialists this glorious shrine in marble containing the writings of the greatest dramatist in English literature bears witness to our American idealism.

"The praise of every citizen goes to Mr. and Mrs. Folger in establishing such a memorial in this city."

Dr. William Allen Wilbur, provost, George Washington University; authority on Shakespeare's works: "There are two kinds of books: deductive, beginning with principles and ending with phenomena, and inductive, beginning with phenomena and ending with principles. The one deductive book concerning man is the Bible; the greatest inductive book is Shakespeare. And these two books are in mutual agreement.

People of Memory.

"More than 800 men and women of the 37 plays of Shakespeare mingle in consciousness with the actual people of memory until we cease to distinguish them. If all the Shakespeare people should go, it is hard to imagine our loneliness. 'We are such stuff as dreams are made of.'"

Admirer of Shakespeare First to Read in Theater

One afternoon, when the Folger-Shakespeare Library, to be dedicated today, was yet unfinished, there came to the door from a residence across East Capitol street a man with a book under his arm. He asked to be shown through the structure, and his request was granted. Under the courteous guidance of William B. Clemmer, superintendent of construction, he visited the reading room, the exhibition hall, the corridors and offices, and came at last to the Shakespeare Theater in the east end of the building.

"If you have no objection," he said to Mr. Clemmer, "I should like to read from this stage."

Mr. Clemmer consented, and the visitor opened his book and, standing at the edge of the platform, read aloud the lines beginning: "O Opportunity! thy guilt is great!" from "The Rape of Lucrece."

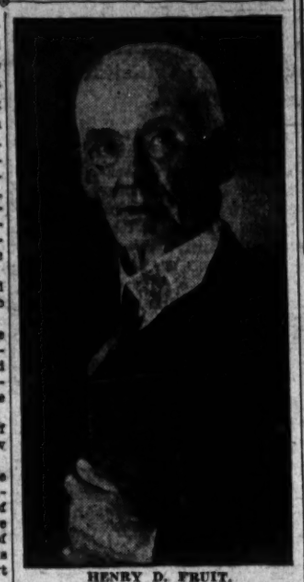
These were the first stanzas of Shakespeare pronounced in the new theater.

The reader was Henry D. Fruit, vice president and librarian of the National Shakespeare Federation, one of the keenest students of Shakespeare in Washington and the possessor of one of the finest collections of books by and about Shakespeare in this part of the country.

Mr. Fruit was born in Grant County, Wis., on Washington's Birthday, 1855. He was the son of Perry and Matilda Lampkins Fruit, natives of Pennsylvania. The first graduate of the State normal school at Plattville, he studied later at Madison and eventually graduated from the law school of Iowa State University, Iowa City. Removing to North Dakota, he was for six years a county judge, and subsequently a Federal commissioner and city justice. Coming to Washington in 1910, he served in the postoffice of the House of Representatives for five years and in the postoffice of the Senate for one year. Just before the World War he toured the capitals of Europe and visited the literary landmarks of the continent and Great Britain. It was at Stratford-on-Avon that he first heard the name of Henry Clay Folger, the donor of the Folger-Shakespeare Library. A guide there told him of Mr. Folger's desire to establish a foundation in tribute to the great poet.

Mr. Fruit says that he has been interested in Shakespeare ever since he was old enough to be interested in anything. His father, he explains, made it a practice to read aloud from the Bible every morning for the instruction of his family and servants, and the music of the scriptures found a place in his heart. From that motivation, he believes, came his affection for the Stratford bard.

Seventy-seven years of age, Mr. Fruit is an incorrigible enthusiast.



HENRY D. FRUIT.

Henry Clay Folger.

As the end drew near he saw it and was not afraid. The long task was over and he was content. He had dreamed and he lived to see his dream take shape, not such shape as a monument of stone or brass, forever fixed in rigid symmetry, but a mighty moving force. It was a stream of power which he himself set in motion, a power of inspiration such as he had himself received, a moving force for culture such as had thrilled through his own life from its awakening until its perfect fruition. . . . —George E. Dimock.

Style Compared to Bible's.

Heine, the German poet who wrote glorious lyrics from a couch of pain, loved Shakespeare ardently. He said, "There is only one writer in whom I find something that reminds me of the directness of style which is found in the Bible. It is Shakespeare."

SHAKESPEARE GROWING

By DR. EDWARD P. CHEYNEY,
Professor of English History, University of Pennsylvania.

There are many men who have had great repute at one time, only to be forgotten or disregarded at another. Shakespeare is one of the few whose reputation has grown continuously from his own time to ours and seems destined to be of even larger proportions. His influence has deepened as well as broadened. The man who today reads or hears Shakespeare for the first time, or repeatedly, for that matter, is more impressed than the man of a century or two centuries ago or of his own time, for it is greater to plumb the depths of human nature for all time than simply for one's own time. We can imagine men in the future realizing with a new surprise, as we do, that Shakespeare still expresses their own thoughts and still awakens instinctive admiration.

SHAKESPEARE HELD AS GREAT AS GREEKS

His Universality Is Praised by Prof. W. W. Hyde of Pennsylvania U.

By DR. WALTER WOODBURN HYDE
Professor of Greek and Ancient History, University of Pennsylvania.

A Greek scholar's choice of a modern poet is generally supposed to be one who is transfused with the Greek spirit—a Racine, Goethe or Shelley, rather than a Wordsworth.

Perhaps this explains such a curious judgment as that pronounced a quarter century ago by Prof. Mahaffy that in the whole range of poetry from the Greeks to us only four masterpieces have had an immortal fascination for men—the "Iliad," the "Agamemnon," the "Inferno" and "Faust." While he allowed that the first two had several rivals almost as perfect, he knew of none in German or Italian to compare with the last two. In this way he paid tribute to the preeminence of the Greeks in literature, the one art that has survived in perfect masterpieces.

Curiously, in this comparison the genial Irish scholar makes no mention of Shakespeare, who is so generally recognized as supreme at once in tragedy, comedy and, as Jebb said of Sophocles, "in the charmed woodlands of fancy"—an Aeschylus, Aristophanes and Theocritus combined.

Quotes Milton.

He quotes Milton, who was so imbued with Greek feeling and whose perfection of style and meter led Matthew Arnold to rank him above all others in molding subsequent English poetry. In the preface to the "Samson Agonistes," a poem whose setting recalls the "Agamemnon" or the "Oedipus Coloneus," in his defense of dramatic poetry against the cavils of Puritanism, he calls Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides "the three tragic poets unequaled yet by any." While elsewhere expressing admiration for the Bard of Avon, Milton here ranks his tragedies below those of the Greeks. And he inveighs against the modern drama, largely because of its "intermixing comic stuff with tragic sadness and gravity, or introducing trivial and vulgar characters." It was for these reasons that Voltaire found fault with the grave-digger in "Hamlet" and the drunken porter in "Macbeth," even though Aeschylus is guilty of similar lapses, as, for example, in his portrayal of the nurse in the "Choephori" and the watchman in "Agamemnon."

Such judgments as these start from the assumption that the Attic stage is supreme and that a poet's greatness is to be measured by his nearness to the spirit of the Greeks who, to their minds, represent the standard of lyric and dramatic art. For yet today to the old-fashioned classicist the times are sadly out of joint.

Hellenic Spirit.

But even when judged by such standards Shakespeare, though his drama is outside the influence of Greek style, is not at fault. For he also manifests the Hellenic spirit, even if, like Keats, he caught that spirit through translations, just as the men of the Renaissance and on through Winckelmann caught the spirit of Greek art through Alexandrian creations and Roman copies rather than through the great masterpieces of the fifth and fourth centuries. Thus in "Antony and Cleopatra" he follows with little change Plutarch's narrative as he read it in North's translation, and in "Romeo and Juliet" he uses the same devices—sleeping potions and concealment in caves—which he knew from Italian novels, which he knew from Italian versions. Thus the fact remains that Shakespeare here and there in his plays felt the Greek spirit, just as Goethe did, for example, in the opening scene of "Faust" where the weary philosopher, eager to die, is mutatus mutandis, an almost exact counterpart to the despairing Medea of Apollonius' epic.

It is not on such grounds that we should now, with the pageants of English and Greek poetry before us, judge the Stratford poet, but rather on something very different, something which transcends the narrow limits of Greek drama, in one word, on his universality. For Shakespeare literally was what a recent popular lecturer called him, "an intellectual ocean into which flowed all the streams of thought." It is this that makes him not merely an English poet, but, like Homer, a world poet belonging to all times and peoples. Still we, of like speech, are privileged to read his plays in the original and not in translation, which latter most of us are compelled to do if we wish to enjoy the fragrance of Mahaffy's masterpieces.

Acknowledged "Master" by Goethe.

Goethe, the father of modern German literature, expressed the generosity of authentic genius when he bowed to Shakespeare as a master. "Whatever can be known of the heart of man," he said, "may be found in Shakespeare's plays."

Indissoluble in Time.

Dr. Samuel Johnson, "the grand Cham of English letters," said of the Bard of Avon, "The stream of time, which is constantly washing the dissoluble fabrics of other poets, passes without injury by the adamant of Shakespeare."

Many Shakespearean Books Available at Public Library

Readers May Borrow From Extensive Collection Consisting of Plays, Biographies and Criticisms; Salient Volumes Are Listed.

By DR. GEORGE F. BOWERMAN.

William Shakespeare is very much alive at the Public Library. Of course, high school and college students must read Shakespeare. But the general reader, too, largely multiplied in the Public Library's constituency, reads voraciously the writings of Shakespeare and books about him and his art. To meet their demands, the Public Library has many volumes of Shakespeare's plays in sets, both single volumes and single volume complete works, which may be borrowed for home use. The collection also includes works of biography and criticism representing the work of scholars over an extended period. The volumes in the following list have been selected both for their excellence and appeal to the general reader.

The works of Shakespeare have been issued in more editions than those of any other author. Since the first folio in 1623, now extremely rare, scholars have carried on extensive research to find the authentic text, nearest to the original as written by Shakespeare. The following are a few of the excellent texts available today:

Clark, W. G., and Wright, W. A., editor. Complete works of William Shakespeare with notes of the Temple Shakespeare, by Israel Gollancz. YD.S. 1c.

A one-volume edition which gives the text of the Globe edition and the notes of the Temple edition, although the introductions to the plays are omitted. There is an index of characters and a glossary. Illustrated with reproductions of paintings.

Craig, W. J., editor. The Oxford Shakespeare. YD.S 1cr.

"This is the easiest to read of the one-volume editions. The text is based on the early quartos and the first folio."

Furness, H. H. New Variorum edition of Shakespeare. 20 v. YD.S 1f.

The most important contribution of American scholarship to Shakespearian literature. The notes, both textual and critical from various authorities, are quoted and compared, hence the name "Variorum Edition."

Gollancz, Israel, editor. Works of Shakespeare. 12 v. (Larger Temple Shakespeare). YD.S 1g.

The text used is that of the "Cambridge" edition. The prefaces to the plays give good explanations of the earliest editions of Shakespeare. Illustrated in color.

Hudson, N. H., editor. Works of Shakespeare. 12 v. (International Edition). YD.S 1h.

An attractive, well annotated edition. The origin of each play is fully discussed.

Neilson, W. A., editor. Complete Dramatic and Poetic Works of William Shakespeare. (Cambridge Edition). YD.S 1n.

"Edited from the text of the early quartos and the First Folio. Contains a brief scholarly introduction to each play with textual notes and a glossary at the end of the volume." A good, readable edition and one worth owning.

Rolfe, W. J., editor. Shakespeare's Complete Works. 40 v. YD.S 1ro.

A convenient edition which can be used in schools, or by individuals. Each play is a separate volume. Notes at the end.

The concordances are used for verifying quotations from Shakespeare, since the principal words are given with the context.

Bartlett, John. New and Complete Works of Shakespeare with a supplementary concordance to the poems. YD.S65b.

Clarke, Mrs. M. C. Complete Concordance to Shakespeare: Being a verbal index to all the passages in the dramatic works of the poet. YD.S65c.

Perpetuation of Shakespeare Work Wins Acclaim of Notables.

not a rigid or lifeless rule, but a flexible pattern of majesty and indescribable beauty. Again, its location here demonstrates strikingly the place Americans have come to take in the progress of Shakespearean scholarship and appreciation, and it marks a new stage in the history of that scholarship itself. It is difficult to praise enough Mr. and Mrs. Folger's knowledge, their alertness, their patience, their courage in assembling this collection and placing it in the Nation's Capital. All professional scholars will also want to thank them for their practical wisdom in locating it so near the Congressional Library.

The Catholic University of America is especially grateful for these benefits. Our faculty and students, present and to come, will have especial reason to thank the princely generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Folger. A similar intention has guided us in acquiring such special collections as the Clementine Library, the personal collection of Pope Clement XI, and the Lima Library, the largest and finest collection of Ibero-American literature, we are told, anywhere in existence.

But the assembling and opening of the Folger Memorial Library is not a mere matter of archeology, it is an enthusiastic forward-looking gesture. In no genius has the gold of humanity been richer than in Shakespeare. Between his banks, the streams of English poetry have run fresh and free. The color and music of his verse have become the color and music of English speech. What he has taught us to regard as significant, we call significant; we know that such and such things, a bank where the wild thyme grows or daffodils that come before the swallow dares, are beautiful because he has first told us so. Here, coming into his own in an especial way in the midst of a great, and also a young and growing Nation, he will, it may be hoped, come to deepen and stimulate the literature now forming among us. So the history of the poet's reputation itself enters upon a new phase. For these books will continue to open the page of an exceedingly rich and varied humanity to a future for which one of our best hopes must be that he will be present as a breathing reality.

We began by saying the twin dedications of Washington and Stratford today are events of more than ordinary international meaning. The interweaving of spiritual ideals that a common literature, and above all a common poetry, presupposes, especially when that poetry is Shakespearean, can not be easily overestimated. It is a sign of health in a distracted world.

Dr Felix E. Schelling, professor of English literature, University of Pennsylvania: It was with genuine regret that I was compelled to refuse an invitation to the dedication of the new Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library in Washington on April 23. There is but one reason that could have prevented my acceptance and that is the circumstance upon that day the Furness Memorial, which consists of the collection of some 12,000 books on Shakespeare and kindred subjects, is to be dedicated here in the University of Pennsylvania.

I can not, under the circumstances, but group together these two memorial openings of the libraries dedicated to our greatest dramatist, and it is suggestive not only of the appreciation of the great poet but of one of the most splendid traits in our American character: that generosity of spirit that desires to share its good things with the public for the good of all. These two libraries are very different. The Folger is that of a connoisseur, of a man of great wealth, who has been able to create what is bound to become a national memorial to the great poet; the other, a more modest collection, is that of a scholar who dedicates his workshop to scholarly uses.

Why is it that from having been merely the most popular of a score of other popular writers for the stage 300 years ago, Shakespeare became a world author, admired and appreciated wherever there is culture and accepted as a standard of our taste? The answer to this depends upon many things. May I stress two?

Shakespeare is a great dramatist; and Shakespeare is a great poet. Drama is a species of fiction, the kind, with the novel, that concerns human beings in their social interrelations. And fiction is the reconstruction of the facts of life on the basis of truth. Facts, even what we call the facts of history and biography, are readily distorted into falsehood. The artist's function is almost exactly the reverse of this, to shape the confusion of actual things into the harmony of truth. Now, Shakespeare does this sort of thing uniformly much better than anybody else who has ever tried his hand at the representation of men and women, whether on the stage or in pages merely to be read; for he has keenest insight into that complex thing that we call human nature, involving as it does the dispositons of men, their conduct, their sincerity and insincerity, their ambitions, temptations, their lapses into mischief and crime, and their heroic risings above themselves. This master dramatist takes a chaotic piece of human story, a melancholy young prince named Hamlet, or a willful and foolish old king named Lear, and in presenting what inevitably happened to such a man under such circumstances, gives us a truer story than any historian is likely to construct out of the facts which constitute what we call history. To the attainment of this inner significance Shakespeare brings, too, an art involving a mastery of language, a fitness of dialogue, an experience in the ways of life, a sense for dramatic and picturesque situation, and an illuminating imagination, all of which again are unequaled in the writings of other men. There are other ways of writing drama and presenting human nature beside Shakespeare's way, but along the royal path that he trod none has gone so far nor shown us so much by the way. It is because we are more interested in the doings of our own human kind than in any other subject and because, however we may wander at times, man clings to truth, that Shakespeare, writing the best and the truest drama that man has yet written, is our accepted greatest author.

There remains to say just a word about poetry, which must surely mean a great deal more than the measuring of words and the jingling of rhymes. Poetry, whatever else may be true of it, must have the power somehow to lift us off the ground of the usual, the ordinary and the expected, a power to fill our spiritual lungs, so to speak, with a purer and more rarefied air than we habitually breathe along the dusty highways of everyday discourse. Shakespeare has this power above almost any one to be named. The dramatist finds in his human material and in the events of their lives those sympathies and harmonies that reveal true relationships; the poet, suffusing all with the rainbow tints of the fancy and the white light of the imagination, discloses to us the beauty and the significance of these relations. To vary the figure, the poet sets the doings and happenings of life to the music of a divine artist. Shakespeare is the greatest of all authors because he adds to a consummate grasp of the significance of life, a vision of the highest human ideals and possibilities.

High Praise of Schlegel.

Schlegel, German romantic poet, praising William Shakespeare, wrote: "In strength of intellect he was a demigod; in profundity of view, a prophet; in all-seeing wisdom, a protecting spirit."

Shakespeare and Radio

By JOHN J. DALY.

HOUSED in the new Folger Shakespeare Memorial, opened for the first time on the bard's birthday, is the world's richest collection of Shakespeare's writings—rare editions, first folios.

At that celebration today, radio and Shakespeare meet. The spoken word and the aerial means of broadcasting it come together. Shakespeare presented his plays without the aid of scenery, and radio broadcasts its dramatics in the Shakespearean manner, without benefit of back drops. Thus an old century and a new come together in a common cause.

Though broadcasting was an unknown quantity in the Elizabethan period, Shakespeare is still supreme in the heyday of radio. Shakespeare essentially was a writer of the spoken word, the master of the spoken word.

Students recognize there are two languages—the written and the spoken. In the written language three-fourths of the words used are of Latin or Greek origin. In the spoken language three-fourths of the words commonly used are of Anglo-Saxon origin.

Shakespeare in his time wrote to be heard. In the Shakespearean theater there was no elaborate scenery, no lighting system, no means like those now employed to put ideas across the footlights. The main stage property in the Elizabethan theater was language—words that paint a mental picture. That is what broadcasting demands. That is what Shakespeare did. The meeting of these two forces—Shakespeare and radio—is the miracle of making two centuries shake hands, the Seventeenth and the Twentieth.

THE name Shakespeare is frightening to some people. Yet Shakespeare never put on airs. Like all great authors, he had the faculty of making the humblest feel at ease in the presence of his work. In his audience were stable boys and hostlers. Only in later years was Shakespeare presented in a high hat. In the final analysis Shakespeare belongs to the masses.

Any Shakespearean play could be put on the air today, almost word for word as the author wrote it 300 years ago—and for this reason: The spoken word then was usually the only messenger carrying a meaning. The spoken word is the soul of radio.

The condition that confronted Shakespeare in his theater was almost identical with the condition that confronts broadcasting today.

The Elizabethan audience could not always see the Shakespearean actors, but the audience could usually hear the words. When any particular point was to be emphasized, Shakespeare directed a leading character down to the front of the stage, where was placed a narrow platform. On that raised rostrum the actor confronted his Elizabethan audience just as a present-day speaker stands before the microphone.

So when the time came to recite that, "All the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players," the player could well have used a microphone—had there been one present.

And Hamlet, too, in his famous soliloquy: "To be or not to be: That is the question"—did not have to act a part, but merely to recite a piece aside from the action of the play. He came down stage, mounted the platform, and there told what was going on in his mind.

The soliloquy could have been done just as well, if not better, in front of a microphone, for Hamlet, in reality, was broadcasting his doubt to the Elizabethan audience.

• • • •

THERE was no need for drawing room furniture to get over the idea Shakespeare had in mind—just as today, in broadcasting, the spoken word must stand or fall of its own weight. There is no back drop.

When a Shakespearean actor, in the reign of Elizabeth, walked to the platform, struck an attitude, and recited his lines, he did no more than an actor now does in a modern broadcasting studio. He used his voice to portray a personality.

That was the theatrical convention in Shakespeare's time—and that is the convention of radio in the present day. The Elizabethan audience understood the words and so does the modern audience, made up of smaller audiences, family groups in their homes.
